PREFACE.

'German Composition' is intended to be a Theoretical and Practical Guide to the Art of Translating English Prose into good and idiomatic German. It is arranged in such a manner that students who have reached the fiftieth Lesson of the 'German Manual' may commence and advantageously use it conjointly with that book. Being complete in itself, it is likewise adapted for the use of any other students who, possessing a knowledge of German Accidence and having had some practice in reading German Prose, wish to acquire the Art of Translating English Prose into German.

The book is calculated to serve the requirements of the B.A. Examinations of the London and Victoria Universities, the Competitive Examinations for the Civil and Military Service, the Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations for Senior Students, the Examination of the College of Preceptors for First Class Candidates, and of similar Public Examinations—all of which require the candidates to translate English Prose into German.

I may conscientiously say that I have done all I could to make the book attractive and useful. The selection of the Extracts has been made with the greatest care directly from the works of the various authors, and is the result of many years' attentive reading and research. The pieces have been almost exclusively chosen from the works of the best modern English and American writers, and, it is hoped, will be found as interesting and instructive as they are well adapted for translation into German. They represent all the various styles of English Prose Composition, and contain a great variety of subjects, as a glance at the various pages will show; whilst the fact that the specimens, with only one or two exceptions, are no mere fragments, but complete pieces in themselves, must necessarily add to their value.

The Biographical Sketches of famous men and women, which at intervals appear in the Notes and are always given in German, form a special feature of the book. (Comp. S. 127, N. 1; S. 138, N. 12; and

S. 156, N. 1.) They are of various lengths, according to their importance, and have been written to add to the interest of the work and at the same time to offer the student some useful material for reading German.

With respect to the help given in the Notes, I may state that I have proceeded with the utmost consideration and care. The great object I placed before me was to show, by precept and example, that a good translation cannot be produced by the mere mechanical process of joining together a number of words, as the dictionary may offer them at first sight: but that it requires great thought and analytic power; that every sentence, nay, almost every word, has to be weighed and considered with respect to its true bearing upon the text; and that a good rendering is only possible when the translator has grasped the true meaning of the passage before him.

I have endeavoured to give neither too little nor too much help, but whenever I found a difficulty which a student of average ability could not fairly be expected to overcome, I have stepped in to solve it. For this purpose I have made use of English equivalents and periphrases and of Rules and Examples, and in cases where neither of these helps was considered practicable I have not hesitated to give the German rendering of the word or passage to be translated. The last mode of procedure, however, I have adopted only when I found that the dictionaries in ordinary use were insufficient, as is so frequently the case, and more especially with respect to idiomatic passages, which it is impossible to render successfully unless the translator is well versed in both languages, and at the same time has undergone a thorough training in the Art of Translating English into German, which the present volume professes to teach. The plan of indicating the rendering of words and phrases by means of English equivalents and periphrases must be of evident advantage to the learner, for it teaches him how to think and analyse, whilst it leads him to render the word or phrase correctly without giving him the translation itself.

The Notes of Sections 1 to 150 and the Appendix contain in a concise and lucid form almost all the rules relating to the German Syntax, and in most instances these rules have been illustrated by practical examples and models. The Appendix gives in thirty-seven paragraphs the Rules referring to the Construction, the use of the Indicative, Subjunctive (or Conjunctive), and Conditional Moods, which for convenient reference have been reprinted from my 'German Grammar,' and to facilitate the student's work I have added an Index to the Grammatical Rules and Idiomatic Renderings.

In a work containing such a great number of Extracts as the present, there are, of course, many idioms and passages which may be correctly translated in various ways, and I can therefore scarcely hope that all my renderings will meet with the approval of every German scholar. I may, however, confidently affirm here that I have devoted much thought and labour to this publication, and that I have tried with all my heart to make it acceptable to teachers and students alike.

In conclusion I respectfully tender my best thanks to the publishers— Messrs. W. and R. Chambers, Edinburgh, Chapman and Hall, Longmans and Co., Sampson Low and Co., Macmillan and Co., London. Mr. Murray, Messrs, T. Nelson and Sons, Smith, Elder, and Co., and Stanford and Co., and to the Editors of-for their very kind permission to make use of the Copyright Extracts in this publication, and for the cordial manner in which they granted my request.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

A second edition of this volume having been called for, I wish to express my cordial thanks to the numerous colleagues and friends who adopted it as a text-book for their classes.

As I am engaged in preparing, besides this book, a third edition of two other volumes of my 'German Course,' and, at the request of the Delegates of the University Press, also a Key to this volume. 'German Composition,' I think the present moment opportune for introducing the reformed German spelling which, by Government regulations, has been taught in German schools for the last five or six years, and is becoming more generally used from year to year in friendly intercourse, papers, periodicals, literature, and commercial correspondence. It is but fair that the students of German in this country should be taught to spell in the simplified way now universally practised by their German contemporaries. They will at least have nothing to unlearn then; and, although the present spellingreform may be considered but a compromise between the older and the younger schools, there being a tendency in the younger men to go even further than their older colleagues in the simplification of our orthography and to make it still more phonetic and uniform in principle, it will take a long time before the Government will be moved to make modifications of any importance in their regulations. I confidently trust that the great trouble I have bestowed upon the revision of the present edition will be appreciated by teachers and students alike. It will easily be seen that the alterations of the orthography in the various books forming this 'German Course' must have necessarily entailed a very considerable additional expense; but the publication having met with much approval on the part of the public, I was anxious to leave nothing undone in order to adapt it in every respect to the requirements of the times and to make it still more useful.

On examination it will be seen that the changes made are not so many as may be supposed, and that the principles underlying the German spelling-reform are simple and easy to understand.

At the end of the Appendix will be found a Synopsis of the principal changes the German spelling has undergone, accompanied by Examples and a few Exceptions to the general rules.

HERMANN LANGE.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING THE BOOK.

Each Section should first be prepared for viva voce translation, with the assistance of the Notes in class; then translated in writing; carefully corrected; and finally practised, by comparing the English text with the corrected German version, FOR A SECOND viva voce TRANSLATION until the student is able to translate the English text, without the assistance of the Notes in class, just as readily into correct German as if he were reading from a German book.

The Grammatical Rules given in the Notes should always be carefully studied, and the reading of previously given Rules and the various paragraphs of the Appendix referred to in the text should never be omitted.

The strict and conscientious observance of these directions is earnestly requested.

THE SECOND viva voce TRANSLATION without the assistance of the Notes in class, as explained above, is especially of the greatest importance to the student's progress in the Art of Translating English into German, and is the only way of mastering all the idiomatic and syntactic difficulties contained in the Lessons and explained in the foot-notes. It commends itself likewise as the best way of committing to memory the great number of words and the various forms of construction occurring in the text, and will gradually, but surely, lead to the acquisition of a good and thorough German style of writing.

To be quite clear the Author ventures to propose the following PLAN OF WORKING.

FIRST LESSON.

Prepare for viva voce translation Sections 1 and 2, WITH the assistance of the Notes in class.

SECOND LESSON.

Translate in Writing Sections 1 and 2; and prepare for viva voce translation Sections 3 and 4, WITH the assistance of the Notes in class.

THIRD LESSON.

PREPARE FOR FLUENT AND CORRECT viva voce TRANSLATION Sections 1 and 2, WITHOUT the assistance of the Notes in class, by comparing the English text with the corrected German version; translate in Writing Sections 3 and 4; and prepare for viva voce translations Sections 5 and 6, WITH the assistance of the Notes in class.

FOURTH LESSON.

PREPARE FOR FLUENT AND CORRECT viva voce TRANSLATION Sections 3 and 4, WITHOUT the assistance of the Notes in class, by comparing the English text with the corrected version; translate in Writing Sections 5 and 6; and prepare for viva voce translation Sections 7 and 8, WITH the assistance of the Notes in class:

Then proceed in the same way throughout the book.

It need scarcely be added that the quantity of work pointed out here may be diminished or increased according to circumstances, and that the longer sections towards the end of the book will in most cases require the former course.

The frequent attentive study of German literature will be a powerful auxiliary to this book in imparting the Art of Translating English Prose into German.

GERMAN COMPOSITION.

- Words which, in the English text and in the periphrases of the English text, are printed in Italics, must not be translated.
- When two words are separated by a dash (—) in the Notes, they represent the first and last word of a whole clause in the English text, and the rendering refers to the clause thus indicated.
- 3. When two or more words are separated by dots (...) in the Notes, the rendering refers to those words only.
- 4. The sign = is used in the meaning of: 'is equivalent to'.
- 5. As a rule, the periphrases are given in correct English construction.

Section 1.

A GOOD MAXIM1.

My maxim is: never to begin ² a book without finishing ⁸ it, never to consider ⁴ it finished without ⁵ knowing it, and to study ⁶ it with ⁷ a whole mind.—Sir Thomas Buxton.

1, Grundfaß, m. 2, to begin, an fangen. When the Infinitive is used either subjectively or objectively, it is generally preceded by the preposition 311, and is called Supine. Comp. S. 78, N. 14, 1. To form the Supine Present of compound separable verbs, like an fangen, we must place the preposition 311 between the separable prefix and the verb. The Supine must be used here. See App. § 1. 3, to finish, beendigen. The Supine is generally used for rendering the English Gerund (i.e. the verbal in -ing) when the latter is governed by a preposition, though, sometimes, this form may be rendered by the help of the subordinative conjunction baß and a finite verb (i.e. one with a personal termination); as—

He judges without understanding anything about the matter.

Er neteilt, ohne etwas von ber Sache zu verstehen, or ohne daß er etwas von ber Sache versteht.

Use the Supine, which is always to be placed at the end of the clause. 4, To consider a thing finished, eine Sache als beendigt betrachten. The pronoun 'it' should begin the clause. See App. § 2. 5, without—it, chue mit dem Inhalt desselben vertrant zu sein. 6, to study, studie'ren. 7, with—mind with undivided attention.

Section 2.

WHAT IS ETERNITY?

The following question was 1 put in writing 2 to a boy 3 in the deafand-dumb school 4 at Paris: "What is eternity?" "It is the life-time of the Almighty," was the answer.—Rev. R. K. Arvine. 1, Here the verb is in the Passive Voice. Remember that the German Passive Voice is formed by the auxiliary worden. The verb is in the Passive Voice whenever the subject is suffering the action expressed by the verb; as—

The castle was built in the year Das Schloß wurde im Jahre 1609 erbaut.

To put a question to a person, einem eine Frage ver legen. 2, in writing, idriftlid, which place before the p. p. (App. § 1). 3, boy = pupil. 4, Tanbatummenanitalt, f.; render 'in the' by the gen. of the def. art.; at = in.

Section 3.

THE ACTION 1 OF 2 WATER.

The action of water on ³ our food ⁴ is very important. There ⁵ would be no carrying of food into the system but for the agency of water. It dissolves everything ⁶ that ⁷ we take ⁸, and nothing ⁹ that we take as food can ¹⁰ become nutriment that ¹¹ is not dissolved in water.—Dr. Lankester.

1, 'action', here = operation, Wirfung, f. 2, Use the gen. of the def. art. The definite article is always required before nouns representing the whole of a given class, and before abstract nouns taken in a general sense. 4, food = victuals, Epcifen, pl. 5, This sentence must be construed in a somewhat different way; say: 'Without the agency (Bermittelung, f.) of water, no food (Nahrung, f.) would be conveyed into the body,' murbe bem Rörper feine Nahrung zu'geführt werden. 6, everything = all. here was. The indefinite relative pronoun was is the pronoun generally required after the indefinite numerals alles, etwas, manches, nichts, viel, and wenig, after the indefinite demonstrative pronoun bas, and also after a superlative used substantively; as Das Schönste, was ich habe. 8, 'To take', when used of food, may be rendered by effen, trinfen, or genießen, which latter verb should be used here. 9, 'nothing—food', may be briefly rendered by 'feine 10, can—nutriment = can serve as nutriment (Gruäß): genoffene Speise'. rung, f.). The verb bienen requires the prep. zu, which governs the dat. and must here be contracted with the def. art. into jur; see N. 2. water = before (effe, see App. § 17) the same (f.) is dissolved in water.

Section 4.

OF WHAT USE IS IT?

When ² Franklin made his discovery of the identity ⁸ of lightning ⁸ and electricity ³, it ⁴ was sneered at ⁵, and people asked: "Of what use is it?" To ⁶ which his apt reply was: "What is the use of a child?—It may ⁷ become a man!"—S. SMILES.

1, Of—it, Bezin nüßt es?

2, 'When', referring to definite time of the Past, must always be rendered by 'als'.

3, of the identity, wen der Spentität, f.; see S. 3, N. 2.

4, When the agent from which the action proceeds is not mentioned, the English Passive Voice is often rendered by a reflective verb, or by the indefinite pronoun man and a verb in the Active Voice; as—

At last the book was found. Enblich { fand fich man } bas Buch.

Say 'people (man) sneered at it.' 5, A. To sneer at something, über etwas potten; B. 'at it' = there at, darüber. The English pronouns 'it', 'them',

'that', and 'those', dependent on a preposition governing in German the dative or accusative, are generally to be rendered by the pronominal adverb 'ba' in combination with a corresponding preposition. This is always the case when 'it' and 'that', in connection with a preposition are used indefinitely, and frequently when either of these pronouns refers to a noun representing an inanimate object or an abstract idea. The letter r is inserted between the adverb ba and the preposition, whenever the latter begins with a vowel.

6, To—was = Upon this (Gierauf) he (inverted constr., see App. § 14) gave the following striking (treffent) answer.

7, may = can; to become a man, jum Manne merten.

WEALTH1.

Wealth, after all³, is ² but a relative thing: for he who has ⁴ little, and wants ⁵ still less, is richer than he who has much, and wants still more.—Rev. C. Cotton.

1, wealth, Meichtum, m., see S. 3, N. 2.

2, When the subject, which may be preceded by its attributes, occupies the first place in a principal clause, either the copula or the verb must follow immediately.

3, after all ... but, bed, immer nur; a—thing, envas Melatives.

4, to have=to possess.

5, 'to want', here behinfen.

Section 6.

MENDELSSOHN IN BIRMINGHAM.

When ¹ Mendelssohn, on ² the first performance of his ³ 'Elijah' in Birmingham, was about ⁴ to enter ⁵ the orchestra, he ⁶ said laughingly to one of his friends and critics ⁷: "Stick ⁸ your claws into me! Don't tell ⁹ me what you like, but ¹⁰ what you don't like!"—ATHENŒUM.

1, See S. 4, N. 2.
2, The preposition 'on', signifying 'on the occasion of', must be rendered by 'bei'. 'Performance', Aufführung, f.
3, Use the gen. of the def. art.; Elijah, Glias.
4, 'to be about', im Begriff fein. 'To be about' may also be rendered by the auxiliary verb of mood wolfen and the infinitive of another verb; as—

I was just about to leave, when the letter arrived.

Ich mar gerabe im Begriff abzureisen (or Ich wollte gerabe abreisen), als ber Brief ankam.

5, 'to enter', tetreten, see S. 1, N. 2.
6, Since the subordinate clause precedes the principal clause, the construction of the principal clause must be inverted, see App. § 15.
7, to—critics, say 'to a friend and critic', Regenfent, m.
8, 'Stick—me!' This metaphor must be rendered freely by: Raden Sie mich nur tüchtig an!
9, tell=say; to like=to please, with the dat. of the person.
10, The co-ordinative conjunction 'but' must be rendered by 'fondern', when, after a negative statement, the subsequent clause expresses an idea altogether contrary to that of its antecedent.

Section 7.

TO FORGIVE IS 1 TO FORGET.

"I can forgive, but I cannot forget," is 2 only another way of saying: "I will not forgive." A wrong once forgiven 3 ought 4 to be like 5 a cancelled note 6, torn in two and burned up, so 7 that it never can be shown against the man.—Rev. H. W. Beecher.

1, 'to be', here = to signify, heißen.

2, is — saying = signifies only in (mit) other words. 'Das Bert' has two plural forms with a different meaning to each: he Worter, single, unconnected words; he Borte, words connected into speech.

3, A. Whilst the English Perfect Participle (commonly called Past Participle) is placed both before and after the noun it qualifies, the German Past Participle used attributively, as a rule, precedes the qualified noun; as—

We met with a ship bound for Bre- Bir trasen ein nach Bremen be- men. Ptimmtes Schiff.

B. Clauses containing a Perfect Participle, however, may also be rendered by the help of a relative pronoun. Thus rendered, the preceding sentence would read:

Bir trafen ein Schiff, welches nach Bremen bestimmt war;

but the first rendering is certainly more concise than the second, and it is to be preferred in all cases where the attributive construction would not be too lengthy. 'A wrong once forgiven', say 'A forgiven wrong', and mark that: When Participles are used attributively, and precede the noun they qualify, they must be inflected like adjectives. 4, render 'ought' by the imperfect of follow. 5, like, wie. 6, note, Schulbschein, m.; to tear in two, zerre gen; to burn up, verbreu'nen. According to the rule given in N. 3, the participles of these two verbs have to be placed before the noun 'note', which they qualify. 7, 'so—man', say 'which never again can be used against the debtor'. According to the hint given in S. 2, N. 1, the verb is in the passive voice, and since the clause is a subordinate one, the verbs must stand at the end of the clause. Place the p.p. first, and the copula (can) last.

Section 8.

WHAT IS CAPITALP

What is capital? Is 1 it what a man has? Is 2 it counted (App. 31) by 3 pounds and pence, stocks 4 and shares 5, by houses and lands 6? No! Capital 7 is not what a man has, but what a man is. Character 8 is 9 capital; honour 10 is capital.—Rev. Dr. Macduff.

1, 'Is—has?' say 'Does it consist in that which (see S. 3, N. 7) we possess?' The prep. 'in' here governs the dat. Read again S. 4, N. 5, B, and notice that, when the demonstrative pronouns 'that' and 'those' are followed by a relative pronoun, they cannot be rendered by the adverb 'ba' in combination with a preceding preposition; as—

We laughed at that which (or at what) Wir sachten über bas, mas Sie und you told us.

2, See S. 2, N. 1; 'to count', here schützen.

5, Aftien.

6, Ländereien.

7, 'Capital—is'. The literal translation of this sentence would read very awkwardly in German, say 'Our capital does not consist in that which we possess, but (S. 6, N. 10) in that which we are.'

8, Character=A good reputation.

9, 'is', here ift.

Section 9.

A GOOD RULE 1.

A French minister, who was alike 2 remarkable 3 for his 4 despatch of business and his constant 5 attendance at places of public amusement, being ⁶ asked how he contrived to combine both objects, replied: "Simply ⁷ by never postponing till to-morrow what should be done ⁸ to-day."—S. SMLES.

1, Lebenstegel, f. 2, 'alike ... and', sowohl ... wie auch. 3, to be remarkable for something, sich durch etwas aus zeichnen. 4, his—business, schnelle Erledigung seiner Auntsgeschäfte. 5, constant—amusement, regelmäßiger Besind öffentlicher Bergnügungsorte. The prep. durch, which requires the acc., must be repeated at the beginning of this clause. 6, 'being—replied'; this sentence requires an entirely different construction in German, say 'answered upon the question, how (App. § 16) he made it possible to combine both (neuter sing.)'. To combine, vereinigen. The verb 'to make' must be placed in the Present Subjunctive, since the clause contains an indirect question. Read carefully App. §§ 28 and 30. 7, Simply—to-morrow, Gussaburch, daß ich nie auf mergen verschiebe. 8, 'to do', here erseigen. See S. 2, N. 1, and place the verbs in the order pointed out in S. 7, N. 7.

Section 10.

ENGLAND UNDER THE RULE 1 OF 2 QUEEN VICTORIA.

The peace, the freedom, the happiness ³, and the order which Victoria's rule guarantees ⁴, are ⁵ part of my birthright as an Englishman, and I bless ⁶ God for my share ⁷! Where else shall ⁸ I find such liberty ⁹ of action, thought, speech ¹⁰, or ¹¹ laws which protect me so well ¹²?—W. M. Thackeray.

1, rule = reign. 2, Use the gen. of the def. art. The definite article is used in German before names of persons when preceded by an adjective or a common name; as—

Der arme Frit! Der Kaifer Wilhelm. Poor Fritz! Emperor William.

3, happiness = well-being, Mohlfahrt, f. 'Victoria's rule', say 'the reign of Queen Victoria'.

4, to guarantee, genühren.

5, are part = form a part.

6, I bless = I thank.

7, share = lot.

8, shall = can.

9, Freiheit tee Harticles, possessive adjective pronouns, and other determinative words must be repeated when they are used in reference to several nouns of different gender or number, whilst in English they are only required before the first noun.

10, Insert 'and' before 'speech', Rete, f., and place the verb finten immediately after that noun.

11, Substitute the words 'and where' for the word 'or'.

12, gut.

Section 11.

CONCENTRATION OF POWERS.

The weakest living creature ¹, by ³ concentrating his powers on a single object, can ² accomplish ³ something. The strongest ⁴, by dispersing his over many, may fail to accomplish anything ⁵. The drop, by continually ⁵ falling ७, bores ⁶ its passage through the hardest rock. The hasty ⁵ torrent rushes ¹⁰ over it with hideous uproar, and leaves no trace behind.—T, CARLYLE.

1, creature, Defen, n.; strengthen the superlative of the adjective by placing 'after' before it, forming one compound expression, analogous to: Die afters ichönne Blume, the finest flower (of all).

2, The copula 'can' must be placed immediately after the subject and its attributes, as has been pointed out in S. 5, N. 2.

3, 'by concentrating his powers', burch Kongentration seiner Kräste; to accomplish something, emus austante bringen. Use the adverbial expression 'at least' before 'something', which will give more force to the German rendering.

4, The strongest—fail, Dem Stärsten hingegen wird est burch Zersplitterung seiner Kräste nicht gesingen.

5, anything, and nur das Geringste.

6, to bore one's passage, sich einen Meg behren. Place the verb according to S. 5, N. 2; the adverbial clause 'by continually falling' must follow it.

7, To render 'falling', form a noun of the verb 'fallen'. The German language makes frequent use of the Infinitive Present of verbs to form abstract nouns, whilst the English language uses the Verbal in -ing for that purpose. Such nouns are always of the neuter gender; as das Gehen, going; das Gesen und Trinsen, eating and drinking.

8, continual, unabsässig, adj.

9, hasty, ungestüm; torrent, Strom, m.

10, to rush over something, über etwas himweg'stirgen; 'rushes—uproar', say 'rushes with hideous (eutsestich) uproar (Getöse) over the same.'

Section 12.

COOLNESS1.

Of the Duke of Wellington's ² perfect coolness on ³ the most trying occasions, Colonel Gurwood gives ⁴ this instance. He was ⁵ once in great danger of suffering ⁶ ship-wreck. It was bed-time ⁷ when (S. 4, N. 2) the captain of the vessel came to him, and said: "It will soon be all over ⁸ with us!" "Very well," answered the Duke, "then I (App. § 14) need not (App. § 12) take off ⁹ my boots!"—W. C. HAZLITT.

1, Kaltblütigfeit, f.

2, Place the genitive after the governing noun, and say: 'Of (Ben) the perfect coolness of the Duke of Wellington.' Perfect = great.

3, 'on—occasions' = in the most dangerous (gegathwell) situations.

4, to give = to relate. See App. § 14 for the construction. 'This instance' = the following example.

5, 'to be', here fid befinden.

6, Construe according to S. 1, N. 3.

7, Édhafenszeit, f.

8, vorüber.

9, to take off, aus'ziehen, see S. 1, N. 2.

Section 13.

RELIGIOUS TOLERATION 1.

When ² certain persons attempted ³ to persuade Stephen ⁴, King of Poland, to constrain ⁵ some of his subjects, who ⁶ were of a different religion, to embrace ⁷ his, he said ⁸ to them: "I ⁹ am king of men, and not of ¹⁰ consciences ¹¹. The ¹² dominion of conscience belongs exclusively to God."—Rev. R. K. Arvine.

1, Religionabulbung, f. 2, 'When', here? 3, attempted to = would, impf. of wellen. 4, say 'the king Stephen of Poland'. König Stephen von Batheri regierte von 1576-1586. 5, zwinzen. Place the verb after the relative clause, since the relative pronoun should follow its antecedent as closely as possible. 6, 'who—religion', say 'who belonged to another religion'. 7, to embrace = to accept. 8, 'to say', here 'to reply', entgegnen. 9, I—men=I rule (herrîhen) over men. 10, of = over. 11, This noun is not used in the plural in German. See S. 3, N. 2. 12, 'The—God', say 'God alone rules over consciences (sing.)'.

Section 14.

HOW HUGH MILLER BECAME A2 GEOLOGIST.

Hugh Miller's ³ curiosity ⁴ was ⁵ excited by the remarkable traces of extinct ⁶ sea-animals in ⁷ the Old Red Sandstone, on which he worked as a quarryman. He inquired ⁸, observed, studied, and became a geologist. "It was the necessity", said he, "which made ⁹ me a quarrier, that taught me to be a geologist."—S. Smiles.

1, Hugh Miller wurde am 10^{ten} Oftober 1802 von armen Cltern zu Eromarth in Schottland gedoren. Er arbeitete 15 Jahre als gemeiner Steinbrecher, beschäftigte sich sedog während sener Zeit mit litterarischen und wissenschaftlichen Arbeiten, besonders mit der Geologie, der er ganz neue Bahnen eröffnete. Durch seine Werke hat er sich in der Wissenschaft einen unsterblichen Namen erwerben, und als er am 24^{sten} Dezember 1856 starb, verlor Schottland in ihm einen seiner besten Schue, und die Geologie einen ihrer beredtesten und ergebensten Lehrer.

2, Contrary to English construction, the indefinite article is not used in German in stating the business or profession of a person; as—

He wants to be a soldier.

Er will Solbat merben.

Exception: When the noun denoting the business or profession is preceded by an adjective, the indefinite article is used in German, as in English:

His father was a clever physician. Sein Vater war ein geschickter Arzt.

3, When a Proper Name is used in the Genitive Case, it is generally placed before the governing noun, as in English: Schiller's poems, Schiller's Gedickte.

4, Wißbegierde, f.

5, How is the Passive Voice to be recognised? 'To excite', here schiaft an'reget; construe accord. to S. 13, N. 5.

6, aud gestorben.

7, in — Sandstone, in einem alten Notsandsteilager; on which = where.

8, 'to inquire', here Nachsersshungen ansellen.

9, 'to make' requires here the prep. zu contracted with the def. art.; 'that—geologist', machte mich schließlich auch zum Geologen.

Section 15.

EXTREMES MEET 1.

When Diogenes, during the famous festival ² at Olympia ³, saw ⁴ some young men of Rhodes arrayed ⁵ most magnificently, he (App. § 15) exclaimed smiling: "This is pride!" And when, afterwards ³, he met ⁶ with some Lacedæmonians in a mean ⁷ and sordid ⁸ dress, he said: "And this is also pride!"—Rev. R. K. Arvine.

1, Die Ertreme berühren sich.

2, the festival at Olympia, die Ohympischen Keste. Diese berühnten Keste, anch Olympische Spiele genannt, wurden in jedem fünsten Jahre am ersten Bollmond nach der Sonnenwende (Amfang Jusi) dei Olympia zu Edven des Zeus geseiert. Sie danerten fünst Tage und bestanden in Wettrennen (zu Wagen, zu Pferd und zu Kus) und in gymnastischen Spielen aller Art.

3, Contrary to English practice, the comma is, as a rule, not used in German to enclose adverds or adverdial clauses of time, manner, and place.

4, 'to see', here erklisten, which place after 'Rhodes'; young men = youths; 'of', here aus; Rhodes, Nhodus.

5, 'arrayed — magnificently'. Turn these words into a relative clause, and say: 'which were most magnificently (auss prächtigste) arrayed (schmüscen)', according to the rule given in S. 7, N. 3, B. 6, to meet with a person, einem begegnen. Place the subject immediately after 'when'. The Lacedæmonian, der Lazedämenier.

7, armselig.

8, zerimpt

POOR PAY 1.

When the Duke of Marlborough, immediately after the battle of Blenheim², observed³ a soldier leaning⁴ pensively on the butt-end of his musket, he accosted⁵ him thus: "Why so pensive⁶, my friend, after so⁷ glorious a victory?" "It may be glorious⁸," replied the brave fellow, "but ⁹ I am thinking that all the human blood I ¹⁰ have spilled this day ¹¹ has only ¹² earned me fourpence."—Rev. R. K. Arvine.

1, Armsetige Bezahlung.

2, Die Schlacht bei Blindheim (Engl. 'Blenheim') wurde am 13^{ten} Angust 1704 von dem Herzeg von Marsborough in Berbindung mit dem östereichischen Prinzen Eugen gegen die Franzosen gesochten. Blindheim ist ein steines baperisches Dorf bei Höchstädt, an der Donan. Die Schlacht wurde zu gunsten der Berbündeten entschieden, und der Perzeg von Marsborough erhielt sür diesen glänzenden Sieg von der Königin Anna ein prachtvolles Schloß (Blenheim House) bei Woodstof in Orfordssire zum Geschen.

3, Place the verd 'observed' after the noun 'soldier'.

4, 'leaning—musket'. This passage must be changed into a relative clause, thus: 'who leant (sich stügen) pensively (gedanstenvoll) upon the butt-end (Kosku, m.) of his musket', for: Sentences containing a Present Participle which qualifies a preceding noun or pronoun, are generally turned into relative clauses; as—avoid the repetition of the same word.

The teacher, noticing the boy's talent, applied to the prince on his behalf.

Der Lehrer, welcher bas Talent bes Rnaben bemerfte, verwendete fich für ihn bei bem Fürsten.

5, to accost, aureben; thus, folgenbermaßen.

7, so ... a, ein ... fo.

8, Make the word 'glorious' emphatic by placing it at the head of the clause, and see App. § 14. Insert the adverb 'wohl' between the subject and the verb 'be', which will render the sentence more idiomatic.

9, but — thinking, aber ich bebenfe.

10, Supply the relative pronoun 'which', for: The relative pronoun can never be omitted in German; to spill, vergießen.

11, this day = to-day.

12, This work has only earned me a shilling, bieße Arbeit hat mir nur einen Schilling eingebracht.

Section 17.

THE WORLD IS A LOOKING-GLASS.

We ¹ may be pretty certain that persons ² whom all the world treat ill, deserve entirely ³ the treatment they ⁴ get. The world is a looking-glass, and gives ⁵ back to every man the reflection of his own face. Frown ⁶ at it, and ⁷ it will in turn look sourly upon you; laugh ⁸ at it and with it, and ⁹ it is a jolly, kind companion ¹⁰.—W. M. THACKERAY.

1, We—certain. Wir fönnen und ziemlich sicher barauf verlassen.

2, persons—ill = those who have to suffer from everybody.

4, they get, welche ihnen zuteil wirb.

5, to give back the reflection = to reflect, zurüd'wersen; every man, jeder; face = image.

6, to frown at a person, here 'einen mürrisch autblicken'; use the second pers. sing.

7, and you, und sie wird and auf bich verdeissich bernie'derschauen.

8, 'Laugh at it' seems to be used here in the sense of: 'Smile at it'. Say: 'Smile at it, laugh with it', etc. 'To smile at a person', here 'einen freundlich au'blicken'.

9, 'and—is', say: 'and it will be for thee (bir)'.

10, Gesährtin.

Section 18.

GIVE 1 THE HONOUR TO GOD ALONE.

A lady applied ² to the worthy philanthropist ³ Richard Reynolds on behalf of a little orphan boy. After he ⁴ had (App. § 17) given liberally ⁵, she said: "When ⁶ he is old enough, I (App. § 15) will teach ⁷ him to thank his benefactor." "Stop ⁸," said the good man, "thou art mistaken ⁹. We do not thank the clouds for rain (S. 3, N. 2). Teach ¹⁰ him to look higher, and thank Him ¹¹ who giveth both the clouds and the rain."—Rev. R. K. Arvine.

1, Say 'Give God alone the honour'. 2, to apply to a person on behalf of somebody, sich bei einem für jemand verwenden. 3, Menschenstrenub, m. 4, To avoid ambiguity turn the pron. 'he' here by 'Reynolds'. 5, 'liberally', here reichlich. 6, The conjunction 'when', used in the sense of 'whenever', and referring to indefinite time, must be rendered by 'wenn' (compare S. 4, N. 2); as—

When (whenever) my old teacher came to Hamburg, he always stayed with me. Denn mein alter Lehrer nach Hamburg fam, wohnte er steis bei mir.

7, The verb 'lehren', to teach, requires the accusative of the person. 'Render the sentence 'I— benefactor' by 'I will teach him to be thankful to his benefactor'.

8, Halt'!

9, to be mistaken, fich irren.

10, Teach—higher, Lehre ihn höher blicken.

11, The pronoun 'Him' is here used as a demonstr. pron.; 'both...and', sewehl...wie auch; 'to give', here = to send.

Section 19.

HOW DID CUVIER' BECOME A NATURALIST?

When young (S. 10, N. 2) Cuvier was one day 2 strolling 3 along the sands near Fiquainville, in Normandy 4, he observed a cuttle-fish lying 5 stranded on the beach. He was attracted 6 by the curious object, took it home to 7 dissect, and 8 began the study of the mollusca, which ended in his becoming one of the greatest among natural historians.—S. SMILES.

1, &. D. Cavier, berühmter französsischer Antursorscher (1769–1832), erhob bie vergleichende Anatomie zuerst zur Wissenschaft.

2, one day, eines Tages; one morning, eines Morgens; one evening, eines Abends, etc.

3, to stroll along the sands, an der Küste umher schlenbern; 'near', here von.

4, die Normandie, always used with the def. art.

5, 'lying—beach', say 'which the sea had washed (spülen) upon the beach. (See App. § 17.)

6, to be attracted by something, sich durch etwas an'gezogen sühlen; 'object', here 'creature'.

7, The Supine is used to express purpose, and must be employed whenever the English 'to' is used in the meaning of 'in order to', or 'for the purpose of'; clauses of this sort are generally introduced by the conjunction 'um'; as—

I will take this animal home to dissect. Ich will bies Tier mit nach Hanse nehmen, um es zu fezieren.

8, 'and — historian', say 'began (an'sangen) to study the mollusca, and became finally (schießlich) one of the greatest natural historians'. Mollusca, Mellusten or Beichtiere.

Section 20.

ON THE CHOICE OF BOOKS1.

In literature (S. 3, N. 2) I am fond ² of confining myself to the best company, which consists chiefly of old acquaintances ³ with whom I am desirous of becoming more intimate, and I suspect ⁴ that, nine ⁵ times out of ten, it is more profitable ⁶, if not more agreeable, to read an old book over again, than ⁷ to read a new one for the first time.—LORD DUDLEY.

1, 'of books', here ber Leftüre.

2, A. The verbs 'to be fond of' and 'to like' are often rendered by the auxiliary verb of mood 'mögen', either with or without the adverb 'gerne' or 'gern' (willingly), which is used to intensify its signification; as—

I am very fond of the German language. Are you fond of walking?
I don't like this child.

Ich mag die deutsche Sprache sehr gern. Wögen Sie gerne spazieren gehen? Ich mag dies Kind nicht.

B. But the adverb gerne or gern in itself denotes liking and fondness, and is therefore the general translation of the verbs 'to be fond of' or 'to like' when used with the infinitive of other verbs; as—

I like to dance.

We are fond of confining ourselves to a few old books.

Ich tauze gern. Wir beschränfen und gern auf einige wenige alte Bücher.

Construe the above clause accord to the last example given. 3, acquaintances = friends; I am desirous of becoming = I wish to become (App. § 19). The insertion of the adverb 'noth' before the comparative will greatly improve the rendering of this clause. 4, to suspect = to believe. 5, 'nine times out of ten' may be briefly rendered by the adverbial expression meifeuteils, which place immediately after the subject of the subordinate clause. 6, profitable, until (if); 'if — agreeable', say 'if not even (gar) more agreeable; 'over again', here used einmal. 7, 'than — time', say 'than to occupy oneself (lith bestaffigen) with a new one'. This periphrase is necessary to avoid a monotonous repetition in German.

Section 21.

AN APPARENTLY INSIGNIFICANT FACT¹ OFTEN² LEADS TO GREAT RESULTS.

When Galvani ³ discovered that a frog's leg ⁴ twitched when placed in contact with different metals, it ⁵ could scarcely have been imagined that so apparently insignificant a fact would ever lead (App. § 17) to important results. Yet therein lay the germ of ⁶ the Electric Telegraph, which ⁷ binds the intelligence of continents together, and probably before many years elapse will ⁸ "put ⁹ a girdle round the globe."—S. Smiles.

1, Thatsache, f.

'result', Nesultat, n.

3, Luigi Galvani, italienischer Anatom, eutbeckte 1780 den Galvanismus.

'When — discovered', say 'When Galvani made the discovery'.

4, 'leg', here Schenkel, m.; to twitch, in Judungen geraten; when placed—when (S. 18, N. 6) the same was (S. 2, N. 1) brought.

5, it — imagined, hätte man sich faum verstellen können; 'that so apparently . . . a', daß eine steindar so.

6, zum.

7, which — together, welcher die Gesiker der Kontinente mit einander verbindet; before — elapse = in a few years.

8, See App. § 16.

9, to put a girdle round the globe, einen Gürtel rings um die Erde ziehen. 'Rings um die Erde zieh' ich einen Gürtel in viermal zehn Minnten.'

Pud, Sommernachtstraum.

Section 22.

OATS1.

Oats are (S. 2, N. 1) chiefly used whole ² as food for horses. Ground ³ into meal, they are used in some countries (especially in Scotland) for ⁴ making porridge and cakes. As ⁵ a plant, it is extremely hardy, and grows where neither wheat nor barley could ⁶ be made productive. For ⁷ this reason it is a favourite crop in mountainous countries and moist climates — for example in Scotland and Wales. It (S. 5, N. 2) also grows luxuriantly in Australia, Northern ⁸ and Central Asia, and in North America.—Nelson's Readers.

1, Der Hafer, which noun is never used in the plural.

mahlen; to use, benuten; food for horses, Pferdefutter, n.

31. Mehl vermahlen; they — used = one uses (gebrauchen) it (m.). See S. 4,

N. 4; 'country', here Gegend. 4, for — cakes, unt Mehlimpe und Kuchen darand zu machen. 5, 'As — hardy', say 'The plant is extremely hardy (fraffig)'. 6, could — productive = would thrive.

Daher, adv., App. § 14. Render the pron. 'it' by 'ber Hafer'; a favourite crop, bas Hamberteide. 8, in Nordend Mittelassen.

Section 23.

SPRING-BLOSSOMS 1.

The blossoms of Spring are as brief as they are beautiful. For a short time they embellish the country, spreading 4, as it were, a bridal veil over every tree and hedge. It seems, indeed 6, as if Nature had given them existence only to (S. 19, N. 7) show their worth, and then to destroy them. Yet they are "fair pledges of a fruitful tree," and teach us the solemn 8 lesson—that 9 everything lovely on earth is destined soon to perish, and 10 like them to glide into the grave.—Rev. E. M. Davies.

1, Frühlingsblüten.
2, vergänglich.
3, Auf; to embellish, schmücken.
4, spreading = and spread; as it were, gleichsam.
5, 'every — hedge', say 'hedges and trees'.
3, wirklich; as — only, als hätte die Natur ihnen nur das 7, 'Yet — tree', say 'They are however the lovely messengers (Berbeten) of a fruitful (sruchtreich) tree'.
8, solemn lesson, tenste geweiht ist.
9, that — perish, das alles Schüne auf Gren der Bergänglichsteit geweiht ist.
10, 'and — grave', say 'and like the blossoms must (App. § 18) glide (sufen) into an early grave'.

Section 24.

THE WINKING 1 EYELID.

The ² object of winking is a very important one. An outside ³ window soon (S. 5, N. 2) gets soiled ⁴ and dirty, and a careful shopkeeper ⁵ cleans his windows every morning. But our eye-windows must ⁶ never have so much as a speck or spot upon them; and the winking eyelid ⁷ is the busy apprentice who, not once a day, but ⁸ all the day, keeps the living glass ⁹ clean; so that, after all ¹⁰, we are little worse off than the fishes, who ¹¹ bathe their eyes and wash their faces every moment.—Prof. G. Wilson.

1, Das Dffnen und Schließen ber Angenliber. 2, 'The - one', say 'The opening and closing of the eyelid (pl.) is of great importance. 3, outside 4, trübe. 5, Labenhüter; supply the adv. window = street window. 'therefore' after the verb 'cleans', and place the object last of all. 6, 'must - them', say 'must (burfen) never suffer (erleiden) even (selbst) the smallest 7, bas fich öffnende und ichließende speck, the least dimness (Trübung). Augenlid; 'apprentice', here Ladenbursche. 8, but - day, nein, ben gangen 9, Angenglas. 10, genau betrachtet; the subject should be placed immediately after the conjunction 'that'; little = not much; to be badly off, ichlimm baran fein. 11, who - moment, welche Augen und Beficht jeden Augenblick baben und maschen.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

It is reported that, one day (S. 19, N. 2), the ¹ two great philosophers Aristippus ² and Æschines had fallen at variance ³. The ⁴ following day, however, Aristippus came to ⁵ Æschines, and said: "Shall ⁶ we be friends?" "Yes, with ⁻ all my heart!" answered Æschines. "Remember ⁶," continued Aristippus, "that ⁶ though I am your elder, yet I sought for peace." "True ¹⁰," replied Æschines, "and for this ¹¹ I will always acknowledge you to be the more worthy man, for ¹² I began the strife, and you the peace."—Rev. J. Burroughs.

Section 26.

DESCRIPTION OF A GLACIER.

I must now explain to you ¹ what a glacier is. You see before you ² thirty or forty mountain-peaks, and between these peaks what ³ seem to you frozen rivers. The snow, from ⁴ time to time melting and dripping down the sides of the mountain, and congealing in the elevated hollows between the peaks, forms a half-fluid mass, a river of ice ⁵, which is called (S. 4, N. 4) a glacier. As ⁶ the whole mass lies upon a slanting surface, and is not entirely solid throughout, it ⁷ is continually pushing, with a gradual but imperceptible motion, down ⁸ into the valley below.—Mrs. Beecher Stowe.

1, Use the 2nd pers. sing.
2, Place the words 'before you' after the object.
3, glaubst du zu Eis erstarrte Flüsse zu erblicken.
4, which (App. § 16) from time to time melts, drips down on the mountain-sides (Bergeabhänge), and congeals (gefrieren), etc.; see S. 16, N. 4. Supply the adverb wieder before the verb 'congeals'. The elevated hollow, die höher gelegene Felsepulke.

WITHOUT PAINS NO GAINS.

It was one of the characteristic qualities of Charles James Fox ², that ³ he was thoroughly pains-taking in all that he did. When ⁴ appointed Secretary of State, being ⁵ piqued at some observation as to his bad writing, he actually took ⁶ a writing-master, and wrote copies like a schoolboy until he had sufficiently improved himself. Though ⁷ a corpulent man, he ⁸ was wonderfully active at picking up tennis-balls, and ⁹ when asked how he contrived to do so, he playfully replied: "Because ¹⁰ I am a very pains-taking man." The same accuracy which he bestowed upon trifling matters ¹¹, was displayed by him in things of greater importance; and ¹² he acquired his reputation by "neglecting nothing."—S. SMLES.

1, Ohne Mühe fein Gewinn.
2, Ich möchte verschlagen zu übersetzen: 'of the famous Ch. J. Fox', weil badurch das Verhältnis des Genitivs ganz flar ausgedrückt wird. Charles James For (1749–1806) ward schon 1768 Mitglied des Unterhauses, 1772 Lerd des Schages, und bildete 1783 mit North und Perthaud ein Ministerium, welches jedoch bald dem Ministerium Pitt weichen mußte. Er begann darauf mit Burke und andern eine großartige parsamentarische Opposition gegen Pitt und kämpste von 1792–97 fast allein gegen eine starke Majorität. Im Juhre 1806, furz vor seinem Tode, wurde er mit Granville nechmals aus Staatsruder berusen.
3, daß er sich in alsem, was er that, die größte Mühe gab.
4, When he was appointed (see N. 7). The verds machen (to make), ernennen (to appoint), and erwählen (to choose, to elect), and other verds denoting choosing or appointing, require in German the prep. zu contracted with the def. art., whilst in English they govern tavo Nominatives in the Passive Voice; as—

Der Freund meines Vaters ift zum Ab- My father's friend has been elected a meniber of Parliament.

5, being — writing. This clause must be rendered in an altogether different form; let us say 'and telt hurt by an observation as to (über) his bad handwriting'. To feel hurt by something, fid brid; etwas verletst fühlen. The p. p. must be placed?

6, 'to take', here engagie'ren; 'actually', here faftijd (see App. § 15); to write copies, fid) im Edinidyreiben üben; improved himself = improved his hand-writing.

7, Though he was. Grammatical distinctness, as a rule, requires that the subject and copula, which after certain conjunctions are so frequently omitted in English, should be clearly expressed in German.

8, When a subordinate clause, beginning with one of the conjunctions ba, obgleid, weil, and wenn, precedes a principal clause is generally introduced by the adverbial conjunction fo (so, thus, therefore); as—

Due et requet, fo fenuen (App. § 15) wir

As it is raining, we cannot go out.

nicht ausgehen.

'He — balls', so war er im Aussaugen ber Bälle beim Tennisspiele boch merkwürdig gewaubt.

9, 'and — so', say 'and when (S. 18, N. 6) one asked him how he did (machen) it'. The verb machen should be used in the Pres. Subj., since the clause contains an indirect question (App. §§ 28 and 30). Playfully, scherzend.

10, Beil ich mir stets die größte Nühe gebe.

11, trisling matters, Kleinigkeiten; 'was — importance', say 'he showed also in more important matters' (Angelegenheiten).

12, and — nothing, und er erwarb sich seinen Nufbaburch, daß er nichts für zu gering erachtete.

Section 28.

THE MAGNA CHARTA 1.

The great-grandsons of 2 those who had fought under William, and the great-grandsons of those who had fought under Harold, began to 3 draw near to each other in friendship, and the first pledge of their reconciliation was the 4 Great Charter, won 5 by their united exertions, and framed for their common benefit. Here commences the history of the English nation. The history of the preceding events 6 is the history of wrongs inflicted 7 and sustained by various tribes, which, indeed 8, all dwelt on English ground, but 9 which regarded each other with aversion such as 10 has scarcely ever existed between communities separated 11 by physical barriers.—Macaulay, History of England.

1, Die 'Magna Charta' ift der am 19ten Juni 1215 dem Ronig Johann ohne Land abgerungene Staategrundvertrag, welcher ale Grundlage ber englischen Berfaffung gilt. 2, 'of those — Harold'. These two clauses are best rendered in a contracted form, thus: 'of the men who had fought under W. and H.' near to each other, sich einander nabern; in friendship, freundschaftlich, adv. 4, die Magna Charta. 5, The two clauses containing the two p. ps. must be turned into one contracted relative clause, as explained in S. 7, N. 3, B. Use the verbs in the Impf. of the Passive Voice. To frame, entwerfen. 6, Greigniß, n. 7, The two p. ps. qualifying 'wrongs' (Unbilben) should be placed before that noun, as explained in S. 7, N. 3, A; of, von; to inflict, veru: ben; to sustain, erleiden; by - tribes, verschiedener Bolfostamme. 8, zwar; on = 9, but - aversion = but (jeood) showed such an upon; ground = soil. aversion against one another. The Article, when used in connection with adjectives and adverbs, stands in German generally before those words: such an aversion, einen folden Widerwillen. Since the clause to be translated is in reality but a part of the preceding relative clause, which it completes, the verb must be placed? 10, such as, wie, after which supply the pron. er, to give more distinctness to the rendering; to exist, bestehen; communities = nations. 11, welche burch natürliche Grenzen von einander getrennt find.

Section 29.

HONESTY.

Mr.¹ Denham had been in business at Bristol, had failed², compounded, and gone³ to America. There⁴, by a close application to business as a merchant, he acquired a plentiful⁵ fortune in a few years. Returned⁶ to England, he invited his old creditors to an entertainment, at which he thanked them for the easy ¹ terms (S. 16, N. 10) they had favoured⁶ him with, and, though the guests had expected nothing but a good treat, every⁶ man, at the first remove, found to his astonishment a cheque under his plate for 10 the full amount of the unpaid remainder, with interest.—Dr. B. Franklin.

1, 'Mr. - Bristol', translate 'Mr. D. had had a business at (in) B.', and place the object after the adverbial circumstance of place. 2, to fail (in business) fallieren; to compound, accordieren. Verbs from the Latin with the termination ieren do not admit of the prefix or augment ge in the Past Participle, but follow in all other respects the weak or modern form of conjugation. 3, say 'and was gone to America'. The verb genen is always construed with fein, which auxiliary is especially used with Intransitive Verbs denoting a Passive State of the subject, a change from one State into another, or a Motion, if the place to which the motion is directed, or from which it proceeds, is either expressed or understood.
4, The words 'he acquired' (erlangen) should, in an inverted form (App. § 14), follow the adverb 'There'; 'by merchant', durch unabläffige faufmannische Thatigfeit. 5, plentiful = great. 6, Nach England zurückgekehrt; 7, bequem; terms, Bedingungen. For the position of the object see App. § 9. entertainment = meal; at which, wobei. 8, to favour a person with something, einem etwas gewähren (v. tr.); nothing but, nur; treat, Schmaus, m. 9, every - plate, fant boch ein jeder nach bem erften Bange zu feinem Erstannen unter bem Teller einen Wechfel vor. interest = which was issued (anostellen) for (auf) the full amount of the remaining (ruditantia) debt with (nebit) interest.

FORMATION OF A CORAL-ISLAND.

I.

It seems to me, that 'when the animalcules, which form the corals at the bottom of the ocean, cease to live, their structures adhere to each other, by virtue either of the glutinous remains within, or of some property in salt-water. The interstices being gradually filled up with sand and broken pieces of coral washed by the sea, which also adhere, a mass of rock is at length formed. Future races of these animalcules erect their habitations upon the rising bank, and die, in their turn to elevate this monument of their wonderful labours.

1, 'that when the animalcules...cease to live'. This clause may be briefly rendered by saying: 'that after the death (Mbhreim, n.) of the animalcules'. To translate the last noun, form a diminutive of Tier 2, Mecresbeden, m. 3, 'their — salt-water'. Use the following order of words for rendering this passage: 'their little houses (dim. of hand) either through the in them contained glutinous remains (Mberrefle) or through some (ingent eine) property of the salt-water held together are (Pres. of the Passive Voice)'. 4, When the Present Participle is used to denote a logical cause from which we may draw an inference, it must, by the help of the conjunction 'ba', be changed into a finite verb, i.e. one with a personal termination, thus:—

The interstices being gradually filled up with sand, a mass of rock is at length formed.

Da nun die Zwischenraume allmählich mit Sand ausgefüllt werden, fo wird aus dem Ganzen endlich eine Felfenmaffe gebildet.

The tense in which the verb is to be used, must always be determined by the context.

5, and—sea, und mit vem Meere herangespullen zerbrödelten Kovallen; it is a matter of course that the verbs must follow this passage.

6, The following generations.

7, 'to rise', here sich erheben. Present Participles used attributively are inflected like adjectives. Bank=reef. 8, 'and die — labours', translate 'and die to (S. 19, N. 7) contribute also in their turn (ihrerseits) to the elevation (Erhöhung, f.) of this monument of their admirable work (Arbeit, f.)'.

Section 31.

FORMATION OF A CORAL-ISLAND.

II.

The 1 new bank is not long in being visited by sea-birds. Salt-plants 2 take root upon it (S. 4, N. 5, B), and 3 a soil is being formed. A cocoanut, or the 4 drupe of a pandanus is thrown on 5 shore. Land-birds visit it 6 and deposit the seeds of shrubs and trees. Every high tide, and still more 7 every gale, adds something to the bank. The 8 form of an island is gradually assumed, and last of all 9 comes man (S. 3, N. 2) to (S. 19, N. 7) take possession.—M. FLINDERS.

1, The new coral-reef is (S. 2, N. 1) now soon visited by (von) sea-birds.
2, Sea-plants; to take = to strike.
3, und so bildet side sine Erdschick.
4, die Frucht einer Panane. Die Panane (Pandanus) ist eine Art Palme und wird auch Pandanug (m.) oder Palmunsbaum genannt.
5, an contracted with the def. art.
6, it = the same, to agree with its antecedent 'shore'; to deposit, zurück'saffen; seeds, Same, m., used in the sing.
7, still more = especially; adds—bank, trägt etwas zur Bergrößerung des Misse bei.
8, The latter (dieses) gradually assumes (an nesmen) the form of an island. The adv. 'gradually' may be made emphatic; see App. § 14.
9, zulest; 'to—possession' = to take possession of the same.

REYNARD¹ CAUGHT.

A fox observed 2 some fowls at roost, and wished to 3 gain access to them by smooth speeches. "I have charming news 4 to tell you," he 5 said. "The animals have concluded 6 an agreement of universal peace with one another. Come down and celebrate 7 with me this decree 8." An old cock, who was well on his guard, looked 9 cautiously all around, and the fox, perceiving (S. 16, N. 4) this, inquired 10 the reason. "I was only observing 11 those two dogs which are coming this way 12," replied the cock. Reynard prepared 13 to set off. "What 14," cried the cock, "have not the animals concluded an agreement of universal peace?" Yes," returned the fox, "but those dogs (S. 5, N. 2) perhaps have not yet 15 heard of it (S. 4, N. 5, B)."—Anonymous.

1, Det überlistet Reines (or Reinsard).

2, to observe = to see; at roost, auf ihrer Stange sign.

3, to—speeches, durch glatte Worte ihrer habhast zu werden.

4, charming news = something pleasant. To render 'you' use the dat. of the persul. pron. of the 2nd pers. pl. For the construction see App. § 7.

5, The words indicating the speaker, after a quotation, must be rendered in an inverted form (see App. § 13).

6, to conclude, ab soldießen, str. v. tr.; the agreement of universal peace, ber allgemeine Friedense vertrag; to come down, herun'tersomment; supply the adv. as between the verb and the separable particle.

7, seien.

8, Beschüße, m.

9, to look all around, sich nach allen Seiten um'sehen.

10, to inquire the reason, sich nach ber llrsache ersundigen.

11, I was observing = I observed (beobachten).

Which are coming = which come. The English compound forms of the verb with the auxiliary and the present participle, and of the verb 'to do' with the infinitive (I do come = I come. I did come = I came), must be rendered by the corresponding simple forms.

12, tiefes Deges. 13, fid to be present participle, and of the verb 'to do' with the infinitive (I do come = I came), must be rendered by the corresponding simple forms.

14, Wie. 15, 'not yet', here noth undits.

Section 33.

THE MEANS OF CONVEYANCE IN THE TIME OF CHARLES II.

I.

Heavy articles ² were (S. 2, N. 1) in the time of Charles II generally conveyed from place to place by waggons ³. The ⁴ expense of transmitting them was ⁵ enormous. From London to ⁶ Birmingham the charge was £7 a ⁷ ton, and from London to Exeter £12, which ⁸ is a third more than was afterwards charged ⁹ on turnpike-roads, and fifteen times more than is now demanded by ¹⁰ railway companies. Coal ¹¹ was seen only in districts where it was produced ¹², or ¹³ to which it could be carried by sea, and ¹⁴ was, indeed, always known in the South of England by the name of sea-coal.

1, Die Beforderungsmittel zur Zeit Rarle bes Zweiten. 2, objects. rendered by the compound noun 'Die Transportfosten'. It may here be pointed tragen, which place after 'generally'. out that the German language lends itself more easily than any other living language to the formation of compound expressions. Many advantages result from this adaptability of the language to express in one single term which, otherwise, would require a number of words; but the greatest of these advantages seems to me to lie in the power it gives us to avoid the too frequent use of the Genitive, a power which, if rightly wielded, will impart great vigour, 5, were extraconciseness, and elegance to the student's style of writing. 6, nath; 'charge', here Frucht, f.; 'to be', here Etriling. 7, The def. art. is used in stating ordinary high (groß). betragen; £7, fieben Bfund Sterling. the price of goods, when the English use the indef. art.; as-

8, The pron. 'which' referring to a whole clause, and not to a particular word in that clause, should be rendered by the indef. rel. pron. was; as—

She acted without thinking about the consequences, which was very wrong. Sie handelte, ohne über die Folgen nacht war.

9, ferechuen; turnpike-road, Chausse, f. 10, veu, followed by the def. art.; to demand, hearspruchen. 11, Steinschlen, used in the pl. without the art. Use the active voice with man, S. 4, N. 4. 12, gewinnen. 13, or—sea, over wehin se verschisst werden tounten. 14, Say 'and it was (se wurden) in the South of England therefore (vaher auch) only called sea-coal (Schisstopleu)'.

Section 34.

THE MEANS OF CONVEYANCE IN THE TIME OF CHARLES II.

H.

The rich 1 (S. 5, N. 2) commonly travelled in 2 their own iron carriages with at least four horses. A 3 coach and six is in our time never seen, vol. IV.

except as part of some procession. The frequent mention, therefore, of such equipages 4 in old books is likely to mislead us. We 5 attribute to magnificence what was really 6 the effect of 7 disagreeable necessity. People 8 in the time of Charles II travelled with six horses, because 9 with a smaller number there was danger of sticking 10 fast in the mire.—

Abridged from Macaulay's History of England.

1, Adjectives used as nouns are declined as they would be if the noun, which is understood, were to follow them. They are always written with a 2, in ihren eigenen mit wenigstens vier Pferben bespannten eifernen capital initial. 3, 'A - seen'. This clause must be construed thus: 'Except Rutichen. (Mußer) in processions a coach and six (eine sechospannige Rutsche, see App. § 14) is now never seen'. Supply the words 'bei une' before the p. p. fuhrwerfe; therefore ... is likely to mislead us = can therefore easily mislead (irre führen) us. The object 'us' must be placed immediately after the copula 'can'. 5, Wir schreiben der Prachtliebe zu. 6, really = in reality; 'effect', here = consequence. 7, Say 'of a'. 8, One (S. 5, N, 2). 9, because ... there was danger, weil man ... Gefahr lief; 'small', here gering. 10, to stick fast, steden bleiben. Use the Supine, for: When the English Gerund (i.e. the verbal in -ing) is governed by a noun, a verb, or an adjective, it is generally rendered by the Supine. Comp. S. 78, N. 14. Examples: He possesses the gift of speaking well. Er befitt die Gabe gut gu fprechen. Fangen Gie nicht an gu fprechen! Do not begin talking!

SIR1 WILLIAM HERSCHEL.

When ² pursuing his musical avocations in the pump-room at Bath, Sir William Herschel had a small workshop close ³ at hand, and when (S. 18, N. 6) the ⁴ exacting loungers in the pump-room admitted of a pause in the music, he slipped off ⁵ to (S. 19, N. 7) complete the polishing of a speculum ⁶, or the grinding ⁷ of a lens. Scarcely, however, had he heard the signal ⁸, when ⁹ he was ready to snatch up his instrument and ¹⁰ to be the first in the orchestra. Thus ¹¹ he gathered up the fragments of time, and this made (S. 27, N. 4) him at last the friend of monarchs ¹², and the first ¹³ of astronomers.—Rev. Dr. Leitch.

Section 36.

THE 1 AIR - OCEAN.

I.

Enveloping ² this solid globe of ours are two oceans, one ⁸ partial, and the other universal. There is the ⁴ ocean of water, which has ⁵ settled down into all the depressions ⁶ of the earth's surface ⁷, leaving ⁸ dry above it all the high lands, as mountain-ranges, continents, and islands; and ⁹ there is an ocean of air, which enwraps ¹⁰ the whole in one transparent mantle.

Through ¹¹ the bosom of that ocean, like fishes with their fins (App. § 14), birds ¹² and other winged creatures swim; whilst man ¹⁸ and other mamalia creep like ¹⁴ crabs at the bottom of this aerial sea ¹⁵.

1, Das Enfimer.
2, Say 'Two oceans envelop (umgeten) our solid globe (Errfugel).
3, the one partial (trifusife) and the other universal (ganz).
The subsequent sentence is best introduced by a colon (:), which we use to direct attention to what is following. The words 'There is' must then be omitted.
4, bas Bestimer.
5, 'which — all', say 'which fills (crfussen) all'.
6, Bertiefung, f.
7, To render 'of the earth's surface', form a compound noun by combining the corresponding German terms of the nouns 'earth' and 'surface'.

A. When the component parts of Compound Nouns are substantives, we combine them often without any connecting link; as—bas Laftier, beast of burden; bas Etabtviertel, the quarter of a town, ward.

B. Neither do we require a connecting link for the formation of Compound Nouns the first component of which is an adjective or a particle; as—bie Gregumtter, grandmother; but llugfad, misfortune; ber lluquest, fountainhead.

C. The Gender of Compound Nouns (with the exception of a few compounds with Mut, m.) is determined by the last component, which is always a noun.

8, 'leaving—islands'. This passage may be rendered thus: 'so that all the high lands (ઉτήδημηση), as (wie) mountain-ranges, etc... rise dry above the same; to rise, ηθ στήσει. 9, μης τως θημπιστ. 10, μης μία; say 'the whole globe' (καισι, f.); 'in', here mit. 11, In this ocean of air. 12, Since the four subsequent nouns in this passage represent a whole class, the def. art. is required before each (S. 3, N. 2). 13, Use this noun in the plural, since the noun with which it is connected by the conj. 'and' stands in the same number. 14, gleid κατόξει; to creep, μηρωτητιστήσει. The word 'whilst' being a subordinative conj., the verb must be placed?

Section 37.

THE AIR-OCEAN.

II.

The air-ocean, which everywhere ¹ surrounds the earth, and feeds and maintains it, is even ² more simple, more grand, and more majestic than the ³ 'world of waters'; more ⁴ varied and changeful in its moods of storm and calm, of ebb and flow, of brightness and gloom. The ⁵ atmosphere is, indeed, a wonderful thing, a most perfect example of the economy of nature. Deprived of ⁶ air, no animal would live, no plant would grow, no flame would burn, no ¹ light would be diffused. The ⁶ air, too, is the sole medium of sound. Without it, mountains might ⁶ fall, but ¹⁰ it would be in perfect silence. Neither whisper ¹¹ nor thunders ¹² would ¹³ ever be heard.—Maury, Physical Geography of the Sea.

1, Place the adverb before the verb.
2, segar nech.
3, jeue mächtige Wasserwelt, after which put a full stop and begin a new sentence.
4, This passage may be construed thus: 'It offers a greater variety (Maunigsaltigseit) and changeableness in the transitions from storm to (311) calm, from ebb to flow, and from light to gloom (Dunkel, n.)'. The article (which, if practicable, should be contracted with the preceding preposition) must be used with the last six nouns, see S. 3, N. 2.

CHEERFUL¹ CHURCH-MUSIC.

When the poet Carpani inquired 2 of his friend Haydn 3 how it happened 4 that his church-music was 5 always so cheerful, the great composer made 6 the following beautiful reply:

"I cannot make it otherwise 7," said he, "I 8 write according to the thoughts I feel. When 9 I think of God, my heart is so full of joy that (App. § 16) the 10 notes dance and leap, as it were, from my pen; and since God has given me a cheerful heart, it 11 will be pardoned me that 12 I serve him with a cheerful spirit."—Rev. R. K. Arvine.

1, fröhlich.
2, inquired of = asked.

OUR INDUSTRIAL INDEPENDENCE DEPENDS UPON OURSELVES.

Truer² words were never uttered than those spoken by Mr. Dargan, the Irish railway-contractor, at a public meeting in Dublin.

"I have heard a great deal 4," he said, "about the independence that we are 5 to get from this or that source, yet 6 I have always been deeply impressed with the conviction, that our industrial independence depends upon ourselves. Simple industry and careful exactness would be the making of Ireland. We have, it 9 is true, made a step in advance, but perseverance is 10 indispensably necessary for eventual success."—S. Smiles.

1, industriell. 2, A greater truth than that which Mr. D., the Irish railway-contractor (Eisenbahn: Unternehmer), spoke (aus'sprechen) at (in) a public meeting in (3u) Dublin, has never been uttered. 3, The words 'he said' should follow here; see S. 32, N. 5. 4, a great deal = much. to get, erlangen sollen; for the construction see App. § 16; from, aus. I have always had the firm conviction. Render 'to have' here by heach. 7, schlicht; 'industry', here Fleiß, m.; careful, streng; exactness, Psichtersulfung, f. 8, would establish (begründen) Ireland's prosperity (Bohssand, m.).
9, it is true, zwar; see S. 15, N. 3; 'to make', here thun; in advance, vormarts.

Section 40.

ENGLAND'S 1 TREES.

The principal native² trees are the³ oak, ash, elm, poplar, aspen, birch, larch, alder, hawthorn, hazel, and willow. The beech, maple, horse-chestnut 4, Spanish chestnut 5, walnut 6, sycamore, acacia, weeping willow, cedar, and Lombardy poplar have been introduced.

The moist climate of 7 England is 8 eminently suited to the growth of 9 forest-trees, and we find that in ancient times the larger part of the country presented one 10 vast scene of forest, as 11 the 12 uncleared districts of America do now. The 13 few scattered patches of natural wood which remain, show 14 what was once the character of nearly the whole country.—Hewitt, Physical Geography of England and Wales.

3, die Gide. The article 2, einheimisch. 1, See S. 14, N. 3. is repeated in this passage only when the subsequent noun is of different gender or number from the preceding one. 4, die Roffastanie. 6, ber Wallnußbaum. 7, Englants. 8, to be suited edite Raftanie.

to a thing, einer Sache zu'träglich sein; eminently, außererbentlich, which place before 'zuträglich'.

9, Use the gen. of the def. art. The definite article should be used in all cases where an object is individualised or singled out from other objects.

10, one—forest = an almost uninterrupted scene of forest, And on ow, wie noch jegt.

THE INDIAN CHIEF 1.

During the war in America, a company 2 of Indians attacked a small body 3 of British troops 4, and defeated 5 them. As 6 the Indians had 7 greatly the advantage in swiftness of foot, and were eager in the pursuit, very few of the English escaped; and those who 8 fell into their hands, were treated with a cruelty of which there 9 are not many examples, even in that country.

Two of the Indians came up ¹⁰ to a young officer, and attacked him with great fury. As ⁶ they were armed with battle-axes, he had no hope of ¹¹ escape. But, just at ¹² this crisis, another Indian came up ¹³, who was advanced in years, and was armed with a bow and arrows. The ¹⁴ old man instantly drew his bow; but, after ¹⁵ having taken his aim at the officer, he suddenly dropped his arrow, and ¹⁶ interposed between the young soldier and his pursuers, who were about ¹⁷ to cut him to pieces. The two Indians retired with respect.

3, Schar, f. 4, troops= 1, Der Indianerhäuptling. 2, Saufe, m. 5, to defeat, in vie Flucht schlagen.
6, When the conjunction 'as' stands for 'since', it must be rendered by 'ba'. 7, had — foot, ben Britten im Laufen bedeutend überlegen waren; and - pursuit = and eagerly pursued the same. For the following clause see S. 27, N. 8, and say 'only few of the Britons succeeded to escape (bavon'fommen)'. I succeed, es gelingt mir. 8, welche ben Indianern in die Bande fielen. 9, there are, es giebt. The subject 'eg', which must be placed immediately after the relative pronoun, should be followed by the adverbial clause 'even in that country'. 10, to come crisis = critical (entificioungevell) moment.

11, auf Rettung.

who—arrows = of advanced moment.

13, to come 12, at = in; crisis = critical (entificientungevoll) moment.

13, to come up = to appear;
who — arrows = of advanced (vergeschritten) age and armed with bow and arrows.

14, bet Alle; to draw, spannen; immediately, unverzüglich, which may be emphasized by being placed at the head of the clause (App. § 14). 15, Say 'after he had aimed (3iclen) at (auf) the officer'; to drop, fallen laffen. 16. and interposed, und stellte sich. 17, to be about, im Begriff sein; to cut to pieces, zerîtudeln; with respect = respectfully.

THE INDIAN CHIEF.

H.

The old man then took the officer by the hand, soothed him into confidence by caresses, and, having conducted him to his hut, treated him with a kindness which did honour to his professions. He made (S. 27,

- N. 4) him less a ³ slave than a ³ companion, taught ⁴ him the language of the country, and instructed him in ⁵ the rude arts that were practised by the inhabitants. They ⁶ lived together in the most perfect harmony, and the young officer, in ⁷ the treatment he met with, found nothing to regret, but ⁸ that (App. § 16) sometimes the old man fixed his eyes upon him, regarded ⁹ him for some minutes with steady and silent attention, and then burst into tears.
- 1, Say 'Hereupon the old man seized the hand of the officer, sought by caresses to gain his (besen) considence, conducted him to (in) his hut, and treated', etc.

 2, Bersprechma, s.

 3, his.

 4, The verb sehren, to teach (old German lêran, Gothic laisjan), etymologically signifies 'to cause a person to know a thing'. This is the reason that it is in German most generally used with two accusatives: that of the person and that of the thing; as—Gr sehren mid die andersprache, he teaches me the language of the country. Lehren mid Deine Nechte! (Luther.) Wer hat did solde Streiche gesehr! (Uhsand.)

 5, in—arts, in den geringen Geschickschieren; to practise, üben; by, von; 'inhabitants', here Eingebernen.

 6, They = both; together = with one another, which place after 'harmony' (Eintracht, s.).

 7, in—with, in der ihm anteil werdenden Behandlung. Where must the verb be placed? Supply the word 'auderes' after nothing'; 'to regret', here bessagen.

 8, say 'regarded him silently for a while (App. § 9, A) with steady (unwerwant) attention'.

In 1 the meantime the spring returned, and the Indians again took the field. The old man, who was still vigorous, and able to bear the fatigues of war 2, set out with them, and was accompanied by his prisoner. They marched above 3 two hundred leagues across the forests, and came at length to 4 a plain, where the British forces 5 were encamped. The old man showed his prisoner the tents at a distance 6: "There," said he, "are thy countrymen. There is the enemy who 7 waits to give us battle. Remember 8 that I have saved thy 9 life, that I have taught 10 thee to conduct a canoe, to arm thyself with 11 bow and arrows, and to surprise 12 the beaver in the forest. What wast thou when I first took thee to my hut? Thy hands were those of an infant. They could neither procure 13 thee sustenance nor safety. Thy soul was 14 in utter darkness. Thou wast ignorant of everything. Thou owest all things to me. Wilt thou, then 15, go over to thy nation, and take up the hatchet against us?"

1, Say 'Meanwhile it became spring'; to take the field, ind Feld ziehen.
2, hie Kriegebeschwerden; 'to set out', here ziehen.
3, more than.
4, to = into.
5, forces = troops; to encamp, sein lager aus shagen.
6, ven weiten, which place before the accusative.
7, who waits, her darans lanert; to give battle = to attack.
8, Bedense.
9, A. The definite article is often used instead of the possessive adjective pronoun in cases where the possessor is clearly seen from the context; as—

I have the pen in my hand.

B. The possessor is often indicated by a personal pronoun in the dative case; as—3d will mir bie Sante mafchen.

I will wash my hands.

The latter mode of construction must be applied in this case.

10, 'I have taught thee to conduct a canoe.' Read once more S. 42, N. 4, and mark further that: that which is taught is often expressed in the form of a Supine, as in this instance.

11, We say 'mit Preil und Bogen'.

12, überful'len.

The officer replied that ¹ he would rather lose his own life than take away that of his deliverer. The Indian, bending ² down his (S. 43, N. 9, A) head, and covering his face with both his hands, stood ⁸ some time silent. Then, looking ⁴ earnestly at his prisoner, he ⁵ said, in a voice that was at once softened by tenderness and grief: "Hast thou a father?" "My father," said the young man, "was ⁶ alive when I left my country ⁷." "Alas!" said ⁸ the Indian, "how wretched ⁹ must he be!" He paused ¹⁰ a moment, and then added: "Dost thou know that ¹¹ I have been a father? I ¹² am a father no more. I saw my son fall in ¹³ battle. He fought at my side. I saw him expire. He was covered with wounds, when he fell ¹⁴ dead at my feet."

1, that — deliverer = that he would rather die than kill his deliverer. See App. §§ 28 and 30.

2, The two Participles in -ing are best rendered by using the Imperfect.

3, stood — silent, und fiand so eine Weise schweigend da.

THE INDIAN CHIEF.

He pronounced these words with the utmost vehemence. His 2 body shook with a universal tremour. He 3 was almost stifled with sighs, which 4 he would not suffer to escape him. There 5 was a keen restlessness in the eye, but no tears flowed to 6 his relief. At 7 length he became calm by degrees: and, turning towards the east, where the sun had just risen, "Dost thou see," said he to the young officer, "the beauty of that sky, which sparkles with prevailing day? and hast thou pleasure in the sight?" "Yes," replied the 8 young officer, "I have pleasure in the beauty of 9 so fine a sky." "I have none!" said the Indian, and 10 his tears then found their way.

A few minutes after, he showed the young man a ¹¹ magnolia, in full bloom. "Dost thou see that beautiful tree?" said he, "and dost thou look ¹² upon it with pleasure?" "Yes," replied the officer, "I ¹³ look with pleasure upon that beautiful tree." "I have no longer any pleasure in ¹⁴ looking upon it!" said the Indian hastily ¹⁵, and ¹⁶ immediately added: "Go, return to thy father, that ¹⁷ he may still have pleasure, when (S. 18, N. 6) he sees the sun rise in ¹⁸ the morning, and the trees blossom in the spring!"—Washington Irving.

1, spoke. Begin the clause with 'These words' (S. 7, N. 2). 'A universal tremour shook (erschüttern) his body'.
3, Er erstickte sast unter ben Seuszern.
4, Say 'which he endeavoured (bemüßt sein) to suppress'. 3. Er erstickte fast unter 5, His eyes (sing.) looked restlessly about. 6, zur Linderung seines Schmerzes. 7, Say 'Gradually he became calmer'. The following passage requires altogether a different structure in German. Say 'He turned towards the east (figh gen Diten wenden), where the sun had just risen. "Dost thou see the beauty of the sky, which sparkles (englangen) with (von) the breaking (an'brechen) day (Tageolicht, n.)? and hast thou pleasure (Freude, f.) in (an) the sight (Aublid, m.)?" he asked the young officer'. 8, the — officer, biefer, to avoid a useless repetition. 9, of such a (S. 28, N. 9) sky. 10, 'and his', say 'whose'; 10, 'and his', say 'whose'; found their way, hervor brachen. 11, eine in voller Blute ftehende Magnolie. 12, 'to look upon', here betrachten. 13, Say 'I rejoice in its splendour', to avoid monotony. To rejoice in a thing, fich einer Cache freuen. —it', may be briefly rendered by 'in the sight'. 15, raich. Go'. Begin a new clause here, and say: "Go," he added (fugte er baun hingu)'. 17, auf daß (followed by the Pres. Subj. of haben). 18, des Morgens, App. § 9. The verb 'sees', being the governing verb in both clauses, takes the last place. See App. § 19.

Section 46.

RICE.

Rice forms the ¹ chief subsistance of the people ² in India, China, Japan, and other eastern ³ countries. Indeed, it supports ⁴ more persons than any other article of food ⁵. In Asia it (S. 2, N. 1) is chiefly cultivated in India, China, and ⁶ Ceylon; in Europe: in Lombardy ⁷ (Italy) and Spain; in Africa: in Egypt; in South America: in Brazil; and in North America: in ⁶ the Carolines and ⁶ Louisiana. Its ¹⁰ cultivation requires an¹¹ immense quantity of moisture. It ¹² grows best in ¹³ fields which can be inundated. Indeed ¹⁴, the fact that it is usually sown upon watery soil makes it probable that the first Verse of the eleventh Chapter in ¹⁵ Ecclesiastes refers to Rice. In Egypt, for example, it is always sown while ¹⁶ the waters of the Nile cover the land, and when the floods subside ¹⁷, (S. 27, N. 8) it is deposited ¹³ in the mud. A strong spirit ¹⁰, called arrack, is distilled from ²⁰ rice, and ²¹ the straw is used for making plait for hats and bonnets.—Nelson's Readers.

1, das hauptfächlichste Nahrungsmittel. 2, Say 'of the inhabitants of India 4, ernahren. 5, Rahrungsartifel, m. (Indiens)', etc. 3, orientalisch. 6, Supply here the prep. auf, which should always be used to render the 7, in der Lombarden. 10, Der Reisbau, i.e. the cultivation The noun 'rice' English 'in' before names of islands. 9, Supply the prep. in. Rarolinen. 12, The noun 'rice' 11, an — of = extraordinary much. must here be repeated, since the pron. 'er' would refer to 'Reisbau'. 14, Ja, die Thatsache, daß, etc. thing, sich auf etwas beziehen. The above mentioned passage reads as follows: 'Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days'. 16, Say 'when the land is still covered by (von) the waters of the Nile'. 17, fich gurud ziehen, i.e. withdraw. 18, fich ab'lagern (see S. 4, N. 4, A); 'mud', here Schlamm, m. 19, Spiritus, m. 20, aus. 21, and bonnets, und bas Stroh gebraucht man gur Anfertigung von Manner-und Frauenhuten.

THE WHITE SHIP.

(A.D. 1120.)

King Henry I went 1 over to Normandy with his son Prince (S. 10, N. 2) William and a great retinue, to have the prince acknowledged 2 as his successor by the Norman nobles, and to contract 3 the promised marriage between him and the daughter of the Count of Anjou. When both 4 these things had been done with great show 5 and rejoicing, the whole retinue prepared 6 to embark for the voyage home.

When ⁷ all was ready, there came to the king Fitz-Stephen ⁸, a seacaptain, and said: "My ⁹ liege, my father served your father all his life, upon the sea. He steered ¹⁰ the ship ¹¹ with the gold boy upon the prow, in ¹⁹ which your father sailed ¹³ to conquer England. I beseech you to grant ¹⁴ me the same office. I ¹⁶ have a fair vessel in the harbour here, called the White Ship, manned by fifty sailors of renown. I pray you, Sire ¹⁶, to ¹⁷ let your servant have the honour of steering ¹⁸ you in the White Ship to England."

1, to go over, fich begeben. The words 'to Normandy' (S. 19, N. 4) must be 2, to have acknowledged, hulbigen laffen. See S. 19, placed after 'retinue'. N. 7. The words 'by (von) the Norman nobles' must be placed after 'prince'. 3, to contract a promised marriage, einen verabredeten The nobles, der Adel. heiratevertrag ab'schließen. The pron. 'him' should be turned by 'the prince', 5, Bomp, m.; rejoicing, to avoid ambiguity. 4, both — things = this. 6, fich zur Beimreise an'ichiden. viele Frendenbezeigungen; to be done, geschehen. 8, The subject and apposition 7. Supply the adverb 'unn' after 'when'. must be placed immediately after the predicate. Comp. App. § 15. 'My father, O prince (gurit), served yours (use the second pers. sing. of the posses. pron., and continue the address in the same person) his whole life long 10, leufen. 11, bas am Borberteile mit einem goldenen Rnaben 13, sailed - England = sailed (fich ein'schiffen) 12, auf. vergierte Schiff. 15, Say 'I possess for (311) the conquest of England. 14, verleihen. in this (hiefig) harbour a fair with fifty renowned (bemahrt) sailors (Geeleute) manned vessel (Fahrzeng), called (App. § 1) the White Ship'. Comp. S. 7, N. 3. 17, to let ... have = to grant; use the Supine. steer', here = to conduct, geleiten. See S. 1, N. 3.

Section 48.

Η.

"I am sorry," replied the king, "that 1 my vessel is already chosen, and that I cannot therefore sail with the son of the man who served 2 my father. But 3 the prince, with all his company, shall go along with you in the fair White Ship manned by fifty sailors of renown."

An 4 hour or two afterwards, the king (App. § 15) set sail 5 in 6 the vessel he had chosen, accompanied by other vessels, and 7, sailing all night with a fair and gentle wind, arrived upon the coast of England in the morning. While 8 it was yet night, the 9 people in some of the ships heard a faint wild cry come 10 over the sea, and wondered what 11 it was.

1, Say 'that I have already chartered (bebingen) a ship'. Perfect, which is used in German to express an action or occurrence both perfect and past, without reference to any other action or occurrence. 3, Render 'but' by jeooth, which place after 'shall'; with - company, funt feinem gangen Gefolge; 'to go along', here fahren, to be placed at the end of the whole clause, which construe accord to S. 48, N. 6. 4, An — afterwards = 6, To place the qualifying Soon after. 5, to set sail, ab'fegeln. parts before the word qualified is one of the most striking peculiarities of German Grammar. This construction, called attributive construction, has been explained in Section 7, Note 3 with respect to the rendering of the Perfect (or Past) Participle qualifying a preceding noun; but it must here be pointed out that it may likewise be used for rendering the Present Participle qualifying a preceding noun (comp. S. 16, N. 4), and that it is sometimes even suitable for translating short relative clauses. This, as long as it is not too much indulged in, imparts to the construction great conciseness and vigour, and avoids the too frequent use of relative pronouns, which, contrary to English construction, cannot be omitted in German. (Comp. S. 16, N. 10.)

EXAMPLES.

When the fleet, favoured by the finest weather, was about to set sail, there arose a shout of joy, proceeding from many thousands of voices, and resounding mightily from the shore.

The child, gently sleeping in his mother's arms, was suddenly roused by his father's noisy entrance.

The church, which was damaged by the siege, is now being restored.

Als die von dem schöusten Wetter begünstigte Flotte im Begriff war abzusegeln, erhob sich ein von vielen tausend Simmen erschallender Jubelruf, von dem das Ufer mächtig wiederhallte.

Das in ben Armen ber Mutter fanft schlafende Kind wurde plöglich burch ben larmenden Cintritt bes Baters aufgeweckt.

Die burch bie Belagerung beschäs bigte Kirche wird jest wiederherges ftellt.

The clause 'in — vessels' requires the attributive construction, since the two relative clauses, otherwise required, would make the rendering very lengthy and monotonous. To avoid a useless repetition, translate the first noun 'vessel' by Schiff and the second by Fahrzeng, and connect the two clauses by the conjunction und.

7. The passage 'and — morning' may be briefly rendered thus: and arrived, favoured (begünstigt, App. § 1) by a gentle (māßig) wind, the (am) next morning in England.

8. Say 'During the night'.

9, the people = one, after which supply the conj. jedech; in ships = upon some ships.

10, come — sea, von der See herüber, which place after 'ships'; wild cry, Ungsightei.

11, was dies zu bedeuten habe.

Section 49.

THE WHITE SHIP.

III.

The prince went aboard the White Ship with one hundred and forty youthful nobles, among whom were eighteen noble ladies of the highest rank. All this gay company, with their servants and the fifty sailors, made three hundred souls aboard the White Ship.

"Give three scasks of wine, Fitz-Stephen," said the prince, "to the fifty sailors of renown. My father the king has sailed out of the harbour. What 5 time is there to make merry here, and yet reach England with the rest?"

"Prince "," said Fitz-Stephen, "before morning my fifty and the White Ship shall overtake the swiftest vessel in attendance on your father the king, if we sail at midnight."

1, to go aboard ship, fich auf ein Schiff begeben; the young noble, ber junge Abeliae; 'to be', here fich befinden; eighteen - rank, achtichn bem höchsten Range angehoring Damen. The words 'aboard the White Ship' take the last place in the clause.

2, This clause requires the following construction: With the servants (Dienerschaft, f.) and the fifty sailors consisted the whole gay company upon the White Ship of (and) three hundred persons. 3, Construe ac-4, Say 'My royal father'; has sailed out of = has cording to App. § 5. left. Supply the adverb seeken after the auxiliary. This will greatly improve 5, Also the two following passages require a different construction; say 'How long can we still make merry (sich guttich thun) here (to be placed before 'still'), if we will arrive in England at the same time (sugleich) with the others?' The words 'in England' should stand before the verbs, which arrange according to App. § 18. 6, Say "If we sail at (nm) midnight, O prince (see S. 27, N. 8), my fifty men (Leute) and the White Ship shall nevertheless (bennoth) before the coming morning overtake the swiftest ship in the service of thy royal father," replied Fitz-Stephen'.—'The swiftest - father'= the swiftest in the service of thy royal father standing ship. (Comp. S. 48, N. 6.)

Section 50.

THE WHITE SHIP.

IV.

Then 1 the prince commanded to 2 make merry; and the sailors drank out the three casks of wine, and the prince and 3 all the noble 4 company danced in the moonlight on the deck of the White Ship.

When at last she ⁵ shot ⁶ out of the harbour of Barfleur, there ⁷ was not ⁸ a sober seaman on ⁹ board. But the sails were all set ¹⁰ and ¹¹ the oars all going merrily, Fitz-Stephen at the helm.

The gay young nobles and the beautiful ladies talked, laughed, and sang. The prince encouraged ¹² the fifty sailors to row harder ¹³ yet, for ¹⁴ the honour of the White Ship.

1, Hereupon. 2, that they (man) should make merry. The verb must stand in the Present Subjunctive, as will be seen from §§ 28-30 of the App. 3, saut. 4, adesig; company = retinue. 5, bieses, to be placed after 'When'. 6, shot out of = lest. 7, there to be, sich besinden. 8, not a, auch nicht ein einziger. 9, Say 'upon the ship'. 10, gespannt. 11, Say 'and the oars moved (sich bewegen) merrily (suñig), whilst F.-St. stood at the helm'. 12, an'treiben. 13, harder = faster. 14, bem weißen Schiff au Chren.

Crash¹!—a terrific cry broke from three hundred hearts. It was the cry (S. 16, N. 10) the people ² in the distant vessels of the king had faintly ³ heard on the water. The White Ship had struck upon a rock, and ⁴ was going down!

Fitz-Stephen hurried ⁵ the prince into a boat with some few nobles. "Push off," he whispered, "and row to ⁶ the land. It is not far, and the sea is smooth 7. The 8 rest of us must die."

But ⁹, as they rowed away fast from the sinking ship, the prince heard the voice of his sister Mary calling ¹⁰ for help. He (S. 5, N. 2) never in his life had been so good as ¹¹ he was then. He ¹² cried, in an agony: "Row back at any risk! I cannot bear ¹³ to leave her!"

In an agony, vell Seelenangit; at any risk, foite es, mas es molle. 13, When there is in a principal clause a transitive verb, the object of which is contained in a following objective clause, which often assumes the form of a supine (i.e. an infinitive with 311, see S. 1, N. 2), the object in the principal clause is frequently supplied by the pronoun es, which then may be called the grammatical object. This is more particularly the case when special emphasis is given to the verb contained in the principal clause; as-

He liked to hear good music.
The deed proves, that she speaks the truth.

Er liebte es, gute Mufif zu hören. Die That beweist es, daß sie die Wahrheit spricht.

THE WHITE SHIP.

VI.

They rowed back. When 1 the prince held out his arms to catch 2 his sister, such 3 numbers lept in, that the boat was overset; and in the same instant the White Ship went 4 down.

Only two men floated ⁵: a nobleman, Godfrey by name, and a poor butcher of Rouen. By and by ⁶ another man came swimming towards them, whom ⁷ they knew, when he had pushed aside his long wet hair, to be Fitz-Stephen.

When he heard that the prince and all his retinue had 8 gone down, Fitz-Stephen, with a ghastly face 9, cried: "Woe, woe to me!" and sank 10 to the bottom.

1, Supply here the conj. aber. 2, an fangen. 3, Say 'so many persons jumped into the boat, that it capsized'. 4, Supply the adverb and after the verb. 5, to foat, an from Baffer idminmen; of Rouen, and Rouen. 6, Kurz baranf; supply the adverb ned before 'another'. He comes swimming towards me, or found and mid mid mid in gethermen. 7, Say 'in whom they recognised Fitz-Stephen, when he', etc.; to push aside = to throw back. 8, had gone down, ben Zeb erlitten. The auxiliary verb (had) may here be omitted, for: In subordinate clauses, the auxiliary verbs (haben, fein, and werken) are often omitted for the sake of conciseness and elegance; as—

Daß sie mir genommen (wurde), ist That she was taken from me is my mein größtes Leid. That she was taken from me is my greatest sorrow.

9, with — face, tetenbleich, adv. How must the words be arranged here? 10, to sink to the bottom, in die Tiese hinabssiden. Supply the adv. dann after the verb, which will establish a closer connection between this clause and the preceding one.

Section 53.

THE WHITE SHIP.

The other two clung 1 to the yard for some hours. At length (App. § 14) the young noble said faintly 2: "I am exhausted, and benumbed 3 with cold, and can hold 4 no longer. Farewell, good friend. God preserve (App. § 34) you!"

So 5 he dropped and sank, and of all the brilliant crowd 6, the poor butcher of Rouen alone was saved. In 7 the morning, some fishermen saw him floating in his sheep-skin coat 8, and got 9 him into their boat,— the sole relater of the dismal tale.

For 1 three days no one dared to carry 10 the intelligence to the king; at length they 11 sent into his presence a little boy, who, weeping 12 bitterly, and kneeling at his feet, told him that the White Ship was 13 lost, with all on board.

The king fell to the ground like ¹⁴ a dead man, and ¹⁵ never afterwards was seen to smile.—C. DICKENS, A CHILD'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

1, to cling to the yard, sich an eine Segelstange an'flammern; for some hours, einige Stunden lang; for three days, brei Tage lang. 2, fraftlos. 5, Say 'Upon this (Here-4, 'to hold', here sich halten. upon) he fell into the water and sank to the bottom (in die Tiefe hinab finfen)'. 6, crowd = company.
7, In the morning, am Morgan.
8, sheep-skin
9, nehmen; the appositional clause 'the sole relater 7, In the morning, am Morgen. 8, sheep-skin (Autre) of the dismal (training) tale (Runde)' must be placed immediately after the pronoun 'him', to which it belongs; and mark that: The apposition must always agree in number, gender, and case with the noun or pro-10, to carry an intelligence to a person, noun to which it belongs. Ginem eine Botschaft verfünden. See App. § 5. 11, man; into his presence = to (311) him, which place after 'boy'. 12, The Present Participle may be used adverbially, as in English, to denote manner or state. Say 'who told him kneeling and weeping bitterly, that', etc. - board, mit Mann und Maus gefunken fei. 14, like — man = as if dead 15, Say 'and never has one seen him (wie tot), which place after 'fell.' smile again'.

BARLEY (S. 3, N. 2).

Barley is (S. 2, N. 1) now principally used 6 to make 1 malt for 2 brewing beer and distilling spirits. It serves, however 3, as food 4 in the form of pearl barley, used 5 for thickening soups. It is also used 6 as food for poultry. Barley 7 meal is used for fattening pigs and turkeys. Barley straw furnishes us fodder 8 for cattle and horses. Barley is chiefly produced 9 in the northern regions of Europe, in Central Asia, and in North America. It is much hardier ¹⁰ than wheat, resists ¹¹ both heat and drought better, and ¹² may therefore be raised from poorer soils. It ¹⁸ is said to be the most ancient food ⁴ of (S. 3, N. 2) man.—Nelson's Readers.

2, for - spirits, zur Bierbrauerei und 1, bereiten, see S. 19, N. 7. Branntweinbrennerei, after which supply barans. 3, indeffen. 5, Say 'which one uses for thickening soups', gur Berbicfung ber 6, benuten and gebrauchen, which use alternately; as - poultry, als Hühnerfutter. 7, Say 'With barley meal one fattens (masten) pigs and turkeys (turtische Hühner)'. 8, Wiehend Pserbesutter. 9, gebaut. Where turkeys (türfische Sühner)'. 11, 'to resist' here = to must the p. p. be placed here? 10, fraftig. bear, vertragen. Use the def. art. before the first noun. 12, Say 'and can therefore be cultivated (an'hanen) upon poorer soil'. Supply the adverb and 13, It is said to be, fie foll ... fein. The verb follen after 'therefore'. is frequently used to express an assertion of another person, when it answers to the English 'it is said', 'it is reported', 'they say'.

Section 55.

THE SOLDIER AND HIS FLAG (Fahne).

On seeing ¹ a young Prussian soldier who was pressing his flag to his bosom in the agonies of death, Napoleon said to his officers: "Gentlemen ², you see that a soldier has for his flag a sentiment almost approaching ³ idolatry. Render ⁴ funeral honours at once to this young man. I regret that I do not know his name, that ⁵ I might write to his family. Do not take ⁶ away his flag; its silken folds will be an honourable shroud ⁷ for him.—General Bourrienne ⁸.

1, When the Present Participle is used in adverbial clauses of time, it must generally, by the help of one of the conjunctions als (when), nadhem (after), indem (while, whilst), and walkens (while, whilst), be changed into a finite verb, i.e. one with a personal termination; thus—Hearing his opponent speak in this way, his features assumed an expression of contempt.

Having given his orders, the officer rode quickly away.

Looking at me in a suppliant manner, a tear glittered in her eye.

I saw it cuben passing the house this morning.

Als er feinen Gegner fo fprechen hörte, nahmen feine Buge ben Ausbruck ber Berachtnug an.

Nachdem er seine Befehle erteilt hatte, ritt vor Offizier schnell von dannen.

Indem fie mich bittend anfah, glangte eine Thrane in ihrem Auge.

Ich fah es, als ich heute Morgen beim Saufe vorüberging.

Consequently, the above passage must be rendered thus: 'When Napoleon saw (bemerken) a young Prussian soldier who was pressing his flag to (au) his (S. 43, N. 9, A) bosom (Gerz) in the agonies of death (im Tedesdampfe, which place after 'flag'), he said to his officers': etc.

2, Say 'You see, gentlemen'.

3, 'to approach' here = to border (an emaß grenzen). For the construction see S. 16, N. 4.

4, Say 'Bury this young man (Jüngling) without delay with military honours'.

5, that — write, um ... fdreiben zu feunen. He writes to me once a month, Er idreibt einmal menatlid an mid, 6, Supply the pronoun ibm (from him) after the Imperative.

7, Leidenztud, n.; 'for him' must be rendered by the dat, of the pers. pron., which place after the copula 'will'.

8, Der General Benrrienne war Privatseter und spaterer Biegraph Mapeleons bes Ersten.

Section 56.

OUR CULTIVATED 1 NATIVE 2 PLANTS.

Most 3 of the fruits which grow on trees, such as our apples and pears, have 4 been greatly 5 improved and raised 6 above their natural state by grafting and other artificial means.

Of ⁷ cultivated native plants, the chief are celery ⁸, parsley, the cabbage, turnip, carrot, parsnips, and the hop. The onion is ⁹ a native of South France, the lettuce of Greece, the radish of China, and the rhubarb, now ¹⁰ so largely used in pies and puddings, of Russia. Cress comes from ¹¹ Persia, spinach from some ¹² part of Asia, and the Jerusalem artichoke ¹³ from Brazil.—Hewitt, Physical Geography of England AND Wales.

1, verebelt. 2, einheimisch. 3, The clause 'Most — trees' may be briefly rendered by 'Die meisten Baumsindste'. 4, Here follows the adverbial clause 'by grafting — means'. 5, bebeutent. 6, 'raised — state' may be elegantly rendered by the p. p. 'cultivated' (verebelt). 7, Say 'The principal cultivated native plants are', etc. 8, See S. 3, N. 2. I should recommend to repeat the art. before each of the following six nouns. 9, is a native of, stamm ane. 10, 'Now — puddings'. This elliptic clause must be completed in German. Say 'which is now so largely (much) used in pies (Basteten) and puddings'. 11, aus. 12, 'some', here irgent ein. 13, Erbartischoft, f.

Section 57.

THE BEQUEST 1.

I.

An old avaricious English gentleman ² had three sons, of whom one ³ was a good-natured but light-minded fellow. Whenever (S. 18, N. 6) he fell ⁴ into any trouble, he excused himself on ⁵ the ground that ⁶ he was seeing life. His prodigality, however, annoyed ⁷ his father so much ⁸, that he resolved to disinherit (S. 1, N. 2) him. His friends interceded ⁹ in his favour, but their efforts were in vain.

When the old gentleman ¹⁰ felt his end approaching, he called his sons together ¹¹, and said to them: "I leave ¹² to my son John my whole estate ¹³, and desire him ¹⁴ to be frugal." John ¹⁵, in a sorrowful tone, as is usual on such occasions, prayed heaven to prolong his father's life, and give him health to enjoy the gift 16 himself.

4. to fall 1. Das Bermächtnie. 2, Englander. 3, Say 'the one'. into trouble, in Berlegenheit geraten. 5, on the ground, ramit. 6, daß er bas leben fennen lerne. Comp. App. §§ 28 and 30. 7, verbrießen. See 9, to intercede in a person's favour, zu gunsten 8, sehr. einer Berson sprechen. He interceded in my favour, er sprach zu meinen gunsten. Supply the adverb giver (it is true) after the verb. 10, herr; to feel one's end approaching, fein Ente heran naben fühlen. 11, together, zu fich. 13, Besitung, f. 14, The con-12, 'to leave', here = to bequeath. struction of the Infinitive with an Accusative, so frequently employed in English as an imitation of the Latin and Greek, is unknown in German. Such constructions must be rendered by a subordinate clause introduced by the conjunction bag; as-

I know bim to be an industrious man. Ich weiß, bag er ein fleißiger Mann ift.

See also App. § 34, and say 'and wish that he may be frugal (parjam)'.

15, This passage requires the following construction: 'As (wie) it is usual (notify) on (vei) such occasions, John (App. § 15) implored heaven in (unit) a sorrowful tone to prolong', etc. The noun Simmel is always used with the article.

16, Bermächtnis.

Section 58.

THE BEQUEST.

II.

The father continued: "I leave to my son James my money¹, amounting² to four thousand pounds³." "Ah, father," said⁴ James, of course in⁴ great affliction, "may (App. § 34) heaven give you life and health to enjoy the gift yourself." The⁶ father, then addressing the spendthrift, said: "As⁶ for you, Dick, you will never come to good; you will never be rich. I leave you a shilling to (S. 19, N. 7) buy a halter." "Ah, father," said Dick in a most melancholy voice, "may heaven give you life and health to enjoy the gift yourself!"—Anonymous.

1, 'money', here = ready money, have Geb.

2, to amount to something, fid auf etwas belaufen. See S. 16, N. 4.

3, Das Pfund, one pound English money, never takes the sign of the Plural in German, and the same refers to 'bic Marf', a German coin corresponding to one shilling English.

4, said = exclaimed; in = with.

5, Say 'Upon this the father addressed himself (fid wenden) to (an) the spendthrift and said'.

6, As — Dick, Bas bid betrifft, Richard.

7, Introduce this clause by the adverbial conjunction for and see App. § 15; to come to good, ju etwas Rechtem femmen.

8, The German language, as a rule, requires that the person for whose benefit an action is performed, is clearly indicated. When this is not done by a noun in the dative case, it is generally done by means of the dative of a personal pronoun; as—

I will buy a hat. We have built a house. Ich will mir einen Sut faufen. Wir haben uns ein Sans gebant.

Supply, therefore, the necessary pronoun after the conjunction um; a halter = a rope, Striff, m. 9, Render 'most' here by 'hôchit'.

Section 59.

WHEAT.

Wheat is the most valuable 1 of all grains, because 2 from it, chiefly, we obtain the flour of which bread is made. In order to make 3 flour, the grains of wheat 4 are crushed 5 between stones in a mill. The crushed mass is then separated 6 into two parts,—bran 7 and flour. Bran is the outer husk of the grain, which is used (S. 4, N. 4) for 8 fattening cattle, etc. It 10 does no harm, however, to mix the bran with the flour; the mixture is more nourishing than the pure flour. The bran makes the flour and the bread darker in colour; but this is no disadvantage, for brown bread is both 11 cheaper and more nourishing than white bread. Bread 12 is often artificially whitened by 13 the addition of alum and other injurious substances. Wheat is 14 chiefly grown in France, Germany, Austria, Southern Russia, (S. 46, N. 6) the British Isles, Australia, the United States, Canada, Egypt, and Northern Africa.—Nelson's Readers.

2, Say 'because it yields (liefern) 1, wertvoll; 'grain', here Rornart, f. 3, bereiten. us chiefly the flour for our bread'. 4, Form a compound noun of 'wheat' and 'grains' (Körner). 5, zermahlen. 6, fondern. 7, The prep. 'in' must be repeated before this and the following noun. 8, for - cattle, zur Biehfütternug. 9, 11. f. w., i. e. und fo weiter. - however, Ubrigens ichabet es nichts. 11, both ... and, for ohl ... als auch. 12, Say 'Bread receives (erholten) often an artificial whiteness through an addition', etc. 13, When 'by' is equivalent to 'through', it must be rendered by burch. 14, Say 'grows chiefly', in order to make the construction more concise than it would be by using a p.p., which would have its place at the end of the whole clause, and would thus make the construction too lengthy.

Section 60.

OCCUPATION OF THE ANGLO-SAXONS.

Fishing (S. 40, N. 9) was a principal occupation, owing¹ to the frequent abstinences from flesh-meat, enjoined² by (S. 59, N. 13) a superstitious ritual³. Eels were taken⁴ in immense numbers in the marsh lands of the Eastern counties; salmon in the river Dee; herrings along the shores of Suffolk, Kent, and Sussex, in⁵ their annual migration; while larger species, as⁶ the whale and grampus³, were captured in the open sea. Hunting and falconry were the field-sports⁶ of the great. The beasts of the forest or chase, which were protected by fines, and reserved⁶ for privileged persons, were the ¹⁰ stag, roebuck, hare, and rabbit. The wolf, fox, and boar might¹¹ be killed by¹² any one with impunity, if (S. 27, N. 7) found without¹³ the limits of the chase or forest. The wild duck and heron were the ¹⁴ common quarry.—Milner, History of England.

1, Say 'in consequence of the frequent fasting'.

2, an'erdnen. See S. 7, N. 3, B.

3, Nitus, m.

4, 'to take', here = to catch; numbers = multitudes, Menge, f.; marsh lands, Marschgegenden.

5, in = upon.

8, Bergnis gungen.

9, reservieren.

10, I propose to use the following seven nouns in the plural and without the article, in order to avoid the frequent repetition of the same.

11, Use the Imperf. of dursen.

12, by — impunity, ven jedermann ungestrast.

13, without = outside, außerhalb.

14, Say 'the booty of all'.

Section 61.

TENDER', TRUSTY, AND TRUE.

Ι.

(Extract from a Sermon preached to a congregation of children at Chicago.)

When ² I was in the Sunday-school, and had just begun to read about ³ David, I ⁴ did not feel sure he ever was a real baby, and had to be fed with a teaspoon; or that he ever was a real little boy ⁵ that ⁶ went to school as I did, and played marbles ⁷, and had a peg-top ⁸, a jack-knife ⁹, some slate pencils, ever ¹⁰ so many buttons, and a piece of string ¹¹, all in one pocket; that ¹² he ever had to try hard not to cry when he went to school very cold ¹³ mornings; or ¹⁴ that the teacher spoke sharp to him, when the little chap had tried ¹⁵ his best to get ¹⁶ his lesson, and ¹⁷ did not get it very well.

2, Say 'When I went to the Sunday-1, Bartfühlend, zwerläffig und treu. school', and supply the adverb noth after the subject. 3, über. 'I could scarcely imagine, that he ever really had been a little child and had to be fed with a teaspoon (und mit einem Theeloffel habe gefüttert werben muffen)'. By carefully reading §§ 29 and 30 of the Appendix, the student will see that the verbs depending on the governing verb 'imagine' must stand in the Perfect of the Subjunctive Mood. According to S. 52, N. 8, however, the auxiliary 'sei' may be omitted in the clause 'that he ever really had been a little child'. 5, Sunge. The auxiliary 'fei' may again be omitted here.
6, that = who; as I did = 'like myself', which place immediately after the relat. pron. 7, Schuffer. Remember that both this and the next clause are depending on the relative clause 'that - did'; place, therefore, the verb 'played' after 'marbles', and the verb 'had' after 'peg-top'. 8, Rreisel, m. 9, Tafchenmeffer, n. 10, ever so many, eine Iluzahl ven, i.e. no end of. 11, ein Stuck Binbfaben. 12, that - hard, daß er fich je habe auftrengen muffen. 13, cold mornings, an einem fehr falten Morgen, which place after the subject. 'To go to school', gur (or in bie) Schule gehen. 14, Say 'or that the teacher had ever scolded (schelten) the little fellow (Bursche), when he had', etc. 15, to try one's best, sich Müse geben.

16, to get one's lesson = to learn one's lesson, seine Lestion ersennen.

17, Say 'and had not learnt it well', and supply the adverb bed (nevertheless) after the objective pronoun 'it'. For the position of the verb see App. § 17.

Section 62.

TENDER, TRUSTY, AND TRUE.

II.

But you¹ know, ministers² have to find out all about such men as David; and I have found out enough to³ make me feel sure he was once a little boy, just like one of you; that he had⁴ to learn verses, like you; and didn't like (S. 20, N. 2, A) it, like you; and that he did not like to go to bed early, or to get up early, like you.

I rather ⁶ fear that, in the summer, he ⁶ ate green apples, unripe melons, hard peaches, and sour plums, as ⁷ you do; and ⁸ got sick, and was very sorry, and had to take ⁹ medicine, as you do; that he said he would (App. § 28) never do it again, and that he ¹⁰ then never did do it again, as ¹¹ I hope you will neither.

1, Use the 2nd pers. pl., and after the verb supply the adverb 'ja', which will be equivalent to the English 'I am sure'.

2, hie Pfarrer, before which supply the conj. has. Have to = must; to find out, and finding machen; all—David = all (S. 3, N. 7) that relates (fid begiehen) to (auf) such men as David.

3, Say 'to (S. 19, N. 7) be convinced, that', etc. Just—you, wie ihr. 4, The auxiliaries 'to have' and 'to be' followed by the infinitive of another verb, must generally be rendered by the auxiliary verb of mood 'mūjen'; as—I have to do it, I find.

5, fait, adv.; see S. 5, N. 2.

6, The subject 'he' must immediately follow the conj. 'that'.

7, as you do, wie ihr.

8, that he became (werben) ill; 'and—sorry', say 'felt (empfuben) bitter repentance'.

9, 'to take', here cin'unhum.

10, Here follows the pron. 'it'.

Now ¹, just here I was trying to see what ² sort of boy David was when he grew ³ bigger; and, when I shut my eyes, and so tried ⁴ to see it all clearly, I heard a noise right ⁵ under my study window. This was ⁶ about ¹ four o'clock, Friday afternoon; the schools were out, and the children running home ⁶. I turned my head to see what was the matter ९, and then (App. § 14) I saw what I want ¹⁰ to tell you. About ten boys were standing together ¹¹. All at once a big boy knocked ¹² a little boy ¹³ down, and rolled him in the snow ¹⁴. The little boy got up ¹⁵, and said: "What ¹⁶ did you do that for?" Then ¹¹ the big boy again approached the little boy¹³, and I believe ¹⁵ he would have knocked him down again¹ゥ, had not the little boy ¹³ walked sobbing away ²⁰ towards home.

1, Here wollte ich nun sehen.
2, what sort of, was sur ein.
3, werden.
4, sich bemühen.
5, just under the window of my study.
6, Here sollten.
8, The English 'home', after a verb denoting motion, must be rendered by uach Sause, and 'at home', after a verb denoting rest, by zu Sause.
9, the matter is, es giebt, verb impers. Use the Present of the Sudj., according to App. § 32.
10, The auxiliary verb of mood 'wollen' expresses wish and want; as—

Was wollen Sie? What do you wish? Bu wem wollen Sie? Who is it you want?

12, to knock down, zu Boben ichlagen. 13, The 11. neben einander. 14, Supply here the adverb noun 'boy' need not be repeated here. 16, What \dots for = Why. 'about' (umber). 15, to get up, auf'stehen. Use the 2nd pers. sing. 17, Upon this, S. 44, N. 4. 18, Supply here the conj. baß. Read carefully § 36 of the App., and construe accordingly. Use the Pluperfect Subj. in both clauses, and observe that the verb genen always requires the auxiliary fein. See S. 29, N. 3. 19. noch einmal. 20, away towards home = home.

"There," I said, when I had seen that, "I know what David never did do: he (S. 5, N. 2) never struck a boy that 1 was no match for him; he never was a coward like that big boy; for he 2 is a coward to 3 strike a small boy so; and those 4 others are not the boys (S. 16, N. 10) they ought 5 to be, to 6 stand by and see it done." I saw such 7 a thing in a picture once, which was called the Wolf and the Lamb. A great, cruel boy 8 meets a small, delicate lad 9 who has lost his father, and stands over him with 10 his fist doubled, just as I saw that boy stand under my study window. I think 11 if 12 any 13 boy in this church were 14 to see that picture, he would instantly say 15: "What a shame to use 16 a boy so who is not your match!"

'fatherless', which place before 'lad'. 10, mit geballter Faust. 11, When the verb 'to think' is used in the meaning of 'to be of opinion', it must be rendered by 'glauben', and when it is used in the meaning of 'to be engaged in thinking', by 'benfen'. 12, The conj. 'if' must always be rendered 13, any boy = any (irgent) one of you. 14, Render the words 'were to see' by the Imperf. Subj. of jehen. 15, and rufen. use = to abuse, mig'handeln.

Once I read in the Life¹ of Dr. Channing, who was one of the best men that ever (jɛ) lived² (a³ great deal better than David, because he lived⁴ in a better time), what he once did, when he was a⁵ boy and saw a⁵ thing like that. Little Channing was one of the kindestⁿ and most tender-hearted boys I⁵ ever heard of. I will tell you a story to show you how ⁵ kind he was, and tender, and true. One day he found in a bush a nest full¹o of young birds just out of the shell. Children, did¹¹ you ever see a¹² nest full of birds just out of the shell?—little tiny¹³, downy things¹⁴, with¹⁵ hardly more feathers than an oyster? The birds which William Channing found, were just of that kind; and when he touched them with his fingers, and felt how soft and warm they were, they all began to gape¹⁶, very ¹ⁿ much as you do when I preach¹⁶ a very long sermon.

Well, little (S. 10, N. 2) Channing knew 1 the birds did not gape because he preached a long sermon, but (S. 6, N. 10) because they were hungry. So 2 what did he do? He ran straight 3 home (S. 63, N. 8), got 4 some nice soft crumbs of bread, and fed the little birds with them (S. 4, N. 5, B); and 5 after that he fed them regularly every day after 6 having come home from school. But 7 one day (S. 19, N. 2), when he went to 8 the nest, there it lay on the ground, torn and bloody, and the little birds all dead; and the father-bird 9 was crying 10 on a wall, and the mother-bird 11 was crying on a tree. Then little Channing tried 12 to tell them that he did not kill 13 their poor young brood; that 14 he never could do such a mean, cruel thing as that, and that 15, on the contrary 16, he had tried to feed them. But it was no use; the little birds could not understand him, and 17 kept on crying; and at last he sat down, and wept bitterly.

Now¹ this was the sort of boy Channing was; and I was going² to tell you that (S. 66, N. 15) one day he heard of a big boy beating (S. 16, N. 4) a little one³, like that bad boy⁴ under my window. Channing was a little boy; he was a little man when he was full grown⁵; but then he had a big soul. I was going² to say he had a soul as big as a church; but indeed⁶ his soul was bigger than all the churches in⁻ the world;—and when he heard of that⁶ cruel boy, who was ever⁶ so much larger than himself, he went right up to him, and said: "Did¹o you strike that little boy?" "Yes, I did¹¹; and what then?"—"Then," said Channing, "you are a coward, because he was no match for you; and now I am going² to whip¹² you for doing it." Because he had a big soul, and though he was a small boy, he¹³ went in, and fought for the right. That was the only time he ¹⁴ ever fought in his life. ON PERFUMERY 1.

The ² exquisite pleasure we enjoy from the smell of sweet flowers is ³ alone sufficient to account for the love of perfumery. Flowers pass away ⁴ so quickly that we naturally desire to preserve their sweetness ⁵ as ⁶ long as we can, and in this our perfumers succeed ⁷ admirably. The perfume ⁸ of most flowers depends upon an oil, which ⁹ is peculiar to the plant, almost every sweet-scented ¹⁰ plant having its own peculiar oil; and, what is of ¹¹ more importance: these oils belong to a class called ¹² essential or volatile, because they become ¹³ volatile when ¹⁴ heated.

1, there Parfimerien. 2, Say 'the great enjoyment which the smell (Duft, m.) of sweet (wehlriedend) flowers affords (genühren) us'. Place the pron. 'us' immediately after the rel. pron. 3, is — perfumery = explains sufficiently (zur Genüge) our love for perfumery. 4, to pass away, verwelfen. 5, Wehlgeruch, m. 6, as — can, so lange wie möglich. For the position of the verbs see App. § 19. 7, to succeed, gesingen, v. intr. (used with sein), governs the dative of the person; as—

He succeeds admirably in this. Dies gelingt ihm vortrefflich.

Construe the above clause accord to the preceding example; perfumer, Pars fümenr. 8, 'perfume', here = scent, Duft, m. 9, The relat clause 'which — plant' is best rendered by the attributive construction, as explained in S. 48, N. 6; peculiar, eigentümlich. 10, odorous, wehlriechenb; its own

The common or fixed 1 oils, on the contrary, such as olive 2 or linseedoil, do not evaporate. This 3 may be easily illustrated, thus: If a piece of writing-paper be touched 4 with a fixed oil or grease, (S. 27, N. 8) it leaves 5 a stain, which 6, upon being held before the fire, will not disappear.

Now ⁷, if any ⁸ plant has a peculiar smell or taste, it is ⁴ generally found that its essential oil is the cause of this (S. 4, N. 5, B). Consequently ⁹, if we extract this, we really obtain ¹⁰ the essence.—Prof. Ascher.

1, sest; on the contrary, singegen. See S. 15, N. 3. 2, as olive or linseedoil, wie das Oliven oder Leinsamenöl. When two compound nouns which have

ON INSTINCT'.

The ² following most curious instance of a change of instinct is mentioned by Darwin. The bees carried ³ over to ⁴ Barbadoes and the Western Isles ceased ⁵ to lay up any honey after the first year, as ⁶ they found it not useful to them. They found the weather so fine, and the materials ⁷ for making honey so plentiful, that they quitted ⁸ their grave, prudent ⁹, and mercantile ¹⁰ character, became exceedingly profligate and debauched ¹¹, ate ¹² up their capital, resolved to work no more, and ¹³ amused themselves by flying about the sugar-houses and stinging the blacks. The ¹⁴ fact is, that ¹⁵, by ¹⁶ putting animals in different situations ¹⁷, you may ¹⁸ change, and even reverse, any of their original propensities. Spallanzani ¹⁹ brought ²⁰ up an eagle upon ²¹ bread and milk, and fed a dove on ²² raw beef.—Rev. S. Smith.

1, Über ben tierischen Sustinft. 2, This clause requires a different rendering; let us say 'Darwin gives the following most (hochs) curious example of a change of the animal instinct'. The last noun requires the def. art., as explained

3, to carry over, hini'berbringen. The Perfect Participle in S. 3, N. 2. qualifies the noun 'bees'. According to S. 7, N. 3, the words 'carried - Isles' may be rendered either by the attributive construction or by forming of them a relative clause. I venture to propose the use of the attributive construction as the more elegant of the two modes of rendering, and more especially in 4, When the preorder to avoid a repetition of subordinate clauses. position 'to', in connection with a verb denoting motion, stands before the names of countries, towns, islands, etc., it must be rendered by 'nath'.

5, Here follow the words 'after — year'; to lay up honey, einen Worrat von 6, See S. 41, N. 6; it = this; not useful, nicht mehr von Honig an fammeln. 7, materials - plentiful, Materialien zur honigbereitung in foldem Uberfluffe vorhauden. 8, auf'geben. 9, prudent = cautious. 13, und fich fantilisch. 11, unmäßig. 12, to eat up, auf zehren. baran erachten. PETER THE GREAT AND THE MONK.

Peter the Great ordered 1 many foreign books to be translated into the Russian language, and among others 2 "Puffendorf's 3 Introduction to the Knowledge of the States of Europe." A monk, to whom the translation of this book was committed 4, presented 5 it some time after 6 to the Emperor. The monarch examined the translation; at 8 a certain chapter, however, he suddenly changed 9 countenance, turned indignantly to the monk, and said: "Fool, what did I order 10 thee to do? Is this a translation?" He 11 then referred to the original and showed the poor monk a paragraph in which the author had spoken with great asperity 12 of the Russians, but which had not been translated. "Go," resumed the monarch, "and instantly carry out 13 what I have bidden thee to do. It is not to (S. 19, N. 7) flatter my subjects that I 14 have ordered this book to be translated, but (S. 6, N. 10) to instruct 15 and reform 16 them!"-ANONYMOUS.

1, Use the auxiliary verb of mood 'laffen' as a translation of 'to order', 'to command', and 'to cause', when these verbs are connected with the auxiliary 'to be' and the Past Participle of another verb; as-

The emperor ordered the ringleaders to be shot.

The admiral commanded the ships to be drawn up in order of battle.

He caused the money to be paid to me.

Der Raiser ließ die Anführer er: ich ie Beu.

Der Abmiral ließ bie Schiffe in Schlacht= ordnung aufftellen.

THE BEAUTY OF THE EYE.

I.

Look 1 how beautiful the human eye is, excelling 2 in beauty the eye of every creature! The eyes of many of the lower animals are doubtless very beautiful. All 3 of us must have admired the bold, fierce, bright eye of the eagle; the large, gentle, brown eye of the ox; the treacherous green eye of the cat, waxing 4 and waning 5 like the moon, as 6 the sun shines upon it (S. 4, N. 5) or 7 deserts it; the pert eye of the sparrow; the sly eye of the fox; the peering 8 little bead 9 of black enamel in 10 the mouse's head; the 11 gem-like eye which 12 redeems the toad from ugliness; and the intelligent, affectionate expression, which 13 looks out from the human-like eye of the horse and dog. There 14 are these and the eyes of many other animals full of beauty; but 15 there is a glory which excelleth in the eye of man.

1, Use the 2nd pers. sing.

2, Say 'and how it excelleth in (an) beauty the eye of every other creature!' The words 'in beauty' should be placed before the verb.

3, All of us, wir alle; all of them, sie alle; all of you, ify (or Sie) alle. Render the words 'must have' by 'have certainly'. The p. p. should be placed after 'eagle'.

THE BEAUTY OF THE EYE.

II.

We realise ¹ this fully only when ² we gaze into the faces of those we love. It ³ is their eyes (S. 16, N. 10) we look at ⁴ when we are near them, and ⁵ recall when we are ⁶ far away. The face is a ⁷ blank without the eye, and the eye seems to concentrate every ⁸ feature in itself. It is the eye that smiles, not the lips; it is the eye that listens ⁹, not the ear; it ¹⁰ that frowns, not the brow; it ¹¹ that mourns, not the voice. Every sense and every faculty ¹² seems to ¹³ flow toward it, and find expression through it ¹⁴, nay ¹⁵, to be lost in it; for all must have felt at times as ¹⁶ if a man's eye was not a part of him, but (S. 6, N. 10) the man himself; as ¹⁷ if it had not merely life, but also a ¹⁶ personality of its own;—as ¹⁹ if it was not only a living, but also a thinking being.—Prof. G. Wilson.

A FUNERAL DANCE 1.

Drums were beating ², horns blowing ³, and ⁴ people were seen all running in one direction. The cause was a funeral dance. I joined ⁵ the crowd, and soon found myself in ⁶ the midst of the entertainment ⁷. The dancers were most (\bbeta \text{thick}\beta \text{tip}(\beta)) grotesquely ⁸ got up ⁹. About a dozen huge ostrich feathers adorned their helmets. Leopard or black and white monkey-skins ¹⁰ were suspended ¹¹ from their shoulders, and a leather, tied (S. 7, N. 3, A) round the waist, covered a large iron bell which was strapped ¹² upon the loins of each dancer; this they rang ¹³ to the time of the dance. A large crowd got up in ¹⁴ this style ¹⁵ created ¹⁶ an indescribable hubbub, heightened ¹⁷ by the blowing of ¹⁸ horns and the beating of seven nogaras ¹⁹ of various notes ²⁰. Every dancer wore ²¹ an antelope's horn ²² suspended round the neck, which he blew occasionally in ²³ the height of his excitement.—Sir S. Baker, The Albert N'yanza.

Comp. S. 36, N. 7, A, B, and C, and mark further:

A. Although the first component of Compound Nouns is generally in the singular, some require the plural; as—Kinderstube, f., nursery; Bilbergallerie, f., picture-gallery.

B, i. The first component takes sometimes one of the genitive inflections &, e&, ii, en, or en&, according to the declension it belongs to; as—Königssmantel, m., royal mantel; Tageslicht, n., day-light; Helbenmut, in., heroism; Friedensliebe, f., love of peace.

2. We find, however, the terminations & or consider used as a connecting link between the two components for the mere sake of euphony, even in cases where the first component is a feminine noun; this is more especially the case when the first component is in itself a compound expression, when it has one of the derivative suffixes beit, ing, ling, feit, shaft, tum, ung, or when it is a noun of foreign origin terminating in ion, at, and at; as—Gebuttotag, m., birthday; Sochzeitsgeschent, n., wedding present; Beisbeitssehre, f., philosophy; Religious bulbung, f., toleration; Universitätsgericht, n., university court.

C. In a few compound nouns we find one of the euphonic terminations c, cr, and I used as a connecting link between the two components; as—Lages werf, n., day's work; Affermittwoch, m., Ash-Wednesday; Seibelberre, bilberry.

D, r. When the first component consists of the stem of a verb, it is often joined to the second component without a connecting link; as—Edyreibe buth, n., copy-book.

2. Sometimes a euphonic c is used as a connecting link; as—Beiges finger, m., forefinger; Salteninft, m., place of stopping. 23, in — excitement = in the highest excitement.

ABSOLUTION BEFOREHAND 1.

When Tezel ² was at Leipzig, in the sixteenth century (App. § 9), and had collected ³ a great deal of money from all ranks ⁴ of people, a nobleman, who suspected imposition, put ⁵ the question to him: "Can you ⁶ grant absolution for a sin which a man ⁷ shall intend to commit in future?" "Yes," replied the frontless commissioner, "but on ⁸ condition that a proper ⁹ sum of money be actually ¹⁰ paid down." The noble (S. 5, N. 2) instantly produced the sum demanded, and in return ¹¹ received a diploma ¹², sealed and signed by Tezel, absolving ¹³ him from the unexplained crime which he intended to commit. Not ¹⁴ long after, when Tezel was about (S. 6, N. 4) to leave Leipzig, the nobleman made ¹⁵ inquiry respecting the road he would probably travel ¹⁶, waited ¹⁷ for him in ambush at a convenient place, attacked and robbed him, then ¹⁸ beat him soundly with a stick, sent him back to Leipzig with ¹⁹ his chest empty, and ²⁰ at parting said: "This is the fault ²¹ I intended to commit, and for which I have your absolution ²²."—Rev. STAND UP¹ FOR WHATEVER IS TRUE, MANLY, AND LOVELY².

I.

In ³ no place in the world has individual character more ⁴ weight than at a public school. Remember ⁵ this, I beseech ⁶ you, all you boys who ⁷ are getting into the upper forms. Now ⁸ is the time when you may ⁹ have more ¹⁰ influence for good or evil in the society you live in than you ever can have ¹¹ again. Quit ¹² yourselves like men, then; speak out ¹³ and stand up for whatever is true, manly, and lovely. Never (S. 68, N. 2) try to be popular ¹³, but only do your duty, and help ¹⁴ others to do theirs; and when you leave the school (S. 27, N. 8), the ¹⁵ tone of feeling in it will be higher than you found it, and so you ¹⁶ will do good to ¹⁷ generations of your countrymen yet unborn. For boys follow one another in herds like sheep, for ¹⁸ good or evil; they ¹⁹ hate thinking, and ²⁰ have rarely any settled ²¹ principles.

1, Use the 2nd pers. pl.; whatever=all that; see S. 3, N. 7.

3, In no place=Nowhere. 4, more weight=greater influence. 5, Remember this=Think (2nd pers. pl.) of it; see S. 4, N. 5, B.

6, bitten.

7, Der (m. sing.), bie (f. sing.), and bie (pl.) must be used as relative pronouns in reference to a personal pronoun of the first or second person of either number, and also in reference to the personal pronoun of the third person plural (Sie) used instead of the second person plural. For the sake of emphasis the personal pronoun is frequently repeated after the relative pronoun, and the verb must then agree with the personal pronoun, as the following examples will show.

Berschmähst bu mich, die ich beine Freundin bin?

Dost thou disdain me, suho am your friend?

Ich, der ich dich von deinen Feinden befreite.

I, who delivered thee from thy enemies.

Construe the clauses 'who — forms' accordingly; to get into the upper forms, in the obern Alaffen verfest werden.

8, Say 'The time has [is] come'; when, wo.

9, may have = exercise (and infer likely.

10, Say 'more good or evil influence upon (anf) the company surrounding you (Gune Umgebung)'.

11, have = exercise.

12, Say 'Be therefore manly'.

13, 'to speak out', here getade und frei herand prechen; 'to be popular', here sich besiebt machen.

14, When the following verbs are used in connection with another verb governed by them, that verb stands in the Infinitive without the preposition 311 (Comp. S. 34, N. 10):

A. The auxiliary verbs of mood: burfen, feunen, megen, muffen, fellen, wollen, and lassen. (See Expl. 1.)

- B. The verbs: bleiben, fahren, gehen, finden, fühlen, heißen (to bid, to command), helsen, hören, lehren (also with zu, Comp. S. 43, N. 10), sernen, machen, sehen, and reiten. (See Expl. 2.)
- C. The verb haben in phrases like Expl. 3.
- D. The verb thun followed by nichts. (See Expl. 4.)

EXAMPLES.

1. Ich mag gern schreiben.

I am very fond of writing; I like to write.

2. Der Diener fant feinen herrn tot am Boben liegen. The servant found his master lying dead on the floor.

3. Er hat gut reden.

It is all very well for him to talk.

4. Er thut nichts als effen und trinfen.

He does nothing but eat and drink.

15, the — higher = the moral tone of the same (gen.) will be a higher one (S. 67, N. 3).

16, Supply here the adverb u.ch.

17, an; remember that the p. p. 'unborn' is used as an adj. and qualifies the noun 'generations'.

18, Say 'as well in evil as in good'.

19, bas Denfen ift ihnen unbequem.

20, Supply here the pron. 'they'.

21, feft befimmt.

Every school (S. 5, N. 2), indeed, has its own traditionary standard ¹ of right and wrong, which cannot be transgressed with impunity, marking ² certain things as low ³ and blackguard, and certain others as lawful and right. This standard is ever ⁴ varying, though it changes only slowly and little by little. It ⁶ is the leading ⁶ boys only, who (S. 15, N. 3), subject ⁷ to such standard, give, for ⁸ the time being, the tone to ⁹ all the rest, and ¹⁰ make the school either a noble institution for ¹¹ the training of Christian Englishmen, or a place ¹² where a young boy will get ¹³ more evil than if he were turned out ¹⁴ to make his ¹⁵ own way in London streets.—Thos. Hughes, Tom Brown's School Days.

1, Μαββιαβ, m.; 'of', here für.

2, bezeichnen, see S. 16, N. 4, and introduce the clause with the conj. und.

3, schänblich und gemein.

4, bestänbig.

5, 'It is', here Go sind.

6, tenangebend.

7, diesem Maßstab unterwersen.

8, zur Zeit.

9, to = for.

10, Supply here the rel. pron. 'who'; to make the school a noble institution, and ter Schuse eine sittliche Anstalt machen.

11, to (S. 19, N. 7) educate Christian (christishgesinnt) Englishmen.

12, Stätte, f.

13, 'to get', here sich an'eignen.

14, hinaus'steßen; use the First Conditional.

15, his—streets=his fortune in (ans) the streets of London.

WORK 1 IS A GREAT COMFORTER.

Two neighbouring gardeners had the misfortune of ² having their crop of early peas killed by frost. The one called ³ upon the other to condole ⁴ with him. "Ah," cried he, "how unfortunate ⁵ we have been, neighbour!

Do you ⁶ know? I have done nothing but fret ever since ⁷. But it seems you have there a fine healthy ⁸ crop ⁹ coming ¹⁰ up already; what ¹¹ is it?" "This?" cried the other gardener, "why ¹², it is a crop of peas (S. 16, N. 10) I sowed (S. 48, N. 2) immediately after my loss." "What ¹³, coming up already?" replied the fretter ¹⁴. "Yes, while you were fretting ¹⁵, I ¹⁶ was working." "What! don't you fret when you have a loss?" "Yes, but I always put it off ¹⁷ until after I have repaired ¹⁸ the mischief ¹⁹." "Why, then you have no need to fret at all." "True ²⁰," replied the industrious gardener, "I ²¹ find working better than fretting." —Anonymous.

1, Die Arbeit ist eine süße Trösterin.

2, of — frost = that (S. 1, N. 3) their young peas were (S. 2, N. 1) destroyed by (durch, followed by the def. art.) frost.

3, to call upon a person, einen besuchen.

4, to condole with a person, einem sein Beileid bezeigen.

5, I have been unfortunate, es ist mir ungsüsssich er since = 'the whole time', which place after the auxiliary; 'but fret', als mich geärgert.

8, frästig.

9, Saat, f.

10, 'to come up' here hübsch grün aussehen.

11, Was ist's sür eine?

12, ei; it — peas = they are (es sünd) young peas.

13, Wie; coming up already? = and they look already so (supply hübsch) green?

PERSEVERANCE FINDS ITS REWARD.

Robert Bruce, restorer ¹ of the Scottish monarchy, being ² pursued one day by the enemy, was ³ obliged ⁴ to seek refuge in a barn and to spend ⁵ the night there. In ⁶ the morning, when he awoke, he saw a spider climbing up ⁷ the ⁸ beam of the roof. The spider fell ⁹ down to the ground, but immediately tried to climb up again, when it a ¹⁰ second time fell to the ground ¹¹. It made a third attempt, which also failed. Twelve times did (S. 32, N. 11) the little spider try to climb up the beam, and twelve times it fell down again, but the ¹⁰ thirteenth time it succeeded ¹² and ¹³ gained the top ¹⁴ of the beam. The king (S. 5, N. 2) immediately got up ¹⁵ from his lowly ¹⁶ couch, and said: "This little spider has taught (S. 42, N. 4) me perseverance; I will follow its example. Twelve times have ¹⁷ I been beaten by the enemy. I will try my fortune once more!" He did so ¹³, and won the next battle. The king became the spider's scholar.—N. Goodbrich.

1, Use the noun with the def. art. 2, Construe according to S. 55, N. 1, and use the Imperf. of the Passive Voice; by, voil. 3, The pron. or must be supplied here. 4, genotigit; 'to seek refuge', here such states of the def. 5, zubringen. 7, sinauf friedpen. and the Worden fallen. 10, zin zweiten Wase. 11, strend te def. art. 9, auf ben Boben fallen. 10, zin zweiten Wase. 11, strend'terfallen, to avoid monotony. 12, I succeed, of gestingt mir. 13, The pron. sie must be supplied here. 14, das oberste sube. 15, sich erheben. 16, bescheiben. 17, The Active Voice will read better in German. 18, so = it.

THE NECESSITY OF 1 VOLCANOES.

The ² remarkable proofs which modern geology has presented of vast accumulations of heated ³ and melted matter ⁴ beneath the earth's crust ⁵, make it evident that (S. 3, N. 2) volcanoes are essential ⁶ to the preservation of the globe. If (App. § 36) there ⁷ were no safety-valves through ⁸ the crust, such vast accumulations of heat would rend asunder ⁹ even ¹⁰ a whole continent. Volcanoes are ¹¹ those safety-valves ¹², more than two hundred of which are scattered ¹³ over the earth's surface. But if no such passages ¹⁴ existed (see S. 27, N. 8), nothing could prevent the ¹⁵ pent-up gases from accumulating till they had (Impf. Subj.) gained strength ¹⁶ enough to rend a whole continent, and ¹⁷ perhaps the whole globe, into fragments.—Rev. Prof. Hitchcock.

1, Use the gen. of the def. art.

explained in S. 48, N. 6, and say 'The by (von, followed by the def. art.)

modern geology presented (ant stellar) remarkable proofs of (von) a vast accumulation', etc.

3, ethigt.

4, matter = masses.

5, Exprince, f.

6, essential = necessary; to = for.

8, Say 'in the earth's crust'.

9, anseinan' berreißen.

10, segar.

11, are = form.

12, Here follow the words 'of which'.

13, verteisen.

14, passages = openings.

15, the — accumulating = the accumulation of the pent-up (ein'sperren) gases.

16, staft, t.; enough, shireidsens, adj., to be placed before the noun 'strength'.

17, 'and' here ja. The verb 'to rend into fragments' (anseinan' berreißen, of which form the Supine, S. 1, N. 2) must of course be placed at the end of the whole passage.

Section 83.

THE POWER OF BEAUTY.

In one of the worst parts of London there is ¹ an institution ² which I visited. In one room I found about ³ thirty-five men listening (S. 16, N. 4) to the teaching ⁴ of the daughter of a small shopkeeper ⁵ in ⁶ the neighbourhood. She was one of the prettiest women (S. 16, N. 10) I ever saw ⁷ in my life. I noticed that the young girl was quite alone with those rough ⁸ men, and said to the superintendent ⁹: "Are ¹⁰ you not afraid to leave the pretty young girl alone with all those men?" He replied: "I¹¹ am." "Then, why don't you go to her?" "You mistake ¹² my fear. I ¹³ am not afraid of their doing her any harm. They love her so much that they would lick ¹⁴ the ground on which ¹⁵ she walks, but I am afraid ¹⁶ that some ¹⁷ person may step in, who, not ¹⁸ knowing the manner of the place, may ¹⁹ say something impertinent ²⁰ to her; and if he ²¹ did, he would not leave the place ²² alive ²³."—Lord Shaftesbury.

1, Render 'there is' by the Pres. of bestehen.
4, Unterricht, m. 5, Krämer. 6, and.
7, saw = have seen. The auxiliary may be omitted, according to S. 52, N. 8.
8, reh. 9, This noun may be used in its unaltered form. 10, Furcht haben. 11, 3a, doch, which place before the words 'he replied'. 12, mistake = misunderstand. 13, I - harm = I fear not that they will do her any harm (etwas zuleide thuu). 14, 'to lick', here = to kiss. 15. worauf. 16, befürchten. 'a stranger' could (Impf. Subj.) come in. 18, not - place, unbefannt mit den Sitten bieser Anstalt. 19, Imps. Subj. ply here the object 'bas'. 22, haus 20, Ungehöriges. 21, Sup-23, lebendig, before which 22, haus. supply the adverb 'mieter'.

THE ENGLISH CLIMATE.

The air is generally very moist, most 1 so near the western coast, and less so 2 as 3 we go eastward.

It 4 is to the abundant moisture of the air that the beautiful foliage of our trees and the rich verdure of our fields and gardens, so much praised by foreigners who visit England, are chiefly owing. Moisture is one of the two things 5 most necessary to 6 vegetation, and hence 7 our fields, trees, and woods possess during the greater part of the year a continuous richness of 8 verdure, which 9 cannot be found under 10 the sunny skies of the shores of the Mediterranean.

The weather is at ¹¹ times liable to very sudden changes, depending (S. 16, N. 4) mainly on the changes of the wind ¹².—Hewitt, Physical Geography of England and Wales.

1, most so near, und zwar am feuchtesten au.

2, so = moist.

3, se mehr.

4, Say 'To the great moisture of the air owe (verdansen) our trees chiefly their beautiful soliage and our fields and gardens their rich verdure, which by soriegners, who visit England, is praised so much'.

5, The words 'most (höchü) necessary', qualifying the noun 'things', must precede it. Things = conditions.

6, sur.

7, daher, adverbial conjunction, see App. § 24, B.

8, au.

Seemingly¹ boundless is the region of the docks, and the visitor who sets out with ever so definite an idea of the course he intends to pursue, will constantly find himself allured from the path. He passes² a door from³ which issues a delicious fragrance of spice, and he turns in⁴ to (S. 19, N. 7) explore⁵ it. At⁶ the top of a stone staircase he finds an enormous floor ¹ piled⁶ with bales of cinnamon and boxes of nutmeg. Here and there are great heaps which, on⁶ close inspection, prove¹⁰ to be cloves. Others, of¹¹ a brilliant sienna colour, he¹² finds to be heaps of mace. The ¹³ floor above this is stored¹¹ with Peruvian bark¹⁶. This article is used for the preparation ¹⁶ of quinine, but ¹⁷ it is imported in such quantities 18 as 19 to render it difficult to believe that 20 it can all be used medicinally.

1, Say 'The region (Bereich, m.) of the docks seems (erscheinen) almost boundless (unbegrenzt), and even when the visitor begins his course (Banderung, f.) with ever so (mit einem noch fo) definite a plan about (niver) the direction he intends to pursue (bie einzuschlagende Richtung, Comp. DR. JOHNSON ON DEBT.

Dr. Johnson held 2 that 3 debt is ruin. His 4 words on the subject are weighty, and worthy of being held in remembrance. "Do not," said 5 he, "accustom 6 yourself to consider debt only as 7 an inconvenience. You 8 will find it a calamity. Poverty takes 9 away so many means of doing good, and 10 produces so much inability to resist evil, that it 11 is by 12 all virtuous means to be avoided. Let 13 it be your first care, then, not to be in any man's debt. Resolve 14 not 15 to be poor. Whatever 16 you have, spend less. Poverty¹⁷ is a great enemy to human happiness. It destroys liberty. It makes some 18 virtues impracticable 19 and others 20 extremely difficult. Frugality 21 is not only the basis of 22 quiet, but 23 of beneficence 24. No 25 man can help others that wants himself. We must have 26 enough, before 27 we have to spare."—S. SMILES, SELF-HELP.

1, über bas Schuldeumachen. 2, 'to hold' here = to be of opinion, ber Unficht sein. 3, Say 'that debt (bas Schuldenmachen) leads (Pres. Subj.; Comp. App. §§ 28 and 31) to ruin'. 4, Say 'What he says on (über) this subject (Gegenstand, m.) is important and worthy of our notice (Beadstung, f.)'. 5, Place the words 'said he' at the end of the whole clause. verbs and adjectives, governing a preposition, are used in a principal clause and are followed by a subordinate clause, either in the form of a supine (i.e. an infinitive with zu, see S. 1, N. 2) or beginning with a subordinative conjunction, the adverb on in connection with the preposition required, is generally placed in the principal clause; as-

A CURIOUS INSTRUMENT.

I.

A gentleman ², just returned ³ from a journey to (S. 72, N. 4) London, was surrounded by ⁴ his children, eager ⁵, after the first salutation was over, to hear the news, and still more eager to see the contents ⁶ of a small portmanteau, which ⁷ were, one by one, carefully unfolded and displayed to view. After ⁸ having distributed amongst the children a few small presents, the ⁹ father took his seat again, saying, that ¹⁰ he must confess he ¹¹ had brought from town ¹², for his own use, something far more curious and valuable than any ¹³ of the little gifts (S. 16, N. 10) they had received. It was, he said ¹⁴, too good to ¹⁵ present to any of them; but he would, if ¹⁶ they pleased, first give them a brief description of it (S. 4, N. 5, B), and ¹⁷ then perhaps they might be allowed to inspect it.

2, The noun 'gentleman' may be used in its unaltered 1, merfwürdig. 3, heinstehren; for the constr. see S. 7, N. 3, B. nigen. 5, Say who after the first salutations form in German. 4, ven; to surround, murin'gen. 6, ber Juhalt, which has no plural. were eager (begierig)'. the antecedent of the pron. which (i.e. Suhalt) has no plural in German, the constr. of the passage 'which — to view' must be altered. The children were accordingly ¹ all attention, while the father thus ² proceeded ³: "This small instrument displays ⁴ the most ⁵ perfect ingenuity of ⁶ construction, and ⁷ exquisite nicety and beauty of workmanship. From ⁸ its extreme ⁹ delicacy ¹⁰, however, it ¹¹ is so liable to injury, that it is always protected by a ¹² sort of light curtain, adorned ¹⁸ with a beautiful fringe, and ¹⁴ so placed as to fall in a moment on the approach of the slightest danger. The ¹⁵ external appearance of the instrument is always more or less beautiful, though in this respect there ¹⁶ is a great diversity in the different sorts. The ¹⁷ internal contrivance, however, is the same in all of them, and is so curious, and in its power ¹⁸ so astonishing, that no one who knows it ¹⁹ can suppress his surprise and admiration."

George. "You must take very great care of it, then ?"

Father. "Indeed I must. I intend every night to envelop 10 it in 11 the light curtain I mentioned; it must, besides, occasionally be washed in 12 a certain colourless liquid kept 13 for the purpose; but this is such a delicate 14 operation, that 16 persons, I find, are generally reluctant to perform it. GEORGE. "Higher than this house, I's suppose?"

FATHER. "Much higher."

Charles. "Then 4, how do you 5 get it again?"

FATHER. "It is easily cast down by a gentle movement that does it no injury."

GEORGE. "But who can do that?"

FATHER. "The 7 person whose business it is to take care of it."

Charles. "Well , I cannot understand you at all; but do tell us, father, what it is chiefly used for!"

1, Das ware! 2, Say 'I almost fear to tell you what distances it can reach, that (bamit) you may not believe that I am jesting with you'. 3, 'I suppose', in interrogative sentences, may be elegantly rendered by the adverb wohl:

You have prepared your lesson well Sie haben Ihre Leftion heute wohl gut to-day, I suppose? Rubiert?

In elliptic sentences, where the verb is omitted, would generally occupies the first place.

4, The adv. bent must stand after the object etc.

ANGLO'-SAXON DRESS.

The dress of civilians in general consisted ² of a shirt and tunic descending ³ to the knee, of linen or wool, according ⁴ to the season. A belt was often worn round the waist ⁵, and a short cloak over the whole. Drawers, leather shoes or short boots and hose, or sandals, completed the ordinary costume. Labourers (S. 3, N. 2) are generally represented with shoes, but without hose. Females ⁶ of all ranks ⁷ wore long, loose garments reaching ³ to the ground, completely hiding (S. 16, N. 4) all ³ symmetry of ⁹ shape. Long hair, parted ¹⁰ on the forehead, and falling ¹¹ naturally down the shoulders, with an ample ¹² beard and moustache, distinguish the Anglo-Saxons from the closely cropped ¹³ Normans. Planche remarks that ¹⁴ the character of face, as delineated in illuminations, immediately designates ¹⁵ the age ¹⁶ wherein ¹⁷ the early ¹⁸ portraits of our Lord ¹⁹, which have ²⁰ been reverently ²¹ copied to ²² the present day, were ²³ originally fabricated.—MILNER, HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

THE GLACIERS AT1 SUNSET2.

I.

At a distance these glaciers, as ⁸ I have said before, look ⁴ like frozen rivers (S. 26, N. 3); when ⁵ one approaches nearer, or when they press ⁶ downward ⁷ into the valley, they look ⁸ like immense crystals and pillars ⁹ of ice piled ¹⁰ together in every conceivable form. The effect ¹¹ of this pile ¹² of ice, lying (S. 48, N. 6) directly ¹³ in the lap of ¹⁴ green grass and flowers, is quite singular. Before we had entered ¹⁶ the valley, the sun had gone down; the sky behind the mountains was clear, and it ¹⁶ seemed for a few moments as if darkness ¹⁷ was rapidly coming on. But ¹⁸ in a few moments commenced a scene ¹⁹ of transfiguration, more ²⁰ glorious than anything I had witnessed yet. The cold, white, dismal fields ²¹ of ice gradually changed ²² into hues ²³ of the most beautiful rose colour ²⁴. A ²⁵ bank of white clouds, which rested ²⁶ above the mountains, kindled ²⁷ and glared ²³, as ²⁹ if some spirit of light had entered into them.

You 1 did not lose your idea of the dazzling, spiritual whiteness of the snow; yet you seemed to see it through a rosy veil, the sharp edges of the glaciers and the hollows between the peaks reflecting wavering tints of lilac and purple. The effect 2 was solemn and spiritual above everything I have ever seen. These 3 words, which 4 had often been in my mind through the day, and 5 which occurred more often than any others while I was travelling through the Alps, came into my mind with a pomp and magnificence of meaning unknown before:—"For by (burdy) Him were all things created that are in 6 heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether 7 they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers 8: all things were created by Him and for Him: and He is before 9 all things, and by Him all things consist 10 (Col. i. 16, 17)."—Mrs. Beecher Stowe.

THE LOST CHILD FOUND 1.

Τ.

A few years since, in the United States of America, a child was lost in the woods. Darkness (S. 3, N. 2) was rapidly coming on 3, and the alarmed father, accompanied by some of his neighbours, hastened away in 4 search of the lost child. The 5 search continued in vain till nine o'clock in the evening. Then the alarm bell was rung 6, and the cry of fire ⁷ soon resounded through the streets. It ⁸ was, however, ascertained that ⁹ it was not fire which caused the alarm, and that the bell tolled ¹⁰ to spread the more 11 solemn tidings 12 of a child lost 13.

Every heart sympathised ¹⁴ in the sorrows of the distracted ¹⁵ parents, and multitudes ¹⁶ of the people ¹⁷ were seen (S. 4, N. 4) ascending the hill upon the declivity of which the village was situated ¹⁸, to ¹⁹ aid in the search. The night passed away, the morning dawned, and yet no tidings came. The sun arose. The whole landscape glittered in the rays of the morning sun. But the village was deserted and still; the shops were closed, and business was hushed ²⁰. Mothers ²¹ were walking ²² the streets with sympathising ²³ countenances and anxious ¹⁵ hearts. There ²⁴ was but one thought there:—What has become of ²⁵ the lost ¹³ child?

THE LOST CHILD FOUND.

II.

About nine in the morning the signal gun was fired, which announced that the child was found (S. 4, N. 4), and for some time the suspense was dreadful. Was the child found a mangled corpse, or was it alive and well? Soon (App. § 14) a joyful shout proclaimed the safety of the child. A procession was formed by those engaged in the search. The child was placed upon a litter, hastily constructed from the boughs of trees (S. 36, N. 7, A), and borne in triumph at the head of the procession.

When they arrived at the brow ¹² of the hill, they stopped for a moment, and proclaimed their success with three loud and animated ¹³ cheers ¹⁴. The mother could no longer restrain her feelings. She rushed into ¹⁵ the street, clasped her ¹⁶ child to her bosom, and wept aloud. Every ¹⁷ eye was suffused with tears, and for a moment all was silent.

But suddenly some one gave a¹⁸ signal for¹⁹ a shout. One long, loud, and happy note of joy²⁰ rose from ²¹ the assembled multitude²², who then dispersed to (S. 19, N. 7) return home and to resume ²³ their business.—

PERSPIRATION.

Perspiration is the evacuation ¹ of the juices of the body through the pores of the skin. It has been calculated (S. 4, N. 4) that there are ² above three hundred millions of pores in the glands of the skin which covers the body of a middle-sized man. Through these pores more than one half ⁴ of what we eat and drink passes off ⁸ by ⁵ insensible ⁶ perspiration. If we consume eight pounds of food in ⁷ a day (App. § 9; S. 27, N. 8), five pounds of it (S. 4, N. 5, B) are insensibly discharged ⁸ by perspiration. During ⁹ a night of seven hours' sleep we perspire about two ¹⁰ pounds and a half. At an average we may ¹¹ estimate the discharge ¹ by ¹² sensible and insensible perspiration at ¹³ from half an ounce to ¹⁴ four ounces per hour. This (Dieš) is a most ¹⁵ wonderful part ¹⁶ of the animal economy, and ¹⁷ is absolutely necessary to ¹⁸ our health, and even to our very existence.—The Rev. Dr. Dick.

Section 101.

THE DRAMA OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION OF 1848.

I.

Our first scene is a palace; the period ² winter; the time ³ morning, and the weather cold and miserable ⁴. It is ten o'clock, and the King of France with his wife ⁵ and family are ⁶ discovered at the breakfast table. A splendid beginning! Calmness ⁷ is the prevailing expression of every countenance save one—the king's daughter-in-law ³, who looks anxious and disturbed. Light ⁹ domestic talk, such as ¹⁰ becomes princes and the gilded roof that ¹¹ overhangs them, occupies ¹² the moments. Hush ¹³! Whilst the lacqueys, dressed (S. 7, N. 3, A) in gold and scarlet, move ¹⁴ noiselessly about the room, a noise is heard without ¹⁵. It ¹⁶ becomes more ¹⁷ audible by degrees. Suddenly the door flies open, and two ¹⁸ men enter, pale as ghosts. They ¹⁹ are Ministers of State (S. 76, N. 22, A). They have news to communicate. Discontent prevails in the city; the ²⁰ populace are out; the dragoons have surrendered their sabres, the soldiers their arms, within ²¹ sight of the apartment in which the king had just now enjoyed his meal, and his daughter-in-law had looked ²² so sad.

1, National adjectives require a small initial in German. 3, time = day-time (S. 76, N. 22, B). Connect the two nouns by means of the genitive inflection ed. 4, ranh. 5, wife, consort, Gemahlin, which term generally applies to the wife of a king, or to that of persons of the upper ranks of society.—The possessive adj. pron. is best repeated before the next noun. 6, Since the subject begins the sentence, the verb must be placed immediately after it. Say 'The king of France sits, etc.', and transl. the words 'at - table' briefly thus: beim Frühftudetische. 7, Calmness — disturbed. This period is best construed thus: With the exception of the king's daughter-in-law (i.e. the daughter-in-law of the king), who looks anxious and disturbed, bear (App. § 14) all the faces the expression of (S. 3, N. 2) calmness .- Der Rouig mar Ludwig Philipp, geb. ben 6. 13, Sorch!

14, to move, sich bewegen; about the room = in the room. 15, without = outside. 16, Use here a demonstrative pronoun to agree with 'noise'. - degrees = louder and louder. 18, two men pale as ghosts, anei geister: 19, They are, Es find. 20, Der Bobel ift auf den Beinen. 21, within - meal = and this almost (fust) immediately in front of (vor) the windows of the room in which the king had just now breakfasted.—Use the verb in the Imperfect, and render just now by forben. 22, 'to look sad', here tribe einher bliden, which use likewise in the Imperfect.—The German Imperfect is chiefly used as a historical tense and to express a past action or occurrence with reference to another. It is, however, likewise used to denote the continuance of an action, to describe a certain state, and to express customary and habitual action. Comp. S. 48, N. 2, for the use of the Perfect.

Section 102.

THE DRAMA OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION OF 1848.

II.

What is to be done? The king is thunderstruck, hesitates for a moment, and 2 then, urged 3 by the queen, instantly leaves the room. The 4 queen follows 6 her husband with her (S. 43, N. 9, A) eyes from the palace window. She sees him on horseback reviewing the National Guards. She has no fear, neither has he. What more? He returns, accompanied by 12 the man whom 3, yesterday, to satisfy public clamour, he created Prime Minister. Has the Minister power to save his master? You (S. 92, N. 5) observe at 14 a glance that 15 he is far more anxious to save himself. He craves 16 permission to resign. Permission 7 is granted, when (S. 4, N. 2) a volley 18 is (S. 4, N. 4) heard close 19 to their ears. What does it mean? This 20 man will tell you who now enters. The King has a pen in his hand, with which he is about (S. 6, N. 4) to appoint his new Prime Minister. "Sign 21 not," shouts the 22 last comer, a 23 man of the press, with the face 24 of a student, and the spirit 25 of a soldier. "Sign rather 26 your own abdication." The situation is fine 27. The pen drops 28 from the King's fingers; the speaker 29 takes it up, and quietly 30 replaces 31 it in the Monarch's hand (see S. 43, N. 9).

1, wit vom Denner gerührt. 2, Here place the verb 'leaves'. 3, The Past (Perfect) Participle is often used elliptically to denote an existing state or condition; as—

Urged by his father, he instantly left the room. Bon seinem Bater gebrangt, versieß er eiligst bas Zimmer.

4, Construe this period by beginning with the adverbial clause 'from the palace window', von ten dendered beginning with the adverbial clause 'from the palace window', von ten dendered beginning. The verb must then follow immediately. To denote a starting point with respect to place, the English preposition 'from' is generally translated by von followed by the prepositional adverband, or by and...himand when the verb indicates a motion from one place to another. In relation to time we use von...an, which often corresponds to the English 'beginning with', or to 'from' followed by 'forwards'; as—

Beginning with to-morrow (From tomorrow forwards) you must take pazieren gehen. Den morgen an uniffen Sie jeden Tag morrow forwards) you must take a walk every day.

5, fessen requires the dative. 6, See S. 78, N. 14. 7, 31th Ferbe. 8, mustern. 9, the National Guards, bie Matienasgarbe. 10, neither has he = and he also not. 11, Was giebt's weiter? 12, by the man, ven cinem Manne. 13, 'whom — Minister', construe 'whom he only (ext) yesterday appointed Prime Minister, to satisfy (genügen, with the dat.) the impetuous (mugefünn) demands of the people'. To appoint, to create, ensument. Verbs denoting choosing and appointing, as ensument, machen, and erwählen, to choose, to elect, require in German an Accusative followed by the prep. 31 with the dative, when in English they govern two Accusatives in the active voice: as—

The King appointed Prince Bismarck Der König ernannte ben Fürsten Bis-

S. 27, N. 4 will show the construction in connection with the passive voice.

The audience ¹ is already touched ². The poor king looks around him for ³ advice; no ⁴ one offers it; even the Prime Minister of ⁵ yesterday is dumb; and in ⁶ another instant the ⁷ deed is done. The King has abdicated in ⁸ favour of his grandson ⁹. Behind the scenes ¹⁰ you (S. 92, N. 5) hear sounds ¹¹ of tumult and disorder, and your ¹² heart is already beating for the issue. The King doffs ¹³ his robes ¹⁴, places his sword upon the table, and ¹⁵, dressed (S. 102, N. 3) as a private gentleman ¹⁶, is evidently anxious ¹⁷ to depart. The Queen would ¹⁸ fain meet the coming danger, but his ¹⁹ Majesty has already ordered the carriages. The horses are put ²⁰ to, but horses and groom are shot ²¹ by the multitude ²². A broad path leads from ²³ the palace garden ²⁴, and at the end ²⁵ of it a friendly hand ²⁶ has brought two hired coaches ²⁷. "Let ²⁸ us go," exclaims the Monarch, and, leaning (S. 53, N. 12) heavily ²⁹ upon the Queen, whose ³⁰ head is high and erect, he hurries on. The coaches are ³¹ reached; the fugitives escape ³². They arrive at St. Cloud ³³, at Versailles, but not to (S. 19, N. 7. Supply the adv. bort) stay. On ³⁴ they go, and at half-past eleven o'clock at night they descend at Dreux ³⁵.

IV.

At one in the morning they are joined 1 by (von) one of the King's sons, who informs the unhappy pair that the claims 2 of the grandson had 3 been disregarded, and that the republic had been declared by the people of Paris. It is enough. The King shaves off his whiskers, puts on green spectacles, buries 4 his face in a handkerchief, speaks English, and calls himself Smith. The wind is 5 high, the coast 6 dangerous, embarkation 7 is out of question at the moment, and before an opportunity offers, the rank of the runaways 8 is discovered. Fortune (S. 3, N. 2), however, is 9 with them: they escape 10 capture and put to sea. Protected by Heaven, they reach in safety 11 the hospitable shores of England.

Meanwhile ¹², what has happened in Paris? The whole city has given way ¹⁸ to a handful of rioters—men (S. 53, N. 9) who meditated an "emeute ¹⁴", and effected, to their astonishment, an actual revolution. But ¹⁵ two individuals upon the side of the King evinced a ¹⁶ particle of courage, and these were women—his wife and his daughter-in-law already ¹⁷ mentioned. The ¹⁸ rest of the city were ¹⁹ faithless to themselves as well as to the King.

1, 'to be joined', here eingeholt werden (to be overtaken). Thronanspruche. 3, According to the two rules in §§ 28 and 30 of the Appendix, the Perfect of the Subjunctive Mood is to be used in this and the following clause. The two clauses, however, can be joined by omitting the second conjunction 'that' and the copula 'had been' of the first clause. Turn 'to disregard' by night auerfeunen; the words 'by — Paris' may be briefly rendered by von ben Parifern, which place immediately after the conjunction 'and'. 4, 'to bury', here = to veil, umhullen; the prep. 'in' must then be rendered 5, is high = blows violently. 6, Since the copula 'is' was changed into another verb in the previous clause, it must be inserted here. 7, The literal version of this clause would not read well. I propose to use the following construction: it is (Comp. N. 19) for the moment impossible to 8, runaways = fugitives. 9, is with them, ift ihuen held (proembark. pitious). 10, to escape capture, ber Berhaftung entgehen; to put to sea, in 11, gludlich; 'shores', here Gestate. 12, Ingwischen, Die Gee ftechen. which place after the copula 'has'. The verb 'to happen' is conjugated with 13, to give way = to yield, conj. with fein; handful, Sauflein. 14, Aufruhr, m.; rioter, Aufrührer.
15, but = only; individuals = persons.

18, All the others in the city. 19, were — King = were just as faithless towards themselves as they were towards the King', and insert the grammatical subject es after the pronoun 'they'.—The grammatical subject es is frequently employed for emphasizing the real subject or to give more tone and life to the construction; as—Es sprad die Leidenschaft and seinen Bügen. It is, moreover, used with all impersonal verbs; as—es friert, es donnert, es giebt, es ist.

Princes, peers 1, soldiers, and statesmen were all sneaking 2 in hiding places whilst the capital was 3 made over to the mercy of a few dozen incendiaries. The daughter-in-law, seeing (S. 55, N. 1) the King depart 4, carries 5 her child to the Chamber of Deputies 6, and 7 there, with womanly courage and queenly dignity, vindicates his rights. Her friends entreat her to withdraw. Firm 5 in her purpose, she does not move 9 an inch. She attempts to speak, but is interrupted; and 10 he who interrupts is himself silenced by an armed mob that pours 11 into the hall 12. The Duchess is forced away 13, and in that terrible extremity 12 separated from her son. The child is seized by (S. 106, N. 23) a rough hand, which 14 is strong enough to strike 15, but 16 generous enough to save. The boy is brought 17 to his mother, and mother and son pass 18 from asylum to asylum, chased 19 by scythes, sabres, muskets, and, worse 20 than all, the 21 bloody passions of an infuriated "canaille". For 22 four days they 25 creep into hiding places; on the fifth day they are beyond the frontier.

THE DRAMA OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION OF 1848. VI.

Everybody is escaping at 1 the same moment. There is the King's eldest son, pale and half-naked, throwing 2 aside his tinsel and putting on fustian, looking 3 less than a man in his fear, trembling with 4 emotion, and finally running 6 like a madman for 6 his life. There are your 7 ministers, of ⁸ European reputation and wisdom unapproachable, bounding ⁹ like antelopes, northwards ¹⁰, southwards, "anywhere, anywhere ¹¹ out of the city", which they and all the rest give up ¹² to indiscriminate riot. And ¹³ now the crowning point of our first "tableau" is near. The (S. 107, N. 13) mob, masters ¹⁴ of Paris, are sacking the Tuileries. The choicest moveables ¹⁵ are broken to atoms; a group ¹⁶ takes ¹⁷ the places which Royalty filled a moment ago at the breakfast table; others are in the wine cellar drinking ¹³ themselves ten times drunk; others, again ¹⁹, are in the Queen's apartments, defiling ²⁰ that ²¹ domestic sanctuary. Outside the palace and on the top ²² of it a flag is waved ²⁴ by ²³ a dozen men, whose ²⁵ shouts and shrieks invite hundreds, whom ²⁶ you see crawling up with no earthly object but immediately to (S. 19, N. 7) slide down again.

1, at — moment = with them. 2, 'throwing — life'. The rendering of this passage according to the rule of S. 16, N. 4 would be inelegant, since there are a number of Present Participles following one another. I propose, therefore, to begin a new period here, saying: He throws aside his tinsel (here Flitterstaat, m.), puts on fustian, etc.; to put on fustian, fich in Barchent fleiben. 3, to look less than a man, faum einem Manne ahnlich feben. 4, vor; emotion = excitement. 5, bavon'laufen. 6, um fein Leben zu retten. 8, of — unapproachable = incomparable in (au) European fame =the. 9, Since a relative clause follows immediately, it would be and wisdom. bad taste to render this clause, beginning with a Present Participle, in the same form. It will be best to commence a new period. Comp. N. 2. Merb und Gud. 11, The second 'anywhere' is best turned by nur hinweg. 12, bem allgemeinen Aufruhr preisgeben.
13, And — near = And now we approach (fid) nähern, with Dat.) the end (Schluß, m.) of our first tableau. The French 'tableau' is used with French pronunciation in the same sense in German. It is of the neuter gender and takes the inflection of an $\epsilon$ in the 14, masters of Paris = which rules in Paris; to rule, beherriden Gen. Sing. (v. tr.). 15, moveables = objects; atoms = pieces. 16, Insert the 17, ein'nehmen; Royalty = the Royal family; filled = occupied noun 'men'. (inne haben, treated like a comp. sep. v.). The adverbial clause 'at the breakfast table' is best placed after the verb 'takes'. fast table' is best placed after the verb 'takes'.

18, drinking themselves
19, wieternin andere. 20, and defile (befubelu). 21, biese geheiligte Statte ber Sauslichfeit. =roof; of it = of the same. 23, The preposition 'by' in connection with the passive voice and establishing a relation with the noun or pronoun that denotes the doer of the action expressed by the verb, is rendered by vou. 24, hin und her schwenken. 25, To avoid a succession of relative clauses, which should always be avoided, begin again a new period here and say: The shouts and shricks of these men invite (herbei's 26, whom — but = who seem only to climb up (erflettern) the roof. The adv. 'immediately' comes after the conjunction 'to'.

THE DRAMA OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION OF 1848.

There 1 is sentiment in all things. The apartments of the poor daughter-in-law are reached (S. 4, N. 4, man), but, strange 2 to say, are respected 3 in the midst of the work 4 of general destruction. Her children's toys are 5 not even touched; the hat and (S. 10, N. 9) whip of her dead 6 husband are 7 still sacred; the books (S. 16, N. 10) she had been reading lie still open 8. It 9 is an incident that cannot fail to 10 elicit rounds of applause. And whilst II anarchy and destruction prevail here, there 12 is equal confusion and danger in the Chamber of Deputies. We have seen the 13 mob forcing their way into (311) that deliberative assembly. Everybody¹⁴ is now rushing to the tribune. Three ¹⁵ speakers become marked from the rest; their 16 names are Lamartine 28, Crémieux 28, and Ledru Rollin²³; they¹⁷ gain the popular ear, and undertake (S. 51, N. 13) to establish 18 order—a superhuman responsibility! A Provisional Government is announced, named 19, and approved on the spot. "To (S. 72, N. 4) the Hôtel de Ville!" exclaims one 20. "To the Hôtel de Ville!" respond a hundred; and amidst 21 yells and hootings, cries of "Vive la République!" "Vive Lamartine!" "A bas tout le monde!" Monsieur Lamartine 23 sets out for that celebrated building, followed by a train made 24 up of the dregs of a seething metropolis. ON 1 SELF CULTURE.

(From ² an address delivered to an assemblage of young men at Edinburgh.)

Is stand before you a self-educated man. My education was that which was supplied at the humble parish schools of Scotland; and it was only when Is went to Edinburgh, a poor boy, that I devoted my evenings, after the labours of the day, to the cultivation of that intellect which the Almighty has given me. From seven or eight in the morning till nine or ten at night, was I at my business as a bookseller's apprentice, and it was only during hours after these, stolen from sleep, that I could devote myself to study. I assure you that I did not read novels; my attention was devoted; to physical science and other useful matters. During that period I taught myself French. I look back to that time with great pleasure, and am almost sorry I have not to go through the same troubles again. Is reaped more pleasure when I had not a sixpence in my pocket, studying in a garret in Edinburgh, than I now find when sitting amidst all the elegancies and comforts of a parlour.—William Chambers.

GOETHE'S 1 DEATH.

I.

The ² following morning—it was the 22nd March 1832—he tried to ³ walk a little up and down the room, but ⁴ after a turn, he found ⁵ himself too feeble to continue. Reseating ⁶ himself in the easy chair, he chatted cheerfully with Ottilie [(S. 53, N. 9) his daughter-in-law] on 7 the approaching spring, which would 8 be sure to restore him. He 9 had no idea of his end being so near. The name of Ottilie was frequently on his lips. She sat beside him, holding 10 his hand in both of hers. It was now observed that his thoughts began to wander 11 incoherently. "See," he exclaimed, "the lovely woman's head, with black curls, in splendid colours—a 12 dark background!" Presently 13 he saw a piece of paper on the floor, and asked them how 14 they could leave Schiller's letters so carelessly lying about. Then 15 he slept softly, and, on 16 awakening, asked 17 for the sketches 18 (S. 16, N. 10) he had just seen—the 19 sketches of his dream.

GOETHE'S DEATH.

H.

In silent anguish they 1 now awaited the close now so surely approaching (S. 48, N. 6). His speech was becoming less and less distinct. The last words audible 2 were: "More Light!" The final 3 darkness 4 grew apace, and he 5 whose eternal longings had been for more light, gave a parting cry for it as he was passing under the shadow of death.

He continued to express himself by signs, drawing ⁶ letters ⁷ with his forefinger in the air, while he ⁸ had strength, and finally, as life (S. 3, N. 2) ebbed ⁹, drawing ¹⁰ figures slowly on the shawl which covered his legs. At ¹¹ half-past twelve he composed ¹² himself in the corner of the easy chair. His faithful watcher ¹⁵ placed a finger on her lips to intimate that he was asleep ¹⁴. ON TRAVELLING (S. 3, N. 2).

I¹ wish folks² in general would keep their eyes a little more open when they travel by rail³. When I see young people rolling along in a luxurious⁴ carriage, absorbed (S. 102, N. 3) in a trashy⁵ shilling novel⁶, and ⁿ never lifting up their eyes to look out of the window, unconscious⁶ of all that⁰ they are passing;—of¹⁰ the reverend antiquities, the admirable¹¹ agriculture, the rich and peaceful scenery¹², the ¹³ like of which no other country upon earth can show (App. § 18); unconscious¹⁴, too, of how much they might ¹⁵ learn of botany and geology, by ¹⁵ simply watching the flowers along the railway banks, and the sections¹७ in the cuttings¹७;—then it grieves me to see what¹⁰ little use people make of the eyes and the understanding which God has given them. They complain of²⁰ a dull²¹ journey: but²² it is not the journey which is dull; it²³ is they who are dull. Eyes²⁴ have they, and see not; ears have they, and hear not; mere²⁵ dolls in smart clothes, too many of them, like the idols of the heathen.—Charles Kingsley, Town Geology.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE BODY.

I have nothing new to say upon the management which the body requires?. The common rules are the best:—exercise without fatigue; generous³ living without excess; early rising, and moderation in sleeping. These are the apothegms⁴ of old women; but if they are not attended to⁵, happiness⁶ becomes (App. § 15) so extremely difficult that 7 very few persons can attain 8 to it. In 9 this point of view, the care 10 of the body becomes a 11 subject of elevation and importance. A walk in the fields, an hour's 12 less sleep, may 13 remove all these bodily vexations 14 and disquietudes which are such formidable enemies to 13 virtue; they may enable 17 the mind 16 to pursue 18 its own resolves without that constant train 19 of temptations to resist, and 20 obstacles to overcome, which 21 it always experiences from the bad organisation of its companion.—Sidney Smith.

Section 114.

THE SOURCES1 OF WATER,

There ² are many sources of water. The first great source ³ is the ocean, which collects all the water from ⁴ the earth; this water contains so large a quantity of salt, that none ⁵ of us can drink it. The sun, however, bears ⁶ down upon the ocean's surface, and its heating ⁷ rays penetrating ⁸ the water, combine, as ⁹ it were, with it (S. 4, N. 5, B), and ¹⁰ raise it up. The atmosphere (S. 5, N. 2), like ¹¹ a sponge, absorbs the ¹² vaporous water, carrying ¹³ it from the Equator to ¹⁴ the Arctic and the Antartic regions; thus ¹⁵ distributing it north and south. It then condenses in the form of rain and of snow. When it sinks into the earth and pours down the ¹⁶ mountain sides, it forms springs and rivulets, entering ¹⁸ (S. 16, N. 4) the ocean again in ¹⁷ the form of rivers. Man catches ¹⁹ it in tubs and cisterns, draws ²⁰ it from ²¹ the rivers, or digs down ²² into the earth, and catches ²³ it as it passes ²⁴ along beneath his feet. Thus ²⁵ we have rain water, river water, and spring or well water.—DR. Lankester.

THE ART OF ORATORY.

I¹ owe my success in life to one single fact ², namely:—At³ the age of twenty-seven⁴ I commenced, and continued for years, the process of daily speaking (S. 34, N. 10) upon the contents of some historical or scientific book. These efforts⁵ were made sometimes in a corn-field⁶, at others⊓ in the forest, and not unfrequently in some distant ³ barn, with ⁵ the horse and ox for my auditors. It¹¹⁰ is this early practice in the great art of all arts that I am indebted for the primary and leading impulses that stimulated me forward, and shaped and moulded my entire subsequent¹¹ destiny. Improve¹², then, the superior advantages (S. 16, N. 10) you here enjoy¹³. Let not¹⁴ a day pass¹⁵ without exercising (S. 34, N. 10) your powers¹⁶ of speech. There is (S. 82, N. 7) no power like¹¹ that of oratory. Cæsar controlled¹³ men by¹⁰ exciting their fears; Cicero²⁰ by²¹ captivating their affection and swaying their passions. The influence of the one perished²² with its author; that of the other continues²³ to this day.—Henry Clay²⁴.

Section 116.

EARLY PRIVATIONS 1.

Admiral Jervis, Earl of St. Vincent, tells us the ¹ story of his early struggles, and, among ² other things, of his determination (S. 1, N. 2) to ³ keep out of debt. "My father had a very large family," said he, "with limited means. He gave me twenty pounds (S. 58, N. 3) at ⁴ starting, and that was all (S. 3, N. 7) he ever ⁵ gave me. After I had been a considerable time at ⁶ the station at sea I ⁷ drew for twenty more, but the bill came ⁸ back protested. I ⁹ was mortified ¹⁰ at this rebuke, and made ¹¹ a promise, which I have ever ¹² kept, that ¹³ I would never draw another bill without ¹⁴ a certainty of its being paid. I immediately changed my mode of living, quitted ¹⁵ my mess ¹⁶, lived ¹⁷ alone, and ¹³ took up the ship's allowance, which I found quite sufficient; washed and mended ¹⁹ my own clothes; made a pair of trousers out of the ticking of my bed ²⁰, and, having (S. 55, N. 1) by ²¹ these means saved as much money as ²² would redeem my honour, I took ²³ up my bill. From (S. 102, N. 4) that time to this I ²⁴ have taken care to ²⁵ keep within my means."

Jervis (S. 5, N. 2) for six years endured pinching ²⁶ privation, but preserved his integrity, studied his profession with success, and gradually rose ²⁷ by merit and bravery to the highest rank.—S. Smiles, Self-Help.

1, Early Privations, Jugendentbehrungen; the story — struggles. Section 117.

THE BLESSEDNESS 1 OF FRIENDSHIP.

I.

A ² blessed thing it is for any ³ man or (S. 10, N. 9) woman to have a friend; one human soul whom we can trust utterly; a friend who knows the best and the worst ⁴ of us, and who loves us, in spite of all our faults; who will ⁵ speak the honest ⁶ truth to us, while the world flatters us to ⁷ our face, and laughs at us behind our backs; who will give ⁸ us counsel and reproof in the days of (S. 3, N. 2) prosperity and self-conceit; but ⁹ who, again, will comfort and encourage us in the days of difficulty ¹⁰, and sorrow, when the world leaves ¹¹ us alone to ¹² fight our own battle as we can.

If we have had the good fortune to win such a friend, let us do anything ¹³ rather ¹⁴ than lose him. We must give and forgive; live and let live. If our friend have ¹⁵ faults, we must bear ¹⁶ with them (S. 4, N. 5, B). We must hope all things, believe all things, endure all things, rather ¹⁷ than lose that most precious of all earthly possessions—a trusty ¹⁸ friend.

2. It is a blessing. 3, every. 4. Superlative of 5, will speak = always speaks. Use the Present likewise with the following verbs in this passage. 6, aufrichtig. 7, ind Gesicht. 8, to give counsel and reproof to a person, einem mit Rat und Tabel zur Seite fteben; self-conceit, Selbittauschung, f .- The adverbial clause 'in the days - conceit' stands after the rel. pron. and the Dat. 'us' (App. § 9). 9, but — again, 10, Prufung. 11, 'to leave a person alone', here ber uns aber auch. 12, und wir unfern Rampf, fo gut wir fonnen, allein einen imftich laffen. auszufechten haben. 13, all. 14, um ihn nur nicht zu verlieren. 16, to bear a thing, Geould mit etwas haben. 17, lieber, which place before the last 'all'. 18, guverläffig.

Section 118.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF FRIENDSHIP.

II.

And a friend once won (S. 7, N. 3, A) need 1 never be lost, if we will only be trusty and true ourselves. Friends may 2 part, not merely in body, but in spirit, for a while. In the bustle of (S. 3, N. 2) business and the accidents of life, they may lose 3 sight of each other for years (S. 115, N. 4); and 4 more—they 5 may begin to differ in their success in life, in their opinions, in their habits, and there may be, for a time 6, coldness and estrangement between them: but not for ever, if each will be but trusty and true.

For then ⁷, according to ⁸ the beautiful figure of the poet, they will be like two ships which set sail ⁹ at morning from the same port, and ere ¹⁰ nightfall lose sight of each other, and ¹¹ go each on its own course, and at its own pace, for many days, through many storms and seas; and ¹² yet meet again, and ¹³ find themselves lying side by side in the same haven, when the long voyage is past.—Charles Kingsley, "The Water of Life."

1, need — lost = we need (brauchen) never to lose. 2, may = can, after which place the adverbial clause 'for a while', ouf furze Beit; the verb 'part', which is equivalent to 'be separated' should stand at the end of the whole passage; 'in body', förverlich; 'in spirit', geistig. 3, to lose sight of each 4, ja noch mehr. other, fich aus bem Beficht verlieren. 5, Say 'it is possible that their success in life, their opinions, their habits begin to differ (differieren)'. 6, for a time, eine Beit lang, which place after 'and'; 'may', here mag; 'be', here = exist, bestehen. 7, Here follow copula and subject according to App. § 14. 8, according to, nach; figure, Bild, n.; to be like, gleichen, which governs the Dat. 9, to set sail and feneln. 10, ere nighttall, vor Dunfelwerben. 11, Say 'and of which each through many storms and upon many seas (Meer, n.) for days pursues its own course (Rightnug, f.) and its own pace (Eauf, m.)'. 12, and - again, welche aber bennoch wieder gufam'men-13, Say 'and find that they lie after the long voyage (Seefahrt, f.) side by side (neben einander) in the same haven '.

"I want to be at work? in the world," said Tom, "and not dawdling away, three years at Oxford."

"What do you mean by at work in the world?" said the master, with his lips close to his saucerful of tea, and peering at Tom over it.

"Well, I mean real work; one's brooksion, whatever one will really have to do, and make one's living by. I want to be doing some real good, feeling (S. 30, N. 4) that I am not only at play in the world," answered Tom, rather puzzled to find out himself what he really did mean.

"You are mixing up two very different things in your head, I¹o think, Brown," said the master, putting down¹¹ (S. 111, N. 6) the empty saucer, "and you ought to get clear ¹² about them (S. 4, N. 5, B). You ¹³ talk of 'working to get your living' and 'doing some real good in the world' in the same breath."

13, Use the 2nd pers. sing., and read carefully S. 1, N. 3, and S. 87, N. 6, which will enable you to construe this passage. The adverbial clause 'in the same breath' (= in one breath) must be placed after the predicate 'talk'; to talk of a thing, von etwas sprechen.

Section 120.

DO GOOD IN YOUR OWN SPHERE OF ACTION.

H.

Now¹, you may be getting a good living in a profession, and yet doing no good at all in the world, but (S. 6, N. 10) quite ² the contrary. Keep ³ the latter before you as your one object, and you ⁴ will be right whether you make a living ⁵ or not; but ⁶ if you dwell on the other, you'll very likely drop ⁷ into mere money-making, and let ⁸ the world take care of itself, for good or evil. Don't be in a hurry ⁹ about finding your work in the world for yourself; you are not old enough to (S. 19, N. 7) judge for yourself yet, but just ¹⁰ look about you in the place you find yourself in, and try (S. 51, N. 13) to make things ¹¹ a little better and honester there. You'll ¹² find plenty to keep your hand in at Oxford, or wherever else you [may] go. And ¹³ don't be led away to think this part of the world important, and that unimportant. Every corner of the world is important. No man knows whether this part or that part is ¹⁴ most so, but every man may ¹⁵ do some honest work in his own corner.—
Thomas Hughes, "Tom Brown's School Days."

THE STATE 1 OF IRELAND.

(Conclusion of a Speech delivered 2 in the House of Commons in March 1868.)

I.

We must all endeavour to get ³ rid of passion in ⁴ discussing this church question, which ⁵, I am sorry to say, is, of all others, the most calculated to create passion. We are ⁶ all, I believe, of one religion. I do not know (S. 51, N. 13), but I suppose there ⁷ will come a time in the history of the world, when men will be astonished ⁸ that Catholic ⁹ and Protestant, Churchman ¹⁰ and Nonconformist ¹¹, had ¹² so much animosity and suspicion against each other.

I ¹⁸ accept and believe in a very grand passage which I once met ¹⁴ with in the writings of the illustrious founder of the colony and (S. 10, N. 9) state of Pennsylvania, that ¹⁵ "the humble ¹⁶, meek, merciful, just, pious, and devout souls are ⁶ everywhere of ⁶ one religion; and when death ¹⁷ (S. 3, N. 2) has taken off the mask, they will know ¹⁸ one another, though the diverse liveries 19 they wear make 20 them strangers."

THE STATE OF IRELAND.

Let us act in this spirit, and our work is ¹ easy. The noble lord (S. 5, N. 2), towards ² the conclusion of his speech, spoke of the cloud which is at present hanging ³ over Ireland. It is a dark and heavy cloud, and its darkness expands ⁴ over the feelings of men in all parts of the British Empire. But ⁶ there is a consolation that we may all take to ourselves. An inspired king, bard, and prophet has left ⁶ us words which ⁷ are not only the expression of a fact, but we may take them as the utterance of a prophecy. He says: "To ⁸ the upright there arises light in the darkness."

Let us try in this matter to be upright ⁹. Let us try to be just, and that cloud will ¹⁰ be dispelled; the dangers which we see will vanish; and we ¹¹ may have the happiness of leaving ⁶ (S. 1, N. 3) to our children the heritage of an honourable citizenship in a united and prosperous ¹² empire.—The Right Hon. John Bright.

DR. GUTHRIE ON RAGGED SCHOOLS 1.

I.

The 2 interest I have been led to take in the Ragged School movement is an example of how, in Providence, a man's destiny—his course of life, like that of a river—may be determined and affected by very trivial circumstances. It is rather 3 curious—at least it is interesting for me to 4 remember—that (S. 66, N. 15) it was by a picture I was first 5 led to take an interest in ragged schools—by a picture in an old, obscure 6, decaying burgh 7 that stands on the shores of the Frith of Forth, the birth-place (S. 53, N. 9) of 8 Thomas Chalmers. I went 9 to see this place many years ago, and, going (S. 55, N. 1) into an inn for 10 refreshment, I found the room covered (App. § 1) with pictures of shepherdesses with their crooks, and sailors in 11 holiday attire, not 12 particularly interesting. But above the chimney-piece there 13 was a large print 14, more 15 respectable than its neighbours, which 16 represented a cobbler's room.

The 1 cobbler was there himself, spectacles 2 on nose, an old shoe between his (S. 43, N. 9) knees, the massive 3 forehead and firm mouth indicating 4 great determination of character, and, beneath his bushy eyebrows, benevolence ⁵ gleamed out on a number of poor ragged boys and girls who stood at their lessons round the busy cobbler. My curiosity was awakened; and in the inscription I read how this man, John Pounds, a cobbler in Portsmouth, took 6 pity on the multitude of 7 poor ragged children left by ministers and magistrates, and ladies and gentlemen, to go to ruin in the streets—how, like a good shepherd, he gathered in these wretched 10 outcasts—how he had trained 11 them to God and the world—and how¹², while earning his daily bread by¹³ the sweat of his brow, he had rescued 14 from misery and saved to 15 society not less than five hundred of these gentlemen ¹⁶. I felt ¹⁷ ashamed of myself. I ¹⁸ felt reproved for the little I had done. My feelings ¹⁹ were touched. I was astonished at the man's achievements; and I²⁰ well remember, in ²¹ the enthusiasm of the moment, saying to my companion (and I have seen in my cooler and calmer moments no reason for 22 unsaying the saying): "That man is 23 an honour to humanity, and deserves the greatest monument ever 24 raised within the shores of Britain."

I¹ took up that man's history, and I found it animated by² the spirit of³ Him who⁴ had "compassion on the multitude." John Pounds was a clever man besides ⁵; and, like ⁶ Paul, if he could not win a poor boy in (auf) any other way, he won him by art. He ¹ would be seen chasing a ragged boy along the quays, and compelling him to come to ⁶ school, not by (burth) the power ⁶ of a policeman, but by the power of a hot potato. He knew the love an ¹⁰ Irishman has for a potato; and ¹¹ John Pounds might be seen holding under a boy's nose a very hot potato, and ¹² wearing a coat as ragged as the boy himself wore. When the day comes when ¹³ honour shall be done to whom honour is due ¹⁴, I¹⁶ can fancy the crowd of those whose fame poets (S. 3, N. 2) have sung ¹⁶, and to whose memory monuments have been raised, dividing ¹¹ like a wave, and ¹⁶ passing the great, and the noble, and the mighty of the land, this poor, obscure old man stepping forward and receiving the especial notice of Him who said: "Inasmuch ¹⁶ as ye did it to one of the least of those, ye did it also to me."—Dr. Guthrie.

SHYLOCK 1 MEDITATING REVENGE.

If it will feed 2 nothing else (S. 27, N. 8), it will 8 feed my revenge. He has disgraced 4 me, and hindered 6 me of half a million! laughed 6 at my losses, mocked 7 at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted 8 my bargains, cooled 9 my friends, heated 10 my enemies! And 11 what's his reason? I am a Jew! Has ¹² not a Jew eyes? Has not a Jew hands, organs, senses, affections, ¹³ passions? Is (S. 2, N. 1) he not fed with ¹⁴ the same food, hurt with the same weapon, subject ¹⁵ to the same diseases, healed ¹⁶ by the same means, warmed ¹⁷ and cooled by the same summer and winter, as a Christian is? If ¹⁸ you stab us, do we not bleed? If you tickle us, do we not laugh? If you poison us, do we not die? and ¹⁹ if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like ²⁰ you in the rest (S. 27, N. 8), we will resemble you in that ²¹! If a Jew wrong a Christian, what ²² is his humility? Revenge ²³. If a Christian wrong a Jew, what ²⁴ should his sufferance be by Christian example? Why ²⁵, revenge! CHARACTER' OF CHARLEMAGNE.

Ι.

In ² analyzing the character of heroes it is hardly possible to separate altogether the ³ share of fortune from their own ⁴. The epoch made ⁵ by Charlemagne in the history of the world, the illustrious families which ⁶ prided themselves in him as their progenitor, the ⁷ very legends of romance, which are full of his fabulous exploits, have ⁸ cast a lustre around his head, and testify ⁹ the greatness that has embodied itself in his name. None ¹⁰, indeed, of Charlemagne's wars can be compared with the Saracenic victories of Charles Martel; but ¹¹ that was a contest for freedom, his for conquest; and ¹² fame is more partial to successful aggression than to patriotic resistance.

CHARACTER OF CHARLEMAGNE.

H.

As α scholar ¹, his acquisitions ² were little superior ³ to those of his unrespected son; and in ⁴ several points of view the glory of Charlemagne might be ⁵ extenuated by an analytical dissection. But ⁶ rejecting a mode of judging equally uncandid and fallacious, we shall find that he possessed in everything that grandeur of ⁷ conception which distinguishes extraordinary minds ⁸. Like Alexander, he seemed born ⁹ for universal innovation ¹⁰; in a life restlessly active ¹¹, we see him reforming (S. 78, N. 14, B) the coinage ¹², and establishing the legal divisions of money ¹⁸; gathering ¹⁴ about him the learned of every country, founding schools and collecting libraries; interfering ¹⁶, but with the tone of a King, in religious controversies; aiming ¹⁶, though prematurely, at the formation of a naval force; attempting ¹⁷, for ¹⁸ the sake of commerce, the magnificent ¹⁹ enterprise of uniting (S. 1, N. 3) the Rhine and ²⁰ Danube; and ²¹ meditating to mould the ²² discordant codes of Roman and barbarian laws into one uniform system.—Hallam, "The Student's Middle Ages."

1, Scholar='pupil or schoolboy' is rendered by Schüler; = 'student' by Etubent, and = 'learned man' by Gelehrter. The last sense is applicable here. 2, acquisitions = knowledge. 3, superior, interlegen, with dat. unrespected = 4, in many respects, in mander Sinfidst, after which place unnoticed. 5, be - dissection, burch eine eingehende Untersnehung geschmälert 'might'. werten. 6, Say 'But if we reject an equally (eine ebenso) partial (parteiisch) and (als) fallacious (trugerisch) mode of judging (Beurteilungsweise, f.)'. the gen. of the def. art. 8, 'mind', here Weijt, m. 9, born = created; 10, innovations = reforms. Passing through an ante-chamber, where, in cupboards, stand his mineralogical collections, we enter (App. § 14) the study, a low-roofed, narrow room (Genad, n.), somewhat dark (S. 128, N. 11), for it is (S. 2, N. 1) lighted only through two tiny windows, and 1 furnished with a simplicity quite touching to behold.

In the centre² stands a plain oval table of unpolished oak ³. No armchair is to be seen, no sofa, nothing which (S. 3, N. 7) speaks ⁴ of comfort. A plain hard chair has ⁵ beside it the basket in which he used ⁶ to place his handkerchief. Against ⁷ the wall, on the right, is a ⁸ long pear-tree table, with book-shelves, on which stand lexicons and manuals. Here hangs a pincushion, venerable in ⁹ dust, with the visiting-cards, and other trifles which ¹⁰ death had made sacred. Here ¹¹ also a medallion of Napoleon, with this ¹² circumscription: "Scilicet ¹³ immenso superest ex nomine multum." On the side-wall again, a book-case, with some works of poets. On the wall to the left is a long desk of soft wood, at ¹⁴ which he was wont ⁶ to write. The same door leads into a bedroom; it is a closet with a window. A simple bed, an arm-chair by its side, and a tiny washing-table, with a small white basin on it and a sponge, is all the furniture.

From the other side of the study we enter the library, which should rather be called a lumber-room of books. Rough 6 deal shelves hold the books with 6 bits of paper, on which are written "philosophy," "history," "poetry," etc., to mark the classification. He rose at seven [o'clock], sometimes 7 earlier, after a sound and prolonged 8 sleep; for like Thorwaldsen 9 he had a "talent for sleeping," only surpassed (S. 7, N. 3, B) by 10 his talent for 11 continuous work. Till eleven he worked without any interruption. A cup of chocolate was then 12 brought, and 13 he resumed work till one. At two he dined. This 14 meal was the important meal of the day. His appetite was immense. Even on the days when 15 he complained of not being hungry, he ate much more than most men. Puddings, sweets 16, and cakes were always welcome. He sat 17 a long while over his wine, chatting 18 gaily to some friend or other—for he never dined alone—or to one of the actors, whom he had often with 19 him, after dinner, to read over their parts, and to take 20 his instructions.

GOETHE'S DAILY LIFE AT WEIMAR.

III.

He was fond of wine (S. 3, N. 2) and drank daily his two or three bottles. Lest 1 this statement should convey a false impression, I hasten to2 recall to the reader's recollection the very different habits of our fathers in respect to drinking. It was no unusual thing to be called "a three-bottle-man" in those days in England, when the three bottles were of port or Burgundy; and Goethe, a 8 Rhinelander, accustomed from boyhood to wine, drank a wine which his English contemporaries would have called water. The amount he drank never did more than exhilarate him, and never made him unfit for work or for society. Over7 his wine, then, he sat some hours; no such thing as dessert was seen upon his table in those days; not even the customary coffee after dinner. His mode 8 of living was extremely simple; and even when persons 9 of very moderate circumstances burned wax 10, two 11 poor tallow candles were all that could be seen in his rooms. In the evening he often went to the theatre, and there 12 his customary glass of punch was brought (S. 4, N. 4, man) at six o'clock (App. § 9). If (S. 27, N. 7) not at the theatre, he received friends at 18 home. Between eight and nine a frugal supper was laid 14, but 15 he never took anything except a little salad or preserves. By 16 ten o'clock he was usually in bed.—G. H. Lewes, "Life of Goethe."

1, Lest — impression = In order that (Damit) this observation may (Present Subj. of mogen; read App. §§ 33 and 34) not make a false impression.—For the position of the verbs see App. § 18. 2, to - drinking = to remind the reader of (an) the very different (gang antern) habits of our fathers in respect of drinking.-To transl. 'drinking' form a noun of the infinitive of the verb 'to drink', and use it with the def. art., according to S. 3, N. 2, and S. 11, 3, no—thing, nichte Ungewöhnlichee; in those days, damale, which place with 'in England' after 'was'. 4, 'when', here wo. Notice that: The relative conjunction 'wo' is often used in reference to time as a translation of 'when' in the sense of 'at (in or during) which time'; as - Es geschah zu einer Zeit, wo (zu or in welcher) Sie abwesend waren, it happened at a time when you were absent. It is also used relatively, in reference to place, instead of a relative pronoun preceded by a preposition; as - Rennft bu das Land, wo (in welchem) die Bitronen bluben? (Goethe) Know you the land where (in which) the citrons bloom? Dies ift das Saus, wo (in dem) er mobile, this is the house where (in which) he lives. 5, a - wine, als Rheinlander von Jugend auf an Wein gewöhnt. 6, The - him = What he drank had never any (=an) other effect than (als) to exhilarate him; to exhilarate, angenehm an regen. 7, So he sat for hours (stundenlang) over his 8, Lebensweise, f. THE 1 PROGRESS IN THE ART OF PRINTING.

(Conclusion ² of a Speech delivered at the Caxton Celebration, June 30, 1877, in London.)

I now call attention, in a few words, to the progress of this art. I hold up a volume in my (S. 43, N. 9) hand, to 5 which I beg everyone to direct his eye, because I think it 6 may be called the climax and consummation of this art. This 7 volume is bound, as you see, and stamped with the arms of the University of Oxford. It is a Bible bound 8 in a manner that commends itself to the reader—I believe 9 in every sense an excellent piece of workmanship, containing more than one 10 thousand pages. Well 11, you will say: "That is very 12 commonplace, why bring it before us?" I do so 13 in order to tell 14 you that this book sixteen hours ago did not exist—it 18 was not bound, it was not folded, it was not printed. Since the clock struck twelve last night at 16 the University Press in Oxford, the people (man) there have printed and sent us this book. They (man) have sent several copies 17 to 18 be distributed here in the midst of your festival. That shows what can be done, and that is what has been done, and 19 it shows the state to which this great art is now happily arrived. ROBERT DICK, THE BAKER, GEOLOGIST, AND BOTANIST.

Not long ago, Sir Roderick Murchinson discovered at Thurso, in the far north of Scotland, a profound geologist, in the person of a baker there 2, named Robert Dick. When (S. 4, N. 2) Sir Roderick called upon him at 3 the bakehouse in which (S. 131, N. 4) he baked and earned his bread, Robert Dick delineated 4 to him by 5 means of flour upon a board, the geographical features 6 and geological phenomena of his native country, pointing 7 out its imperfections in 8 the existing maps, which he had ascertained by travelling over the country in his leisure hours. On 10 further inquiry, Sir Roderick ascertained 11 that the humble 12 individual before him was not only a capital baker and geologist, but also a first-rate 18 botanist. "I found," said the Director-General of the Geographical Society, "to my great humiliation, that this baker 14 knew infinitely more of (S. 40, N. 9) botanical science, ay, ten times more, than I did; and that there were (S. 82, N. 7) only some twenty or thirty specimens 15 of flowers which he had not collected. Some he had obtained 16 as presents, some (=others) he had purchased, but the greater portion had been accumulated 17 by his industry, in his native county of Caithness; and the specimens 18 were all arranged 19 in the most beautiful order, with 20 their scientific names affixed."—S. THE GOSPEL OF WORK.

I.

Work, hard work, is a blessing to the soul and the character of the man who works. Young men may not think so. They may say: "What more pleasant than to have one's fortune made for one, and have nothing more before one than to enjoy life? What more pleasant than to be idle; or, at least, to do only what one likes, and no more than one likes?" But they would find themselves mistaken. They would find that idleness makes a man restless, discontented, greedy, the slave of his own lusts and passions, and see, too late, that no man is more to be pitied than the man who has nothing to do. Yes, thank God, every morning, when you get up, that you have something to do that day which must be done, whether you like it or not. Being storced to work, and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and a (S. 132, N. 10) hundred virtues which the idle 15 man will never know.

1, fchwer. 2, für. 3, character = dignity. Turn 'of — works' by 'of him (beffen) who (after which insert the adv. ba) works. people, Runt. When 'people' signifies 'persons' in the general sense of the word, it is mostly rendered by Runt. In the signification of 'nation' it is rendered by Wolf, n., corresponding to the Latin 'populus' and the French 'peuple'. In the first signification, however, we can often translate it by the indefinite pronoun 'man', which also corresponds to the English 'they', 'we', 'you', used in a general and indefinite 6, Was giebt es. 5, = They say perhaps. 7. to have = to see; for one = by (von) others. 8, Say 'with no other task than to 9, 'Man' is here used in the signification of 'human enjoy one's life'? being', when it is generally rendered by 'ber Menich'.

10, Read S. 102,
N. 13.

11, Use the demonstrative pron. berjenige.

12, When the Imperative of the 2nd pers, is used in a general application, we use it either in the 2nd pers. sing. or the 2nd pers. pl. Use the 2nd pers. sing. in this case. 13, Being - best = The compulsion (3 wang, m.) to work (int Arbeit) and the necessity to do your (= thy) best. 14, Place 'in you' (= thee) after 'virtues', immediately before the infinitive 'breed' (= awaken, erweden). 15, the idle man, ber Müßigganger.

THE GOSPEL OF WORK.

II.

The monks in olden times found it so ¹. When (S. 18, N. 6) they shut ² themselves up from the world to worship God in ³ prayers and hymns, they found that [here follows the subject "they"], without working ⁴, without ⁵ hard work either of head or of hands, they could not ⁶ even be good men (S. 134, N. 9). The ¹ devil came and ⁶ tempted them, they said, as often as they were ⁰ idle. Than idle monk's soul was lost, they used (S. 129, N. 6) to say, and they spoke truly. Though they gave ¹⁰ up a large portion of ¹¹ every day, and of every night also, to ¹² prayer and worship, (S. 27, N. 8) yet ¹³ they found [that] they could not pray aright without work.

And "working (S. 11, N. 7) is praying," said one of the holiest of them that "ever lived; and he spoke truth (S. 3, N. 2); if 15 a man will but do his work for the sake of duty, which is for the sake of God.—

CHARLES KINGSLEY.

1, Turn 'it so' by 'bas', which place at the head of the sentence, using the inverted construction and inserting the adv. 'and,' after the verb. 2, to shut oneself up, sid ab's disesu, sep. comp. str. v. resl. 3, burd; to worship, werefren. 4, working = work. 5, osu angestrangte stepse vandarteit. 6, not even, nicht einmal. 7, The words 'They said' are best placed at the head of this passage. To translate the verbs correctly, you must carefully read App. §§ 28 and 30. 8, and tempted them = in order to tempt them. 9, waren. 10, 'to give up', here = to devote, widmen, with dat. 11, of—also = of the day and of the night. 12, bem Gebet und den Andachteübungen. 13, yet, bed, to be placed after the subject. 14, who ever (je) has lived.

How must the verbs be placed?

'When a man (S. 134, N. 9) does his work for the sake of (um... willen, which governs the Gen.) his duty, (S. 27, N. 8) he does it (to agree with 'duty') for God's sake'.

General Bau, a German (S. 101, N. 1) officer in the service of Russia, who had contributed much to the elevation of the great Catherine had orders to march to Holstein with a body of troops of which he had the command. He was a soldier of fortune, and no one knew either his family or his native place. One day (S. 19, N. 2), as he was encamped near Husum, he invited the principal officers to dinner. As they were sitting down to the table, they saw a plain miller and his wife brought into the tent, whom the general had sent his aide-de-camp to seek. The poor miller and his wife approached, trembling (S. 53, N. 12) with apprehension. The general reconciled them to their situation, and made them sit down beside him to dinner, during which he asked them a number of questions about their family.

The good man told him that he was (App. § 28) the eldest son of a miller, and that he had two brothers in 1 a mercantile line and a sister.

"But," said the general, "had you 2 not another brother besides the two whom you have mentioned?" The miller told him he had another 3 brother, but 4 he went to the wars very young, and as 5 they had never heard of him, they supposed he was dead. The 6 general, reading (S. 16, N. 4) in the eyes of the officers that they were surprised at his entertaining himself so long with questioning the poor man, turned to them and said: "Gentlemen, you have always been curious to know from what family I sprung 7; I now tell 8 you that I am not ashamed of my origin; that I am the brother of this honest miller; he has given you the history 9 of my family." The general, after spending 10 (S. 55, N. 1) the day with his relations, in 11 the festivity of which his officers heartily joined, took measures to better their fortune 12.—Anecdotes.

NOT NEAR ENOUGH YET.

There is a popular report in the Brandenburg district, where Bismarck's family has been so many centuries at home, which attributes to the Bismarcks, as the characteristic saying of the house, the phrase: "Noch lange nicht genug"-(Not near enough yet), and which expresses 5, we 2 suppose, the popular 3 conception of 4 their tenacity of purpose that 6 they were not tired out of any plan they had formed by a reiterated failure or a pertinacious opposition which would have disheartened most of their compeers. There is a somewhat extravagant illustration of this characteristic in Bismarck's wild, youthful days, if his biographer may be trusted. When studying 8 law at Berlin, he had been more than once disappointed by a bootmaker who did not send home his boots when they were promised. Accordingly 11 when this next happened, a servant of the young jurist appeared at the bootmaker's at six in the morning (App. § 9) with the simple question: "Are Herr 12 von Bismarck's boots ready?" When he was told they were not 13, he departed 14, but at ten minutes past six another servant appeared, asking 15 the same question, and 16 so at precise intervals of ten minutes it went on all day, till by 17 the evening the boots were finished and 18 sent home.—Earle, "The PHILOLOGY OF THE ENGLISH TONGUE."

A GREAT LOSS.

Mr. Thomas Carlyle had lent the Manuscript of the first volume of his "French Revolution" to a neighbour to peruse. By 1 some mischance or other, it 2 had been left lying on the parlour-floor, and 8 become forgotten. Weeks ran on 4, when at last the historian sent for b his manuscript, the 6 printers being loud for copy. Inquiries 7 were made, and 8 then it was found that the maid-of-all-work, finding 9 what she conceived to be a bundle of waste paper on the floor, had 10 used it to light the kitchen and parlour fires with 11. Such 12 was the answer returned 18 to Mr. Carlyle, and his consternation and despair may be imagined (S. 4, N. 4). There 14 was, however, no help for him but to set himself resolutely to work to re-write his book; and 15 he turned to and did it. He had no draft 16, and 17 was compelled to rake up from his memory facts, ideas, and expressions, which had long since been dismissed. The composition 18 of the book in the first instance had been a work of real pleasure; the 19 re-writing of it, a second time, was one of pain and anguish almost beyond belief. That 20 he persevered and finished the volume under such circumstances affords 21 an instance of determination of purpose which has seldom been exceeded.—S. Smiles, "Self-Help."

JAMES WATT AND THE STEAM-ENGINE.

I.

James Watt was the great Improver of the steam-engine; but, in truth ¹, as to all that is admirable in its structure, or vast in its utility, he should rather be described as its Inventor. It was by his inventions that its action ² was so regulated as ³ to make it capable of being applied to the finest and most delicate manufactures, and its power so increased as to set weight and solidity at defiance. By his admirable contrivances ⁴ it has become a thing stupendous alike for its force and flexibility, for the prodigious power which it can exert, and the ease, precision, and ducility with which this power can be varied, distributed, and applied. The trunk of an elephant, that can pick up a pin or rend ⁵ an oak, is as nothing to it. It can engrave a seal, and crush masses of obdurate metal before it, draw out without ⁶ breaking a thread as fine as gossamer, and lift a ship of war like a bubble in the air. It can embroider ⁷ muslin and forge anchors, cut steel into ribbons ⁸, and impel ⁹ loaded vessels against the fury of the winds and waves.

1, 'in truth' is better not translated here. Say 'but in regard to (in Rudficht auf) all that (S. 3, N. 7) refers (sich beziehen) to (auf) the excellence of its construction and (wie) to (auf) the variety (Maunigfaltigfeit, f.) of its application (Nuganwendung, f.), should he rather (eigentlich) be called the Inventor of the same'. 2, Wirfung, f.; in what voice is the verb? Insert the adv. erst after the auxiliary. 3, as — defiance = as (um) to be able to employ it in (bei) the making (Aufertianua, f.) of the finest and most delicate (3art) manufactures (Fabrifate), and its power so increased as (um) to be able to render resistance (Biberstand leisten) to every weight (Last, f.) and every solidity (Festigseit, f.). Translate 'to be able' by founen, which need be expressed but once, and must be placed at the very end of the whole period, which, along with the following, is perhaps the most difficult to translate that has yet been 4, Ginrichtungen; it = the machine; thing, Werfzeng, n., after which place the verb 'become'; alike for, und smar bied sowohl wegen . . . wie and, 6, Say 'without tearing it', which place after 5, rend = tear down. 'gossamer' (Commerfaben). 7. Insert the prep. auf here. 8. Streifen. 9, to impel against, entge gentreiben, governing the dat.

It would be difficult to estimate the value of the benefits which these inventions have conferred upon this country. There is no branch of industry that has not been indebted ¹ to them; and ², in all the most material, they have not only widened most magnificently the field of its exertions, but ⁸ multiplied a thousand-fold the amount of its productions. It was our improved steam-engine, in short ⁴, that fought the battles of Europe and sustained and exalted, through ⁵ the late tremendous contest, the political greatness of our land. It is the same great power which now enables us to pay the interest of our debt, and to maintain ⁶ the arduous struggle in which we are still engaged (1819) with the skill ⁷ and capital of countries (S. 16, N. 10) less oppressed with (von) taxation.

But these are poor 8 and narrow views of its importance. It has increased indefinitely the mass of 9 human comforts and enjoyments, and 10 rendered cheap and accessible, all over the world, the materials of wealth and prosperity.

1, I am greatly indebted to you, ich habe Huen vieles zu verdanken.

2, Say 'and in the principal branches'; most magnificently, auf das grefartigste.

3, Insert 'also' here.

4, Kurz, which place at the head of the period.

5, through = in.

6, fortseten, which rendering will make the relative clause 'in—engaged' superstuous.

7, 'skill', here = industry.

8, poor = superscial; narrow, beschränkt; of = about.

9, of human = of our.

It has armed the feeble hand of (S. 3, N. 2) man, in short 1, with a power to which no limits can be assigned 2; completed 3 the dominion of mind over the most refractory qualities of matter 4, and laid a sure foundation for 5 all those future miracles of mechanic power which 6 are to aid and reward the labours of after generations. It 7 is to the genius of one man, too, that all this is mainly owing! And certainly no man ever bestowed such a gift on his kind 8. The blessing is not only universal, but 9 unbounded; and the fabled 10 inventors of the plough and the loom, who were defined by their rude 11 contemporaries, conferred less important benefits (App. § 5) on mankind than the inventor of our present steam-engine.

This will be the fame of Watt with 12 future generations, and it 13 is sufficient for his race and his country.—Lord JEFFREY.

MANUFACTURES OF ENGLAND1.

The principal branches of 2 the industrial pursuits are the manufactures 3 of cotton, woollen 4, and worsted goods, iron and hardware, earthenware 5, hosiery, mining 6, and shipbuilding. The geographical distribution of the manufacturing population is dependent partly on natural, partly on accidental circumstances. The proximity of a coalfield 8 decides the point 9 in many instances 10; for, even where the raw material is bulky11, it is generally more practicable to bring 12 it to the coal (Rohlen), than the coal to it, an 13 instance of which is furnished by the copper-ore of Cornwall being taken to Swansea to be smelted. The iron manufacture is carried on 14 generally at 15 the coal-fields, the 16 chief seats being South Wales, Staffordshire, and Derbyshire. The cotton manufacture has 17 been located in Lancashire and Cheshire for the last three centuries; but 18 it has attained its present dimensions very much through those counties being readily furnished with the raw material from America, as 19 well as from the abundance of coal outside those counties; Manchester, Bolton, Oldham, Stockport, and Macclesfield are the chief seats of the manufacture.—Bevan, "The Student's Manual of Modern Geography."

2, of - pursuits, ber Industrie. 1, Die englische Industrie. 3. Tovfermaren. 9, the point, barüber, which place last. 10, instances = 8, Rohlenlager, n. 11, schwer und umfangreich. 12, hin'schaffen; than - it = than the reverse, als umgefehrt. 13, It is well to begin a new period here, thus: 'An example of this (bayu) furnishes the copper-ore of Cornwall, which is 'An example of this (value) taken (beforbern) to (S. 72, N. 4), S.', etc. 14, betreiben, insep. c. str. v. 15, at the = in the neighbourhood of the. 16, the — being = which are mainly situated (belegen) in. 17, has been located, ift anfässig. This clause containing a Gerund (being) preceded by the preposition 'through', must be construed according to S. I, N. 3, and S. 87, N. 6 in the following way: 'but it (fie) has received its present dimension especially thereby (baburd, read S. 87, N. 6), that these counties can easily be (S. 2, N. 1) supplied with the raw material from America'. The three verbs must, of course, be placed at the end, and in such a way that the governing verb (can) stands last, and the auxiliary of tense in the middle. counties = as also (wie and) nod) thereby, that the coal is [use the pl. in German] to be got (an haben sein) in abundance in the neighbouring counties.

Village of N'sanda 2, August 4, 1877.

To 3 any Gentleman who speaks English at Embomma.

Dear & Sir,

I have arrived at ⁶ this place from Zanzibar with 115 souls, (S. 53, N. 9) men, women, and children. We are now in ⁶ a state of imminent starvation. We can buy ⁷ nothing from the natives, for they laugh at ⁸ our kinds of cloth ⁹, beads, and wire. There ¹⁰ are no provisions in the country that may be purchased, except on market days, and starving people cannot afford to wait for these markets. I ¹¹, therefore, have made bold to despatch three of my young men ¹², natives ¹⁸ of Zanzibar, with (nebst) a boy named Feruzi, of the English mission at Zanzibar, with this letter.

I do not know you, but ¹⁴ I am told there (S. 104, N. 19) is an Englishman at (in) Embomma, and as you are a Christian and a gentleman, I beg you not to disregard my request. The boy Robert will be better able to describe our lone condition than I ¹⁵ can tell you in this letter. We are in a state of the greatest distress; but if your supplies ¹⁶ arrive in time, I ¹⁷ may be able to reach Embomma within four days.

2, The village of N'sanda is three 1, Anruf um Bufendung von Baren. days' journey from Embomma, or Boma, which is a small town on the Congo or Livingstone River at a distance of sixty-five English miles from the Atlantic, and, with regard to Stanley's position, may be considered the van of civilisation in Africa, being the first place inhabited by Europeans.—For the full understanding of this letter, it may be useful to observe that it was written at the critical period when, at their journey home from the sources of the Nile, and almost at the end of all their troubles, the heroic travellers of more than 7000 miles through Equatorial Africa found themselves face to face with the grimest of all enemies — starvation. Nearly forty men filled the sick list with dysentery, ulcers, and scurvy, and the number of victims of the latter disease was steadily increasing. For a considerable time the people had had no other food but a few ground-nuts and bananas, and were scarcely more than skin and bone. In this extremity Mr. Stanley determined to despatch four of his strongest and swiftest men with this letter to Embomma, where he was told there was one Englishman, one Frenchman, and three Portuguese. He then intended to follow these men as quickly as possible with the rest of his people, and to meet them and the expected supplies on the road to Boma, thus gaining at least one or two days, which might turn out to be of the greatest importance to his starving 3, Use the attributive construction, as explained in S. 48, followers. I want 300 cloths ¹, each four yards long, of ² such quality as you trade with, which is very different from that we have; but ³ better than all would be ten or fifteen man-loads of rice or grain to fill the pinched bellies immediately, as been with the cloths it would require time to purchase food, and starving people cannot wait. The supplies must arrive within two days, or I may have a fearful time of it among the dying. Of course I hold myself responsible for any expense (S. 16, N. 10) you may incur in the business. What is wanted is immediate relief, and I pray you to use your utmost energies to forward it at once. If (App. § 21) you have such little luxuries at tea, coffee, sugar, and biscuits by you, such a one man can easily carry, I beg you on my own behalf that you will send a small supply and and to the great debt of gratitude due to you upon the timely arrival of the supplies for my people. ANSWER TO 1 THE PRECEDING LETTER.

English Factory, Boma, 6th August 1877, 6.30 A.M.

H. M. Stanley, Esq.

Dear Sir,

Your welcome letter came ² to hand yesterday, at 7 P.M. As ³ soon as its contents were understood, we arranged to despatch to you such articles as you requested, as much as our stock on hand would permit, and other things that we deemed would be suitable in that locality. You will see that we send fifty pieces of cloth, each twenty-four yards long, and some sacks containing sundries for yourself; several⁴ sacks of rice, potatoes, a few bundles of fish, a bundle of tobacco, and one demijohn⁵ of rum. The carriers are all paid, so that you need not trouble yourself about them. That ⁶ is all we need say about business. We are exceedingly sorry to hear that you have arrived there in such (so) piteous ⁷ condition, but we send our warmest congratulations to you, and hope that you will soon arrive in Boma. (This ⁸ place is called Boma by us, though on the map it ⁹ is Embomma.) Again ¹⁰ hoping that you will soon arrive, and that you are not suffering in health,

Believe¹¹ us to remain,

Your sincere friends,

HATTON & COOKSON.

(Signed) A. DA MOTTA VEIGA.
J. W. HARRISON.

1, auf, with Acc.; A.M. morgens; P.M. abends.—This letter and the accompanying supplies were received by Mr. Stanley in the morning of the 6th of August, two days after he despatched his letter to Boma. Messrs. A. Da Motta Veiga and J. W. Harrison were the managers of a factory belonging to Messrs. Hatton & Cookson of Liverpool.

2, came to hand—we have...received.

3, As—locality—As soon as we had understood the contents of the same (to agree with letter), we (App. § 14) made arrangements (Anstalten tressen) to send you the asked for (erbeten) articles, as far as (so weit) our stock (Warenlager, n., or Warenvorvat, m.) would permit us (S. 51, N. 13), and add (supply noch) some other things of which we thought they might (= could) be useful to you there.

MR. STANLEY'S ACKNOWLEDGMENT¹ OF THE PRECEDING LETTER AND THE SUPPLIES ¹7.

I.

Banza M'Buko, August 6, 1877.

Messrs. A. Da Motta Veiga and J. W. Harrison, Embomma, Congo River.

Gentlemen,

I (S. 115, N. 1) have received your welcome letter, but better than all, and 2 more welcome, are your supplies. I am unable to express just at present how grateful I feel. At the sight of (von) the stores exposed 3 to our hungry eyes—at the sight of (von) the rice, the fish, and the rum, and 4 for me—wheaten bread, butter, sardines, jam, peaches, grapes, beer (ye 5 gods! just think of it—three bottles pale ale 6!), besides tea and sugar, we (App. § 14) are all so over-joyed and confused that we cannot restrain 7 ourselves from falling to and 8 enjoying this sudden bounteous store. I beg you will charge our apparent want of (an) thankfulness to our greediness. If we do not thank you sufficiently in words, rest assured we 10 feel what volumes could not describe.

For the next twenty-four hours we shall be too busy eating and drinking to think of anything else much; but I may say that the people¹¹ will cry out joyfully, while ¹² their mouths are full of rice and fish: "Verily, our master has found the sea and his brothers, but we did not believe him until ¹³ he showed us the rice and the pambe (rum). We did not believe there ¹⁴ was any end to the great river; but God be praised for ever, for we shall see white people ¹⁵ to-morrow, and our wars ¹⁶ and troubles will be over!"

1, Anzeige von dem Empfange; 'supplies', here Barenfendung, f. 2, Insert the adverb not here. 3, It was exposed to my eyes, es war vor meinen Augen ausgebreitet; 'hungry', here gierig. 4, und - bes für mich bestimmten Beißbrots; the article, in the Gen. case, must be repeated before each of the 6, Beigbier. following nouns. 7, bezwingen; from falling to, juzugreifen.
8, und diese und pe popularie.
9, I beg you will charge this 5, ye - it = o febet, Ihr Götter. to his greediness, ich bitte Gie, bies feiner Efbegierbe gur Laft legen ju wollen. 10, we — describe = we feel more than could (App. § 33, and S. 2, N. 1) be 12, Say 'while described to you through (burth) volumes. 11, Leute. their mouth is still filled with rice and fish'. 13, efe. 14, Say 'the great river had (See App. § 29) ever (je) an end. 15, Menfchen. 16, Rampfe und Befdwerben. 17, This letter, on the morning of the 7th of August, was despatched to Boma, the caravan following slowly, and reaching Boma on the 9th of August 1877, the 999th day from the date of their departure from Zanzibar. The expedition then embarked on board a steamer at Boma, and, on the 11th, descended the river Congo. After steaming northward from the mouth of the Congo for a few hours, the vessel entered the fine bay of Kabinda, on the southern shores of which the native town of that name in the county of Nyoyo is situate. The Expedition, after a stay of eight days at Kabinda, was kindly taken on board the Portuguese gunboat 'Tamega' to San Paulo de Loanda. Here they were treated with the utmost hospitality by the Portuguese and the officers of the English navy, who offered the Expedition a passage to Cape Town in H.M.S. 'Industry', Commander R. C. Dyer. The Cape of Good Hope was reached on the 21st of October. Here a telegram from the Lords of the British Admiralty was received, authorising the Commodore Francis William Sullivan to prepare H.M.S. 'Industry' for the reception of the Expedition and to convey them to Zanzibar, the end of their journey. On the 6th of November H.M.S. 'Industry' was equipped and ready for her voyage to Zanzibar, which was reached on the 20th of the same month. By this time the sick had, all but one, recovered, and had improved so much in appearance that few persons ignorant of what they had been, could have supposed that these were the living skeletons that had reeled from sheer weakness through Boma.

MR. STANLEY'S LETTER (continued).

II.

Dear Sirs,

Though 1 strangers, I feel we shall be great friends, and 2 I shall always remember my feelings of gratefulness, when I first caught sight of your supplies, and my poor, faithful, and brave people cried out: "Master, we are saved!—food is coming!" The old and the young—the men, the women, and the children—lifted their wearied and wornout frames, and began to chant lustily an extemporaneous song, in honour of the white people by (an) the great salt sea (the (S. 53, N. 9) Atlantic) who had listened to their prayers. I had to rush to my tent to hide the tears that would issue, despite all my attempts to composure.

Gentlemen, that the blessing of God may attend your footsteps whithersoever 11 you go, is the very earnest 12 prayer of

Yours faithfully, H. M. STANLEY,

Commanding the Anglo-American Expedition.—

RETURNED 1 KINDNESS.

When (S. 4, N. 2) the country near 2 Albany was newly settled, a starving Indian came to the inn at Lichfield and asked for a night's shelter and some supper, at 3 the same time confessing that, from 4 failure in hunting, he had nothing to pay. The hostess drove him away with reproachful 6 epithets, and as the Indian was about (S. 6, N. 4) scornfully to retire,—there being (S. 30, N. 4) no other inn for 7 many a weary mile,—a 8 man, who was sitting by, directed the hostess to supply his wants, and promised to pay her. As 10 soon as the Indian's supper was ended, he thanked his benefactor, and said he would some day return his kindness. Several years thereafter 11 the settler was taken a prisoner by a hostile tribe, and carried off to (S. 72, N. 4) Canada. His life was spared 12, but he was detained in 18 slavery. One 14 day, however, an Indian came to him, and bade the captive follow him. The Indian never told where they were going, nor 15 what was his object; but day after 16 day the captive followed his mysterious guide, till one afternoon they came suddenly on 17 a beautiful expanse of cultivated fields, with many houses rising amongst them. "Do you know that place?" asked the Indian. "Ah, yes—it is Lichfield!" and whilst the astonished exile 18 had not yet recovered from his surprise and (S. 10, N. 9) amazement, the Indian exclaimed: "And I am the starving Indian, on whom, at this very place, you took ¹⁹ pity. And now that ²⁰ I have repaid you, I pray you go home!"—Dr. Dwight.

1, vergelten, insep. comp. str. v. 2, unweit; newly, eben; 'to settle', here 3, at - confessing = on which occasion (webei) he confessed. 4, megen erfolglofer Jago. 5, nothing to pay = no money for (zu, contracted with the dat. of the def. art.) paying.
7, for — mile, meilenweit in der Runde.
8, 'a man', here=a guest. The verb 'directed' (heißen, str. v.) must be placed before the subject, since the 9, to supply a person's subordinate clause precedes the principal one. 10, Say 'As soon as the wants, für die Bedürfniffe eines Menfchen forgen. Indian had eaten (verzehren) his supper'. 11, fpater. 12, verschonen. 13, in slavery = as a slave; 'to detain', here gefangen halten. 'One day, however, came an Indian to the prisoner with the intimation (Beijung, f.) to follow him'. This construction is necessary to avoid the repetition of the pronoun 'ihm'. 15, nor—object = or else his intention. 17, zu einer ichonen Flache urbar gemachter Felber. 16, für. settler. 19, to take pity on a person, fich eines Menschen erbarmen; supply the adverb sinual (one day) before the verb. 20, that = since, ba; to repay a person, einem feine Schuld ab'tragen.

NEW-YEAR'S EVE'.

Į,

It was dreadfully cold; it snowed, and was beginning to grow dark; it was the last evening of the year,—New-year's Eve. In this cold, a poor little girl was wandering about the streets with 2 bare head and bare feet. She had slippers on when she left home (Saus, with the def. art.), but what was the good of them? They (Es) were the large, old slippers of her mother's—so large that they fell off the little girl's feet as she hurried across the street to 3 escape a carriage, which came 4 galloping along at a great rate. The one slipper was not to be found, and a boy ran off with the other.

So the little girl wandered about barefooted, with a quantity of matches in an old apron, whilst she held a box of them in her (S. 43, N. 9, A) hand. No one had bought any matches of her through the whole livelong day—no one had given her a single farthing. Hungry, and pinched with cold, the poor little girl crept of along, the large flakes of snow covering (S. 55, N. 1; use walkreud) her yellow hair, which curled round her face.

In ¹² a corner between two houses, one projecting beyond the other, she sought shelter. Huddling ¹³ herself up, she drew her poor little feet, which were red and blue with cold, under her (fid) as well as she could, but she ¹⁴ was colder than ever, and ¹⁵ dared not go home (S. 63, N. 8), for, as she had sold no matches, her cruel ¹⁶ father would beat her. Besides ¹⁷, it was cold at home (S. 63, N. 8), for they lived just ¹⁸ under the roof, and ¹⁹ the wind blew in, though straw and rags had been stuffed in the large cracks. Her little hands were quite benumbed with cold. Oh ²⁰, how much good one match would do, if she dared but (nur) take it out of the box and draw 21 it across the wall to warm her fingers in the flames!

1. Der Sulversterabend. 2, with - feet, barfuß und unbedectten Sauptes, which place before 'about (burth) the streets'. 3, to escape a carriage, einem Wagen aus dem Weg laufen. For the translation of the conjunction 'to' in this clause compare S. 19, N. 7. 4, to come galloping along at a great rate, in vollem Galopp die Strafe entlang fommen. 5, a quantity = some. 8, Schachtel, f.; of them = of the same. 7, through - day, ben gangen Tag lang, which is best placed at the commencement of the period. 9, to be pinched with cold, vor Ralte erftarrt fein. 10, to creep along, fid) weiter schleppen. 11, Say 'which in curls surrounded (umwallen, insep. comp. w. v.) her face. 12, In - other, In einem durch ein hervorspringendes Saus gebildeten Wintel. 13, Say 'She huddled herself up (nie berfauern, sep. comp. w. v.) and drew her', etc. 14, I am cold, es friert mich. 'and yet she (App. § 24, B) dared (wagen, w.v.) not to go home'. 16, 'cruel', here = severe. 17, Say 'And also (App. § 14) at home it was cold'.

19, Say 'through which the wind blew, 18, 'just', here = immediately. although the large cracks (Spalte, f.) were stuffed (verstopfen, insep. comp. w. v.) 20, Say, 'Oh (Ath), how nice (schon) must (Imperf. with straw and rags'. Subj.) a match be'. 21, Ein Bundholzchen an ber Mauer an'reiben, to draw a match across the wall.

NEW-YEAR'S EVE.

II.

She drew one out—"Ritsh!" how it sputtered¹ and burned! It burned with a warm, bright flame, like a candle, and she bent her hand round it (S. 4, N. 5, B), it was a wonderful light! It appeared to the little girl as if she were sitting² before a large iron stove, in which the fire burned brightly, and³ gave out such comfort and such warmth. She stretched out her feet to warm them, too—but the flame went⁴ out, the stove disappeared, and there she sat, still holding⁵ a little bit of the burnt-out⁴ match in her (S. 43, N. 9, A) hand.

Another was 6 lighted; it burned, and, where 7 the light fell upon the wall, that 8 became transparent, so that she could see into the room. There the table was covered with a cloth of dazzling white, and with fine china; and a roast goose was smoking most 9 temptingly upon it. But what was still more delightful, the goose sprang down from the table, and 10, with a knife and (S. 10, N. 9) fork sticking in its 11 back, waddled towards the little girl. Then 12 the match went out 4, and she saw nothing but the thick, cold wall.

She lighted a third one (S. 67, N. 3); and now she was sitting under the most splendid Christmas-tree. It was larger and more beautifully decorated ¹³ than the one (S. 16, N. 10) she had seen at Christmas ¹⁴ through the window at ¹⁵ the rich merchant's. Hundreds of ¹⁶ tapers were burning amongst the green branches, and painted ¹⁷ pictures, such ¹⁸ as she had seen in the shop-windows, looked down upon her. She stretched out ¹⁹ both her hands, when the match was burnt ⁴ out,—

NEW-YEAR'S EVE.

III.

The countless lights rose higher and higher, and she now saw that they (eê) were the stars, one of which fell 1, leaving a long line of light in the sky.

Some ² one has (S. 29, N. 3) died just now, the girl said; for her old grandmother, who alone ³ had loved her, but who was now dead, had told her that ⁴ when a star fell, a soul took (App. §§ 28 and 30) its flight up to heaven.

She drew another match across the wall, and in the light it threw 5 around stood her old grandmother, so bright 6, so mild, and so loving.

that you will disappear as soon as the match is burnt out, just like the warm stove, the delicious roast goose, and the Christmas-tree!" And hastily she lighted the rest of the matches that remained in the box, for she wished to keep her grandmother with her as long as possible; and the matches burnt so brightly, that it was lighter than day. Never before had she seen her grandmother so beautiful and so tall, and behold, she now took the little girl in her arms, and in radiance and joy, flew high, high up with her into the heaven, where she felt neither (feiu) cold, nor (fein) hunger, nor (und fein) fear any more to for she was with God.

But, in the corner between the two houses, in the cold morning air, lay the little girl with pale cheeks and smiling lips. She was frozen 13 to death during the last night of the Old Year. The first light of the New Year shone upon the dead body of the little girl with the matches, one 14 box of which was nearly consumed. "She must have tried to warm herself," the people said; but no one knew of (von) the visions 15 she had had, or of the splendour that (S. 48, N. 6) surrounded her when she entered with her grandmother into the joys of a New Year.—After Hans Andersen, "Fairy Tales."

PROVIDENCE 1 VINDICATING THE INNOCENT.

Lit is (S. 2, N. 1) recorded in history that a beautiful maiden named Blanche, the serf of 2 an ancient nobleman, was wooed 8 by her master's son. Not admiring his character, she scorned his suit. Upon this his course of love turned 6 to bitter hatred. Just 7 then a precious string of pearls confided (S. 7, N. 3, B) to the maiden's care was 8 lost. Her pseudo-lover 9 charged her with the theft, and, in 10 accordance with the customs of that rude age, she was doomed to die. On the day of the execution, as the innocent girl knelt to offer 11 her dying prayer, a 12 flash of lightning struck a statue of Justice, which adorned the market-place, to the dust. /From 13 a destroyed bird's nest, built (S. 7, N. 3, A, and S. 48, N. 6) In a crevice of the image 14, dropped the lost 15 pearls, thus 16 declaring the maiden's innocence. In a moment the exultant crowd rushed to the scaffold, demanding her release. There she knelt beside the block, pale and beautiful, and with a smile of peace upon her lips. They (S. 134, N. 4) spoke 17—she answered not. They touched her she was dead! To preserve her memory they raised a statue there 18; and to 19 this day, when 20 men gaze upon her image, they condemn her oppressor; they praise her for the purity of her character; they recognise the justice of Him whose 21 lightning testified her innocence.-

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE 1.

I.

Napoleon understood his business². He was a man who in each moment and ⁸ emergency knew what ⁴ to do next. This ⁵ is an immense comfort and refreshment to the spirits, not only of (S. 3, N. 2) kings, but ⁶ of citizens. Few ⁷ men have any next; they live from hand to mouth, without plan, are ⁸ ever at the end of their line, and, (S. 102, N. 30) after each action, wait for ⁹ an impulse from abroad. Napoleon would have been the first man of the world, if ¹⁰ his ends had been purely public. As ¹¹ he is, he inspires confidence and vigour by the extraordinary unity of his action.

He is firm ¹², sure, and self-denying; he sacrifices everything to his aim ¹³—money, troops, generals, his own safety even, and is not misled ¹⁴, like common adventurers, by ¹⁶ the splendour of his own means. Incidents ought not to govern policy," he said, "but ¹⁶ policy incidents." "To ¹⁷ be hurried away by every event, is ¹⁸ to have no political system at all." His victories were only so many doors ¹⁹, and ²⁰ he never for a moment lost sight of his way onward in the dazzle and uproar of the present circumstances. He knew what to do, and he flew to his mark.

He ²¹ would shorten a straight line to come at his object. Horrible anecdotes may no doubt be collected (S. 4, N. 4) from his history, of ²² the price at which he bought his successes; but he must not, therefore, be set ²³ down as cruel, but only as one ²⁴ who knew no impediment to his will: not ²⁵ bloodthirsty, not cruel; but woe to ²⁵ what person stood in his way! "Sire, General Clarke cannot combine with General Junot for the dreadful fire of the Austrian battery." "Let ²⁷ him carry the battery." "Sire, every regiment that approaches the heavy artillery is sacrificed ²⁸. Sire ²⁹, what orders?" "Forward! Forward!"

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

H.

In the plenitude of his resources every obstacle seemed to vanish. "There¹ shall be no Alps," he said; and he built his perfect roads², climbing³ by graded galleries their steepest precipices, until Italy was⁴ as open to Paris as any town⁵ in France. Having (S. 55, N. 1) decided what was to be done, he did that with 6 might and main. He 7 put out all his strength. He risked everything, and spared 8 nothing; neither ammunition, nor money, nor 9 troops, nor generals, nor 10 himself. If, fighting¹¹¹ be the best mode of adjusting national differences (as¹² large majorities of men seem to agree), certainly Bonaparte was right in making it thorough ¹³.

He fought ¹⁴ sixty battles. He had never enough. Each victory was a new weapon. "My power would fall¹⁵, were I not to support it by new achievements. Conquest has ¹⁶ made me what I am, and conquest must maintain me."

Before ¹⁷ he fought a battle, Bonaparte thought ¹⁸ little about what he should do in ¹⁸ case of success, but a great deal about what he should do in case of a reverse of fortune. The same prudence and good sense marked ¹⁹ all his behaviour ²⁰. His instructions ²¹ to his secretary at the palace are worth ²² remembering. He said: "During the night enter my chamber as seldom as possible. Do not awake me when you have any good news to communicate ²³; with ²⁴ that there is no hurry; but when you have bad news, rouse me instantly, for then there is not a moment to be lost." His ²⁵ achievement of business was immense, and ²⁶ enlarges the known power of man. There have been (S. 82, N. 7) many working kings, from Ulysses to ²⁷ William of Orange ²⁸, but ²⁹ none who accomplished a tithe of this man's performance.—Emerson.

THE WARLIKE CHARACTER OF THE GERMANS.

The Germans fight as a nation. Whatever 1 their birth 2 or (S. 10, N. 9) profession, all are trained 3 soldiers. The nation is the army; the army is the nation. Hence 4 they cannot be moved save at the bidding of some grand principle, and the stirring 5 of some soul-penetrating 6 and elevating sentiment; and yet they are as sensible as any nation that they abandon comfort 8, domestic ease, monetary independence, everything 9 which (S. 3, N. 7) men (= man) love and live for, in 10 order to identify the nation and the army. But they are willing to pay the price. They count 11 hardihood of body and trained 12 courage of heart the noblest riches of a nation. They reckon 11 that national independence and national greatness are a thousand times more precious than gold and silver, and 13 that to die on the field of battle is better and happier than to rot 14 and crumble away in sybaritic ease. They 15 hold, too, that 16 the cause of liberty, and the free noble spirit engendered by the brotherhood of a nationality which affirms its oneness by noble acts 17, is blessed by God, and that He will give 18 victory to the armies who go forth to battle in (S. 3, N. 2) trust in 19 His name. No wonder 20 they fight and triumph 21.—ADMIRAL GARBETT.

THE 1 WAY TO MASTER THE TEMPER.

A London (S. 157, N. 4) merchant, having 2-a dispute with a Quaker concerning a business account, determined to institute a law-suit against him. Desirous of amicably settling 4 the matter, the Quaker called at the house of the merchant, when 5 the latter became so enraged that he vehemently 6 declared to his servant that he would (App. §§ 28 and 30) not see his opponent, "Well, friend," said the Quaker quietly, "may" God put thee in a better mind." The merchant was 8 subdued by the kindness of the reply, and, after careful consideration, became convinced that 9 he was wrong. He sent 10 for the Quaker, and 11 after making a humble apology, he asked: "How were you able to bear my abuse 11 with so much patience?" "Friend," replied the Quaker, "I was naturally 12 as hot 13 and violent as thou art, but I knew that 14 to indulge my temper was sinful, and also very foolish. I observed that men in a passion always spoke very loud, and I thought that 15, if I could control my voice, I should keep down my passion. I therefore made 16 it a rule never to let it rise above a certain key; and by a careful observance of this rule I have, with the blessing of God¹⁷, entirely mastered my ¹⁸ natural temper."—Alcott.

OPINIONS AS TO ENGLISH EDUCATION.

I.

This ² energy of individual life and example acting throughout society constitute ³ the best practical education of Englishmen. Schools, academies, and colleges 4 give but the 5 merest beginning of culture in comparison with it (S. 4, N. 5). Far higher 6 and more practical is 7 the lifeeducation daily given in our homes, in 8 the streets, behind (S. 3, N. 2) counters, in workshops, at the loom and behind the plough, in countinghouses and manufactories, and 10 in all the busy haunts of men. This is the education that 11 fits Englishmen for doing the work and acting the part of free men. This 12 is that final instruction as members of society, which Schiller designated "the education of the human race," consisting 13 in action, conduct 14, self-culture, self-control-all 15 that tends to discipline a man truly, and fit him for the proper performance of the duties of life—a kind of education not to be learnt (S. 7, N. 3 B) from (aus) books. Lord Bacon observes that 16 "Studies teach not their own use, but that there is (S. 82, N. 7) a wisdom without them and above them, won (S. 7, N. 3 B, and S. 2, N. 1) by (burth) observation, a remark that holds 17 true of 18 actual life, as well as of 19 the cultivation of the intellect itself. For all observation serves20 to illustrate and enforce the lesson, that a man perfects himself by work much more than by reading 21,—that 22 it is life 23 rather than literature 21, action 24 rather than study, and character 25 rather than biography 26, which 27 tend perpetually to renovate mankind.

OPINIONS AS TO ENGLISH EDUCATION.

H.

Goethe (S. 5, N. 2), in one of his conversations with Eckermann at Weimar, once 1 observed: "It is very 2 strange, and I know not whether 3 it lies in race, in climate, in 4 soil, or in their healthy 5 education, but 6 certainly Englishmen seem to have a great advantage over most other men. We see here in Weimar only a minimum of them, and those, probably, by no means the best specimens, and yet what splendid fellows they are! And although they come here as seventeen-year-old 9 youths, yet they by no means feel strange in this strange land; on the contrary, their entrance 10 and bearing 11 in society is so confident 12 and quiet, that one would 13 think they were everywhere the masters, and the whole world belonged to them 14."

I should not like to affirm, for all that 15," replied Eckermann 16, "that the English gentlemen in Weimar are cleverer, better educated, and better hearted than our young men."

"That is not the point 17," said Goethe; "their superiority does not lie in such things; neither 18 does it lie in their birth and fortune 19; it lies precisely 20 in their having 21 the courage to be what nature made them. There 22 is no halfness about 23 them. They are complete 24 men. Sometimes complete fools also, that I heartily 25 admit, but even that is something, and has its weight."

Thus (App. § 14), in 26 Goethe's eyes, the Englishmen fulfilled, to a great extent, the injunction 27 given by Lessing 28 to those who would

A ROYAL JUDGMENT.

A man and his wife named Lambrun had been many years in the service of the unfortunate Queen Mary Stuart, and were sincerely attached to her. The tragical death of that princess had such an effect on the husband that he did not long survive her, and the 1 widow, Margaret Lambrun, resolved to revenge, upon 2 Queen Elizabeth, the 8 death of two persons so dear to her. She (S. 5, N. 2) therefore disguised 4 herself in man's clothes, bought (S. 58, N. 8) a brace 6 of pistols, and went 6 to (S. 72, N. 4) London. Soon after, when the queen 7 appeared in 8 public, Margaret endeavoured to 9 make her way through the crowd in order to shoot her 10; but one of the pistols fell 11, and she was immediately apprehended.

The ¹² queen, being informed of the circumstance ¹³, ordered ¹⁴ the man to be brought before her, and said to him: "Well, Sir, who are you ¹⁵? and why do you seek ¹⁶ to kill me?"—"Madam," replied Margaret, "I am a woman; I was a long time in the service of Queen Mary Stuart, whom you put ¹⁷ to death unjustly; her execution caused ¹⁸ the death of my dear husband, who was sincerely attached to her; and my affection for both of them has excited ¹⁹ me to revenge."—"And how do you think I ought to deal ²⁰ with you?" asked Elizabeth.—"Do you speak as a queen or as a judge?" returned Margaret.—"As a queen."—"Then you ought to pardon ²¹ me," was the answer.—"And what security ²² can you give me that you will not attempt ¹⁶ my life again?"—"Madam, a ²³ pardon granted upon conditions ceases to be a favour ²⁴."—"Well then," said the queen, "I pardon you, and trust to your gratitude for ²⁵ my safety."—P. TACITUS.

I am glad to find 1, by your (= thy) letter just received, that you are reading Tacitus 2 with some relish. His style is rather quaint 3 and enigmatical, which (S. 3, N. 7) makes 4 it difficult to the student; but then 6 his pages 6 are filled with such admirable apothegms and maxims of political wisdom, as 7 infer the deepest knowledge of human nature; and it is particularly necessary that any one intending to become a public speaker should 8 be master of his works, as 9 there is neither an ancient nor a modern author who affords such a selection of admirable quotations. You should exercise yourself frequently in 10 trying to make translations of the 17 passages which most strike 12 you, trying 18 to invest 14 the sense of (S. 25, N. 5) Tacitus in as good English as you can. This will answer 15 the double purpose of making yourself familiar with the Latin author, and giving you the command of 16 your own language, which no person will ever have 17 who 18 does not study composition in early life.—Sir Walter Scott, "Letters to his Son."

HUMILITY.

I believe the first 1 test of a truly great man is his humility. I do not mean by 2 humility, doubt of 3 his own power, or hesitation 4 in speaking 5 his opinions, but a right understanding of the relation between 6 what he can do and say, and the rest of the world's sayings and doings. All great men not only know 8 their business 9, but usually know 10 that 11 they know it; they are not only right in their main opinions 12, but they usually know that they are right in them (S. 4, N. 5, B); only they do not think much of themselves on 13 that account. Arnolfo 14 knows he can build a good 15 dome at Florence; Albert 16 Dürer writes calmly 17 to one who had found fault with his work: "It cannot be better done;" Sir Isaac Newton knows that he has worked 18 out a problem or two that would have puzzled anybody 19 else:—only they do not expect their 20 fellow-men therefore to fall down and worship them; they 21 have a curious under-sense of powerlessness, feeling (S. 30, N. 4) that the greatness is 22 not in them, but through them; that they could (App. § 33) not do or be anything else than 23 what God made them. They see something divine and God-made 24 in every other man, and are endlessly, nay 25 incredibly merciful 26. - Anonymous.

RUSSIAN POLITICAL PRISONERS IN BANISHMENT.

I.

In the cheerless regions of Arkangel, of which the aborigines say: "God made Russia, but the devil made Arkangel," there are (S. 82, N. 7) more than two hundred of those banished ones—men and women, all young, all (= and) poor, most 2 of them sent without trial, few 3 amongst them knowing even of what they are accused. Victor Ivanovitch ⁴ dines with his friend B., for instance, and ⁵ after a stroll along ⁶ the boulevards they separate. B. is arrested that ⁷ very evening, and when Victor, astonished and horror-stricken ⁸, hastens ⁹ to inquire the cause, he finds everybody ¹⁰, even B.'s own father, as ¹¹ much in the dark as he is himself; all questions and petitions on ¹² the subject receive ¹³ vague administrative answers; all friends and relatives are systematically discouraged and silenced; eagerly they wait for ¹⁴ the numerous political trials that ¹⁵ come on without intermission, hoping ¹⁶ to see the missing one's (S. 67, N. 3) name on ¹⁷ the list of criminals, or to see ¹⁸ his face once more, let ¹⁹ it be even in ²⁰ the prisoner's dock; but as ²¹ they wait and ²² watch, the prisoner ²³ is, without any trial, en route for Arkangel.

Arrived ²⁴ there, the routine (App. § 15) is the same for all; whatever ²⁵ the crime alleged, the age or sex, the ²⁶ prisoner is taken to the policeward,—a ²⁷ dreary log-building, containing two sections, one for men, the other for women. The solitary table and chair in the room, the four walls, and even the ceiling, are covered ²⁸ with the names of ²⁹ youthful predecessors, whose pencilled ³⁰ jests and clever caricatures bear ³¹ witness to the strength of confidence in themselves with which they began ³²

II.

In this dreary abode 1 a week or ten days is spent, when 2 the governor of Arkangel, after due reflection, marks out 3 for this dangerous personage some final place of exile (S. 76, N. 22, B), some 4 miserable little district town 5, such as Holmogor, Shenkoursk, Pinega, or Mexen. The 6 prisoner is then told his "documents" are ready, and a gendarme enters, saving 7 it is time to start 8. The exile jumps into the jolting postwaggon, two gendarmes jump in after him, the bell above 9 the horse's neck begins to ring—and rings on for 10 days and weeks—through wood 11, and swamp, and plain, along 12 roads inconceivably drear and lonely, until the 13 weary convoy at length arrives at his destination. The little town is desolate and black 14, and consists of log-huts, two unpaved streets, and a wooden church painted green, and the 15 live-stock consists of ten or twelve raw-boned 16 horses, a small herd of sickly 17 cows, and thirty or forty reindeer. The population rarely (S. 102, N. 30) exceeds one (S. 132, N. 10) thousand 18, and consists of the Ispravnik 19, ten subaltern 20 officers, the Arbiter 21 of the Peace, the 22 Crown Forester, a priest, a few shopkeepers, thirty or forty exiles, a 23 chain-gang of Russian felons, and a crowd 24 of Finnish beggars. On his arrival, the prisoner is driven straight to (S. 72, N. 4) the police-ward, where he is inspected 25 by (S. 106, N. 23) the Ispravnik, a (S. 53, N. 9) police officer, who is absolute lord and master of the district. This representative of the Government requires 26 of him to answer the following questions: His 27 name? How old? Married or single? Where from? The address of 28 parents, relations, or friends? Answers 29 to all of which are entered in the books.

A¹ solemn promise is then exacted of him that he will not give lessons of ² any kind, or ³ try to teach ⁴ anyone; that every letter (S. 48, N. 6)

he writes will go through the Ispravnik's hands, and ⁵ that he will follow no occupation except shoemaking, carpentering, or field labour. He is then ⁶ told he (App. § 28) is free, but ⁷ at the same time is solemnly warned that ⁸ should he attempt to pass the limits of the town, he would be shot down like a dog rather than be allowed to escape; and ⁹, should he be taken alive, would be sent off to Eastern Siberia without further formality than that of the Ispravnik's personal order.

The poof fellow takes up his little bundle, and ¹⁰, fully realising that he has now bidden ¹¹ farewell to the culture and material ¹² comfort of his past ¹³ life, he walks ¹⁴ out into the cheerless street. A group of exiles, all pale and emaciated, are (S. 107, N. 13) there ¹⁵ to (S. 19, N. 7) greet him, take ¹⁶ him to some of their miserable lodgings, and feverishly demand ¹⁷ news from home. The new comer gazes on them as one in a dream; some are melancholy, and almost mad, others nervously irritable, and the remainder have evidently tried to find solace in ¹⁸ drink. They live (S. 116, N. 17) in ¹⁹ communities of twos and threes, have food, a scanty provision of clothes, money ²⁰, and books in common, and consider ²¹ it their sacred duty to help each other in every emergency, without ²² distinction of (S. 3, N. 2, and S. 10, N. 9) sex, rank, or age. The noble by ²³ birth get sixteen shillings ²⁴ a month from Government for their maintenance, and ²⁵ commoners only ten, although many of them are married, and ²⁶ sent into exile with young families ²⁷.

Daily a gendarme visits ¹ their lodgings, inspects ² the premises when and how he pleases ³, and now ⁴ and then makes some mysterious entry in his note book. Should ⁵ any of their number carry a warm dinner, a pair of newly-mended boots, or a change of linen to some passing exile lodged for the moment in the police-ward, it is just as likely as not marked against him as a crime. It is a crime to ⁶ come and see a friend off, or accompany ⁷ him a little on the way. In ⁸ fact, should the Ispravnik feel ⁹ out of sorts—the effect of cards ¹⁰ and drink—he ¹¹ vents his bad temper on the exiles; and as ¹² cards and drink are the only amusements in these dreary regions, crimes ¹³ are often marked down against the exiles in astonishing numbers, and ¹⁴ a report of them sent to the Governor of the province.

Winter lasts eight months, a ¹⁵ period during which the surrounding ¹⁶ country presents the appearance of a noiseless ¹⁷, lifeless, frozen marsh. No roads, no communication with the outer world, no means of ¹⁸ escape. In course of time almost every exile is attacked ¹⁹ by nervous convulsions, soon ²⁰ followed by prolonged apathy and complete prostration. Some of them contrive ²¹ to forge passports, and by a miracle, as ²² it were, make their escape; but the great majority of these victims of the Third Section ²³ either go mad, commit suicide, or die of ²⁴ delirium

At ² daylight Tahiti, an island which must for ever remain ³ classical to the voyager in the South Sea, was in view. At a distance the appearance ⁴ was not attractive. The ⁵ luxuriant vegetation of the lower ⁶ part could not yet be seen; and as the clouds rolled ⁷ past, only the wildest ⁹ and most precipitous peaks showed themselves ⁸ towards ¹⁰ the centre of the island. As soon as we anchored in ¹¹ Matavai Bay we ¹² were surrounded by canoes. After dinner we landed and enjoyed the delights ¹³ always ¹⁴ produced by the first impressions of a fine country. A crowd of men, women, and children was collected on the shore, ready to (S. 19, N. 7) receive us with laughing, merry faces. They ¹⁵ marshalled us towards the house of (S. 10, N. 2) Mr. Wilson, the ¹⁶ missionary of the district, who met ¹⁷ us on the road, and gave ¹⁸ us a very fine reception. After sitting ¹⁹ a short time in his house, we separated from our host to ²⁰ walk about, and ²¹ returned in the evening.

The ²² land capable of cultivation is ²³ scarcely in any part more than a fringe of low alluvial soil, accumulated round ²⁴ the base of the mountains, and ²⁵ protected from the waves of the sea by a coral reef, which encircles the entire line of coast. Within the reef there ²⁵ is an expanse of smooth water, like that of a lake, where ²⁷ the canoes of the natives can ply with safety, and where ²⁸ ships anchor. The low land, which ²⁹ comes down to the beach of coral sand, is covered ³⁰ by the most beautiful productions of ³¹ the intertropical regions. In the midst of bananas ³², orange, cocoa-nut, and bread-fruit trees, spots ³³ are cleared where yams ³⁴, potatoes, the sugar-cane, and pine-apples are cultivated 35.

Even the brush-wood is ¹ an imported fruit-tree, namely, the guava ², which grows in abundance here. In Brazil I have often admired the varied ³ beauty of the bananas (S. 71, N. 2), palms, and orange-trees contrasted ⁴ together; and here we also have the bread-fruit ⁵, conspicuous ⁶ from its large, glossy, and deeply digitated leaves. It is admirable ⁷ to behold groves of a tree, sending ⁸ forth its branches with the vigour of an English oak, loaded ⁹ with large and most nutritious fruit ¹⁰.

However ¹¹ seldom the usefulness of an object can account for the pleasure of beholding it, in the case of these beautiful woods, the knowledge of their high productiveness, no doubt, enters largely into the feeling of admiration. The ¹² little winding paths, cool from the surrounding shade, led to the scattered ¹³ houses, the owners of which everywhere gave 14 us a cheerful 15 and most hospitable reception.

I 16 was pleased with nothing so much as with the inhabitants. There 17 is a mildness in the expression of their countenances which at once banishes the idea of 18 a savage, and an intelligence 19 which shows that they are 20 advancing in civilisation. The common people, when working, keep 21 the upper part of their bodies quite naked; and 22 it is then that the Tahitians are seen to advantage. They are very tall, broad-shouldered, athletic, and well proportioned. A white man bathing (S. 16, N. 4) by the side of a Tahitian was ¹ like a plant bleached (S. 7, N. 3, attrib.) by the gardener's art compared ² with a fine dark-green one growing vigorously ³ in the field. Most of the men are tatooed, and the ornaments follow the curvature ⁴ of the body so ⁵ gracefully, that they ⁶ have a very elegant effect. The most common pattern, varying ⁷ in its details, is somewhat like ¹⁶ the crown of a palm-tree. It springs ⁸ from the central line of the back, and gracefully curls ⁹ round both sides. The simile may ¹⁰ be a fanciful one, but I ¹¹ thought the body of a man thus ornamented ¹² was (App. §§ 29 and 30) like ¹³ the trunk of a noble tree embraced ¹⁴ by a delicate creeper.

Many of the elder people ¹⁵ had their feet covered with small figures, so ¹⁶ placed as to resemble a sock. This fashion, however, is partly gone ¹⁷ by, and has been succeeded ¹⁸ by others. Here ¹⁹, although fashion is far from immutable, every one must abide ²⁰ by that prevailing at his youth. An old man has thus ²¹ his age for ever stamped on his body, and he cannot assume ²² the airs of a young dandy. The women are tatooed in the same manner as the men, and ²³ very commonly on their fingers.

In ²⁴ returning to the boat, we witnessed ²⁵ a very pretty scene. Numbers ²⁶ of children were playing on the beach, and had lighted bonfires, which illuminated the placid sea and ²⁷ surrounding trees; others, in ²⁸ circles, were singing Tahitian verses. We seated ourselves on the sand, and ²⁹ joined their party. The songs were impromptu ³⁰, and ³¹ I believe related to our arrival. One little girl sang a line ³², which ³³ the rest took up in parts, forming ³⁴ a very pretty chorus. The whole scene made ³⁵ us unequivocally aware that ³⁶ we were seated on the shore of an island in the far-famed South Sea.—Charles Darwin.

AUDUBON¹, THE AMERICAN ORNITHOLOGIST, RELATES HOW NEARLY² A THOUSAND OF HIS ORIGINAL DRAWINGS WERE DESTROYED.

I left the village of Henderson, in Kentucky, situated 3 on the banks of the Ohio, where I ⁴ resided for several years, to proceed ⁵ to Philadelphia on business. I (S. 115, N. 1) looked ⁶ to my drawings before my departure, placed them carefully in a wooden box, and gave 7 them in charge of a relative, with 8 injunctions to see that no injury should happen to them. My absence was of (= lasted) several months; and when I returned, after having enjoyed the pleasures of home for a few days, I inquired 10 after my box, and 11 what I was pleased to call my treasure. The box was produced 12 and opened; but 13, reader, feel for me—a pair of Norway rats had taken possession of the whole, and reared a young family among the gnawed 14 bits of paper, which, but 15 a month previous, had represented nearly a thousand inhabitants of 16 the air! The burning heat which 17 instantly rushed through my brain was too great without 18 affecting my whole nervous system. I slept for (S. 166, N. 10) several nights, and the days passed like 19 days of oblivion—until 20 the animal powers being recalled into action, through the strength of my constitution, I 21 took up my gun, my note-book and

THE BATTLE OF 1 KASSASSIN.

I.

Mahsamah, Monday, August 28, 1882.

At ² seven this morning, guns were heard in the direction of Kassassin, which is ³ four miles to our front. The troops were called ⁴ under arms, the Cavalry, consisting of the Household Cavalry ⁵ and 7th Dragoon Guards, saddled up, and the Infantry fell ⁶ in in readiness to ⁷ march to the assistance of the force there under General Graham. That officer, however, sent a ⁸ message saying that the firing was in the enemy's camp, and ⁹ was inexplicable, except upon the supposition that the Egyptians were fighting ¹⁰ among themselves.

At ¹¹ eleven o'clock, however, the flags of the signallers at Kassassin were in motion, and (S. 104, N. 19) the news came that the enemy were approaching ¹². The Cavalry again turned out ¹³ and rode off to Kassassin. As the enemy approached, General Graham opened fire with his two guns, and ¹⁴ the Egyptian artillery replied. The 19th Hussars ¹⁵ came on ¹⁶ to the place from Mahuta, where General Willis has his headquarters.

The enemy, made no attack, but halted at 17 a considerable distance from the camp, and kept ¹⁸ up a continued shell-fire, but at a distance altogether ¹⁸ out of range. Their conduct ¹⁹ was, indeed, altogether inexplicable. The Cavalry remained out all day, and the Infantry here were kept in readiness to march at ²⁰ a moment's notice, but as the enemy made ²¹ no movement in advance, they were not called forward to the front.

The heat was terrific ²² all day, the ²³ sun beating down with almost insupportable force upon the wide sand waste. It ²⁴ had been hard work for horses and men. No shade was obtainable ²⁵, and the hot wind raised ²⁶ great dust storms, which penetrated everywhere and made breathing difficult. The brigade of Guards (S. 36, N. 7, A) fell in under arms ²⁸ ready ²⁹ to march, but the Cavalry returned and reported that the enemy had fallen back ³⁰, after ³¹ keeping the troops the whole day out in the full force of the sun.

1, bei. The very graphic account of the Battle of Kassassin given in Sections 173-177 was written by the correspondent of the London 'Standard', who was with the cavalry at Mahsamah. Kassassin (also called Kassassin Lock) is four miles west from Mahsamah Station, which, only a few days previous to this action, was captured from the Egyptians by General Drury Lowe. The Egyptians had established a camp at that place, and, after the capture, the Household Cavalry and the Dragoon Guards were stationed there, under the command of General Drury Lowe, as a reserve to the small force that held Kassassin Lock, an important fortified position occupied by General Graham. The enemy, under the rebel-leader Arabi, held the strongly fortified camp of Tel-el-Kebir, about twelve miles west from Kassassin. Arabi's stronghold (Tel-el-Kebir) was stormed and captured by the English under their skilful Commander-in-chief Sir Garnet Wolseley (now Lord Wolesley of Cairo), on Wednesday, September 13, when the rebel-army was totally beaten, and the Egyptian war brought to a successful issue. 2, Say 'This (Sente) morning at 7 o'clock we (man) heard the thunder of cannons (comp. n.), etc. 3, = is situated; to our front = before us. 4, to call under arms, zu den Waffen rufen. 5, Nom. THE BATTLE OF KASSASSIN.

II.

Ismailia¹, Tuesday, August 29, 3 o'clock in the morning.

Scarcely had the Cavalry unsaddled, and horses and men begun to eat, when the sound of artillery was heard (S. 4, N. 4, man) again at Kassassin, and by the heavy and continuous roar twas evident that this time the attack was in earnest. Again the wearied men saddled their no less weary horses and prepared to advance. The sun was still beating down fiercely even at that late hour, and the hot withering wind was raising the sand clouds so high that it was impossible to see what was going 2 on, but through the dust and haze numerous the smoke from the guns were visible.

The cannonade increased ¹⁴ in violence, and the Cavalry moved ¹⁵ away to the right, the ¹⁶ Artillery following them, and pressed ¹⁷ round towards the flank of the enemy's Infantry. With ¹⁸ the movement of such masses of men and horses the dust rose over the whole scene thicker than ever, and it was impossible to obtain ¹⁹ more than a general idea of what was going on; while the sun set in ²⁰ a red glare over the sandy plain.

The Cavalry pushed²¹ still further to the right until²² hidden from the enemy by some low sand hills, and²³ then goaded their weary horses into as fast a trot as the heavy sand and their weary condition would permit.

It was evident that it was the General's intention to repeat the tactics of the previous fight, and that he meant 24 to get round the enemy's rear. It was a striking proof of his confidence in 25 his troops that (S. 66, N. 15), with 26 tired horses and night approaching, he should attempt this manœuvre against an enemy of unknown strength and with 27 fresh horses. Against any other enemy it would have been rash 28, but the result proved that General Drury Lowe did not over-estimate the fighting powers 29 of his men.

Section 175.

THE BATTLE OF KASSASSIN.

III.

Soon¹ darkness came down rapidly upon us. The rattle and roar of² combat on³ our left never ceased, and it was evident that the two thousand Infantry⁴ at Kassassin were hard pressed. Presently⁵ the moonlight streamed palely over the grey sand, but the clouds of dust obscured⁶ the advancing horsemen, who sometimes trotted, sometimes⁻ walked.

By about seven o'clock we had got in the rear of the firing⁸, and⁹ wheeled in that direction, advancing¹⁰ very slowly to¹¹ allow the Artillery to¹² come up. We could see the flashes of ¹³ the enemy's artillery gleam on the horizon like the flicker of incessant summer lightning14.

We slowly drew ¹⁶ nearer to the scene of conflict. It was almost dark ¹⁶, but, unfortunately, we showed up ¹⁷ a black mass against the bright moonlit sky and ground ¹⁸, and ¹⁹ the sudden rush of shell through the air, followed ²⁰ by an explosion far in our rear, showed that the enemy had at last discovered us. They ²¹ were about fifteen hundred yards ²² away, and ²³ we saw nine flashes, one after another, at short intervals, spurt out, no ²⁴ longer like sheet lightning, but in angry jets of flame. Almost simultaneously the sky above us seemed to ²⁴ be torn in pieces as by (=through) a mighty hurricane. Shells screamed ²⁵ and burst ²⁶, and shrapnel bullets ²⁷ tore up the sand on either side of us.

The brigade now moved ²⁸ to the right to ²⁹ disconcert their aim, and the next salvo of shell missed us. We moved quickly forward, and the gunners again saw us, and the shells burst over and around. Yet, strangely³⁰, but few were hit, though it seemed as if the storm ³¹ would mow men and horses down by squadrons 32.

THE BATTLE OF KASSASSIN.

IV.

Now 1 tiny flashes, with the sharp ping of bullets, told that the enemy's Infantry were also at work, whilst 2 a horse here and a man there dropped 3 in the ranks.

The battery having (S. 30, N. 4) by this time come up, the Cavalry moved to the right, in order to allow them to come into action, and in a few seconds, after taking up their ground, our guns spoke out their answer to the enemy's fire.

The Cavalry now advanced ⁷ from the left, the ⁸ 7th Dragoons leading. Under ⁹ cover of these the Life Guards formed for a charge, and ¹⁰ by word of command the Dragoons opened ¹¹ right and left to allow them to pass. Already Herbert Stewart, General Drury Lowe's brigade-major, had passed ¹² down the line the word: "The Cavalry are to charge the guns!" Sir Baker Russell was in front (=at the head), and shouted: "Now we have them. Charge!"

Away ¹³ went the long line, disappearing ¹⁴ almost instantly in the darkness and dust, and away behind them went ¹⁵ the 7th Dragoons, keeping ¹⁶

(S. 16, N. 4) on either flank of the Guards.

We ¹⁷, remaining in the rear, had the full benefit of the storm and shot which was to greet the advancing horsemen (Reiterei, f.) and of whom from (S. 102, N. 4) this moment we saw no more till the battle was over; and only (S. 109, N. 5) then we learned ¹⁸ what they had done.

Led by Baker Russell, they charged ¹⁹ straight at the guns, sabring ²⁰ the gunners as they passed, and ²¹ dashing into and cutting down the flying Infantry beyond them. Russell's horse was shot under him, but he seized another and kept with 22 his men.

The battle was ended ²³ at a stroke, and a scene of wild confusion ensued ²⁴; some guns were ²⁵ still firing, bodies ²⁶ of Infantry still kept up a fusillade, and numerous bodies ²⁷ of horses and men dotted the moonlit plain.

Being now separated altogether from the Cavalry, with 28 the enemy intervening between us, myself and two companions endeavoured to find our ²⁹ way round to Kassassin. It was an adventurous ride, for several shells burst near us, but before we reached the camp, the conflict was at an end.

THE BATTLE OF KASSASSIN.

V.

The Infantry there ¹ had indeed had a hot time of it ². Hundreds of shells had (S. 29, N. 3) burst in the confined ³ space, and the shelter trenches ⁴ afforded but an insufficient protection. On the left of the position ⁵, next to the Canal, were ⁶ the Marine Artillery, then came the 46th, and next ⁷ to them the 84th ⁸, the ⁹ slight earthworks sweeping round again in a semi-circle almost to the Canal. The Mounted ¹⁰ Infantry were in front under Captain Pigott, who ¹¹ has received a wound, having been shot through the thigh.

The Egyptians came on with great bravery, and in spite of the ¹² heavy fire of our men ¹³, were rapidly gaining ground, and would soon have rushed ¹⁴ into the entrenchments, when the roar of our guns on ¹⁵ their left rear, followed ¹⁶ by the rush of our Cavalry, proved ¹⁷ too much for them, and from (S. 102, N. 4) that moment they thought only of flight.

Our casualties are surprisingly ¹⁸ small considering ¹⁹ the fire to which our men were exposed. Lieutenant Edwards, of the Mounted Infantry, was 20 shot in the arm, Surgeon-Major 21 Shaw, of the 46th, was 22 killed, and some ten or a dozen men, but, fortunately, the Remington bullet wounds rather than kills; the hospital was crowded ²³ with wounded men.

About 10 o'clock the Cavalry came in ²⁴ in high spirits over their brilliant achievement. Many, of course, are missing in the darkness, but will, no doubt, turn up ²⁵ in the morning. Upon their ²⁶ return from the pursuit they ²⁷ were unable to find the guns over which they had charged, but these ²⁸ will doubtless be discovered at sunrise. After learning from them ²⁹ the events ³⁰ of the charge, I ³¹ started to ride here to get off ³² my despatches,—a ³³ distance of twenty-four miles. This solitary ride over the dismal desert by moonlight was not ³⁴ the least exciting part of an exciting day.

Late 35 as it was, I found at (auf) the different posts the men 36 busy at work entrenching, and met troops also on 37 their march to reinforce those at the front.

The enemy's force ³⁸ engaged was estimated at 13,000. The Egyptians fought well until our Cavalry and guns took ³⁹ them in the rear, and, had ⁴⁰ it not been for the gallantry of the defenders of Kassassin, would ⁴¹ have carried the positon before our reinforcements came upon the scene.

At 42 the time I left, the losses were unknown, but were 43 supposed to be about twenty killed and a hundred wounded.

HOW THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON WAS DECEIVED.

"I (S. 115, N. 1) got famously taken in 1 on that occasion," said the Duke of Wellington once. "The troops had 2 taken to plundering a good deal. It was necessary to s stop it, and I issued an order announcing 4 that the 5 first man taken in the act should be hanged upon the spot. One day, just as we were sitting 6 down to dinner, three men 7 were brought to the door of the tent by the provost. They had been taken in 8 the act of plundering, and I had nothing for it 9 but to command that they (S. 4, N. 4, man) should be taken away and hanged in some place where they might be seen by the whole column in its march next day. I had a good many guests with 10 me on that day, and among the rest, I think, Lord Nugent. They 11 seemed dreadfully shocked, and could not eat their dinner. I did not eat myself, but, as I told them, I could not indulge my feelings 12; I must do my duty. Well 13, the dinner went off rather gravely; and next morning, sure enough 14, three men in uniform were seen hanging (S. 78, N. 14, B) from the branches of a tree close to the high road. It was a terrible example, which produced 15 the desired effect, for there was no more plundering. Some months afterwards I learned that one of my staff 16 had taken counsel with Dr. Hume, and as three men had (S. 29, N. 3) just died in the hospital, they had hung them 17 up and let the three culprits return to their regiments."

"Were you not very angry, Duke 18?"

"Well ¹⁶, I suppose I was at first; but ²⁰ as I had no wish to take the poor fellows' lives and only wanted the example, and as the example had the desired effect (S. 27, N. 8), my anger soon died out ²¹, and I confess to you that ²² I am very glad now that the three lives were spared."—HISTORICAL ANECDOTES.

A LETTER FROM DR. HENRY DANSON TO 1 MR. JOHN FORSTER, ON 2 CHARLES DICKENS'S 3 SCHOOL-LIFE.

I

My impression is 4 that I was a schoolfellow of Dickens for nearly two years. He left before me, I think about fifteen years of age. The school, called (S. 7, N. 3, B) the Wellington Academy, was in the Hampstead Road at the north-east corner of Granby Street. The school-house was afterwards taken down 6 on account of the London and North-Western Railway. It was considered at the time ⁷ a very superior sort of school, one of the best indeed 8 in that part of London; but it was most shamefully mismanaged 9, and the boys 10 made but very little progress. The proprietor, Mr. Jones, was a Welshman 11; a most 12 ignorant fellow, and a mere tyrant, whose chief employment was 13 to scourge the boys. Dickens has 14 given a very lively account of this place in his paper entitled "Our School," but it is very mythical in many respects, and 15 more especially in the compliment he pays in it to himself. I do not remember that Dickens distinguished himself in any way16, or carried off any prizes. My belief is 17 that he did not learn Greek or Latin there, and you will remember 18 there is no allusion to the classics in any of his writings. He was a handsome, curly-headed lad 19, full of animation and animal spirits, and 20 probably was connected with every mischievous prank in the school.

II.

I do not think (S. 64, N. 11) he ¹ came in for any of Mr. Jones's scourging propensity; in fact, together with myself, he was only a daypupil, and ² with these there was a wholesome fear of tales being carried home to the parents. His personal appearance at that time ³ is vividly brought home to me in the portrait of him taken a few years later by Mr. Lawrence. He resided (S. 116, N. 17) with ⁴ his friends, in a very small house in a street leading out of Seymour Street, north of Mr. Judkin's chapel.

Depend on it, he was quite a self-made man, and his wonderful knowledge and command (Reherrichung, f.) of the English language must bave been acquired by long and patient study after leaving his last school.

I have no recollection of the boy you name ⁶. Dickens's chief ⁷ associates were, I think ⁸, Tobin, Mr. Thomas, Bray, and myself. The first named ⁹ was his chief ally, and his acquaintance with him appears to have continued many ¹⁰ years afterwards. About that time ¹¹ the Penny and Saturday magazines (S. 71, N. 2) were published weekly, and were greedily read by (S. 106, N. 23) us. We kept bees, white mice, and other living things, clandestinely ¹², in our desks, and the mechanical arts were a good deal cultivated, in ¹³ the shape of coach-building, and making pumps and boats, the motive power of which was the white mice.

I think at that time Dickens took to writing ¹⁴ small tales, and we had a sort of club for ¹⁵ lending and circulating them. Dickens was also very strong ¹⁶ in using a sort of lingo, which made us ¹⁷ quite unintelligible to bystanders.

A LETTER FROM DR. HENRY DANSON TO MR. JOHN FORSTER, ON CHARLES DICKENS'S SCHOOL-LIFE.

III.

We were very strong, too, in theatricals ¹. We mounted ² small theatres, and got up very gorgeous scenery to ⁸ illustrate "The Miller and his Men," and other pieces. I remember the ⁴ present Mr. Beverley, the scene painter, assisted us in this (S. 4, N. 5). Dickens was always the leader ⁵ at these plays, which were occasionally presented with much solemnity before an audience ⁶ of boys, and in the presence of the ushers. My brother, assisted by Dickens, got up ⁷ "The Miller and his Men" in a very gorgeous form. Master ⁸ Beverley constructed the mill for us, in such a way ⁹ that it could tumble to pieces with the assistance of crackers. At one representation, the fireworks in the last scene, ending with the destruction of the mill, were so very real ¹⁰ that the police interfered, and knocked violently at the door. Dickens's after-taste for theatricals might have had ¹¹ its origin in these small affairs.

I quite ¹² remember Dickens ¹³ one day heading us in Drummond Street in pretending to be poor boys, and asking the passers-by for charity, especially old ladies, one of whom told ¹⁴ us she had no money for beggar-boys.

On these adventures, and especially when the old ladies were quite staggered 15 by the impudence of the demand, Dickens would explode with laughter and then take to his heels.

I met him one Sunday morning shortly after he had left the school, and 16 we very piously attended the morning service at Seymour Street chapel. I am sorry to say ¹⁷ Master ¹⁸ Dickens did not attend in the slightest degree to the service, but (S. 6, N. 10) incited me to laughter by declaring (S. 111, N. 6) his dinner was ready, and the potatoes would be spoiled ¹⁹. In fact, he behaved in such a manner ²⁰ that it was lucky for us we were not ejected from the chapel.—From J. Forster's "Life of Charles Dickens."

SIR JOSEPH PAXTON 1.

Sir Joseph Paxton was acting as gardener to² the Duke of Devonshire when the Committee of the Exhibition of 1851 advertised for plans of a building. The architects and engineers seem to have been very much at fault ³ when Paxton submitted his design, and its novelty and remarkable suitability for the purposes intended, at once secured its adoption ⁴. The first sketch was made upon a piece of blotting-paper in the rooms of the Midland Railway Company ⁵ at Derby; and the first rough ⁶ sketch indicated ⁷ the principal features of the building as accurately as the most finished drawings which were afterwards prepared. The great ⁸ idea of the Crystal Palace was as palpable ⁹ on the blotting-paper as if it had been set forth in all the glory of water-colour and gold-framing ¹⁰.

Was it a sudden idea,—an inspiration of genius ¹¹,—flashing upon the mind of one ¹² who, though no architect, must at least ¹⁸ have been something like a poet?—Not at all ¹⁴. The architect of the Crystal Palace was simply a man who cultivated opportunities ¹⁵,—a laborious, painstaking ¹⁶ man, whose life had been a life of labour, of diligent self-improvement, of assiduous cultivation of knowledge ¹⁷. As ¹⁸ Sir Joseph Paxton himself has shown, in a lecture before the Society of Arts, the idea was slowly and patiently elaborated by experiments extending over many years ¹⁹. The Exhibition of 1851 merely afforded him the opportunity of putting forward his idea ²⁰—the right thing at the right time—and the result was what we have seen.—S. Smiles, "Self-Help."

REBECCA DESCRIBES THE SIEGE OF TORQUILSTONE (App. § 5) TO THE WOUNDED IVANHOE 1.

I.

"And I must lie here like a bed-ridden monk," exclaimed Ivanhoe, while the game that gives me freedom or death is played out by the hand of others! Look from the window once again, kind maiden, but beware that you are not marked by the archers. Look out once more, and tell me if they yet advance to the storm."

With patient of courage, strengthened by the interval which she had employed in mental devotion to, Rebecca again took post to at the lattice, sheltering herself ¹², however, by means of a large and ancient shield so as not to be visible from beneath ¹³.

"What dost thou see, Rebecca?" again demanded the wounded knight.

"Nothing but the 14 cloud of arrows flying so thick as to dazzle mine eyes 15, and to hide the bowmen who shoot them."

"That cannot endure ¹⁶," said Ivanhoe; "if they press not right on ¹⁷ to carry the castle by pure force of arms (S. 27, N. 8), the archery may ¹⁸ avail but little against stone walls and bulwarks. Look for ¹⁹ the Black Knight, fair Rebecca, and see how he bears himself ²⁰; for as the leader is, so will his followers be ²¹."

"I see him not," said Rebecca.

"Foul craven 22!" exclaimed Ivanhoe; "does he blench 23 from the helm when the wind blows highest 24?"

1. Ivanhoe, a novel by Sir Walter Scott, is the most brilliant and splendid of romances in the English language. Rebecca, the Jewess, was Scott's favourite character. The Scene is laid in England in the reign of Richard I., who assumes the name of the 'Black Knight' in this story, and we are introduced to Robin Hood in Sherwood Forest, banquets in Saxon halls, tournaments, and all the pomp of ancient chivalry, Sir Wilfred Ivanhoe is the favourite of Richard I. and disinherited son of the Saxon Cedric of Rotherwood. Having distinguished himself as a crusader, he returns to England and, disguised as a palmer, goes to Rotherwood, where he meets Rowéna, his father's ward, with whom he is in love; but, through his separation from his true love, we see him more as the friend of Rebecca and her father, Isaac of York, to both of whom he shows repeated acts of kindness, and completely wins the affections of the beautiful Jewess, who, by her gentle, meek, vet noble and high-toned disposition, quite throws into the shade her more successful rival Rowéna. In the grand tournament at Ashby Ivanhoe appears as the 'Disinherited Knight', and overthrows all comers. He is, however, wounded, and carried from the crowded lists by Rebecca's servants. After having attended to his wounds, Rebecca and her father are about to transport their friend in a litter to Doncaster, when they are surprised by a number of armed men, headed by the Templar Brian de Bois-Guilbert, who take them prisoners and bring them, along with Cedric and Rowéna, who likewise have been made captives, to Torquilstone, the Castle of Front-de-Bœuf, Ivanhoe's enemy. During their imprisonment the castle is besieged by the Black Knight, who, in his adventurous spirit, having joined a band of yeomen and outlaws, demands the deliverance of the prisoners. The castle falls into the hands of the besiegers, Front-de-Bouf perishing in the flames of the burning castle; King Richard pleads for Ivanhoe to Cedric, reconciles the father to his son, and the young knight marries Rowena. 2, bettlägerig. 4, Insert 'either' here; gives = brings; played out = is 3, = combat. fought out; by, von. 5, to look from the window, jum Genfter hinaus feben. "He blenches not! he blenches not!" said Rebecca, "I see him now; he leads a body of men¹ close under the outer barrier² of the barbican. They pull down the piles and palisades; they hew down the barriers with axes.—His high black plume floats abroad over the throng³, like a raven over the field of the slain⁴.—They have made a breach in the barriers—they rush in—they are thrust back! Front-de-Bœuf heads the defenders; I see his gigantic form above the press⁵. They throng⁶ again to (S. 72, N. 4) the breach, and the pass is disputed hand to hand and man to man⁶. God of Jacob! it is the meeting of two fierce tides—the conflict of two oceans moved by adverse winds⁵!"

She turned her head from the lattice, as if (S. 27, N. 7) unable longer to endure a sight so terrible (S. 128, N. 11).

"Look forth again, Rebecca," said Ivanhoe, mistaking of the cause of her retiring; "the archery must in some degree to have ceased, since they are now fighting hand to hand.—Look again, there is to now less danger."

Rebecca again looked forth, and almost immediately exclaimed: "Help, O prophets of the law! Front-de-Boeuf and the Black Knight fight hand to hand on 12 the breach, amid 13 the roar of their followers 14, who watch 15 the progress of the strife.—Heaven strike 16 (App. § 34) with the cause (Sadje, f.) of the oppressed and the captive!"

She then 17 uttered a loud shriek, and exclaimed: "He is down 18!—

He is down!"

1. eine Schar Rampfer. 2, 'barrier' may here be rendered by Befestigungen, Schangpfable, or Berschangungen. Every Gothic castle and city had, beyond the outer walls, a fortification composed of palisades, called the barriers, which were often the scene of severe skirmishes, as these had necessarily to be carried before the walls themselves could be approached. The 'barbacan' or 'barbican' was the outer wall of an ancient castle or town, and may be rendered by ' Zwingmaner, f.' 3, flattert hoch über ber Menge in ber 4, = battle-field. 5, Gedränge, n. 6, to throng = to press forward, sich verwärts drängen, sep. comp. w. v. rest. 7, and — man = they fight for (um) the pass (Durchgang, m.) and struggle (fampfen) man against 8, it - winds = it is like the meeting (Anethanterstegen) of two fierce tides (Sturmfint, f.), like the conflict (Zusammenfließen, n.) of two oceans (Weltmeer, n.) which are moved (fort'treiben, sep. comp. str. v.) by adverse (entgegengeset) winds. 9, unrichtig benten. "Who is down?" cried Ivanhoe; "for our dear Lady's sake, tell me who has fallen?"

"The Black Knight," answered Rebecca faintly 2; then instantly again shouted with joyful eagerness 3: "But 4 no—but no!—the name of the Lord of hosts be blessed 5!—he is on foot 6 again, and fights as if there were twenty men's strength in his single arm 7.—His sword is broken—he snatches 8 an axe from a yeoman—he presses 9 Front-de-Bœuf with blow on blow.—The giant stoops and totters like an oak under the steel of the woodman 10—he falls—he falls!"

"Front-de-Bœuf?" exclaimed Ivanhoe.

"Front-de-Bœuf!" answered the Jewess; "his men 11 rush to the rescue 12, headed (S. 102, N. 3) by (von) the haughty Templar 13—their united force compels the champion 14 to pause.—They drag Front-de-Bœuf within the walls 15."

"The assailants have won 16 the barriers, have they not?" said Ivanhoe.

"They have—they have ¹⁷!" exclaimed Rebecca—"and they press ¹⁸ the besieged hard upon the outer wall; some plant ladders ¹⁹, some swarm like bees (S. 3, N. 2) and endeavour to ascend upon the shoulders of each other ²⁰—down go ²¹ stones, beams, and trunks of trees upon their heads, and as fast as they bear the wounded to the rear ²², fresh men ²³ supply their places in the assault.—Great God, hast thou given men thine own image ²⁴, that (S. 183, N. 6) it should be thus cruelly defaced ²⁵ by ²⁶ the hands of their brethren?"

"Think not of that (S. 4, N. 5, B)," said Ivanhoe; "this is no time for such thoughts. Who yield? Who push their way 2?"

"The ladders are thrown down," replied Rebecca shuddering; "the soldiers lie grovelling a under them like crushed reptiles. The besieged have the better 4."

"Saint George, strike 5 for us!" exclaimed the Knight; "do the false yeomen give way 6?"

"No!" exclaimed Rebecca, "they bear themselves right yeomanly—the Black Knight approaches the postern with his huge axe—the thundering blows which he deals you may hear them above all the din and shouts of the battle.—Stones and beams are hailed down on the bold champion—he regards them no more than if they were thistle-down or feathers!"

"By Saint George," said Ivanhoe, raising (S. 111, N. 6) himself joyfully on his couch, "methought 14 there was (S. 82, N. 7, and App. § 33) but one man in England that 15 might do such a deed!"

"The postern gate shakes ¹⁶," continued Rebecca; "it crashes—it is splintered by ¹⁷ his blows—they rush in—the outwork is won ¹⁸.—O God, they hurl the defenders from the battlements—they throw them into the moat.—O men, if ye ¹⁹ be indeed men, spare them that can resist no longer!"

"The bridge—the bridge which communicates with the castle—have they won 20 that pass?" exclaimed Ivanhoe.

"No," replied Rebecca, "the Templar has destroyed the plank on which they crossed ²¹—few ²² of the defenders escaped with him into the castle—the shrieks and cries ²³ which you hear tell the fate of the others.—Alas! THE FAVOURITE HARES1.

Ī

In the year 1774, being (S. 55, N. 1) much indisposed both in mind and body 2, incapable of diverting myself either 3 with company or books, and yet in a condition 4 that made some diversion necessary 5, I was glad of anything that would engage my attention 6, without fatiguing it.

The children of a neighbour of mine had a leveret given them for a play-thing ⁷; it was at that time about three months old. Understanding better how to tease the poor creature than to feed it, and soon becoming weary of their charge ⁸, they readily consented ⁹ that their father, who saw it pining ¹⁰ and growing leaner every day, should offer ¹¹ it to my acceptance. I was willing enough to take the prisoner under my protection, perceiving that (S. 66, N. 15), in the management ¹² of such an animal, and in the attempt to tame it, I should find just that sort of employment which my case required ¹³. It was soon known among the neighbours that I was pleased ¹⁴ with the present, and the consequence of it was, that ¹⁵ in a short time I had as many leverets offered to me as would have stocked a paddock ¹⁶. I undertook the care ¹⁷ of three, which it is necessary that I should here distinguish by the names I gave them ¹⁸: Puss, Tiny, and Bess. Notwithstanding the two feminine appellatives, I must inform ¹⁹ you they were all males.

Immediately commencing carpenter, I built them houses to sleep in. Each leveret had a separate apartment, so contrived that it could be kept perfectly sweet and clean. In the daytime the animals had the range of the hall, and at night retired each to his own bed, never intruding into that of another 7.

Puss grew presently familiar, would leap 8 into my lap, raise himself 9 upon his hinder feet, and bite the hair from my temples. He would suffer 10 me to take him up, and to carry him about in my arms, and has more than once fallen fast asleep upon my knees. He was ill three days, during which time I nursed him, kept him apart from his fellows, that 11 they might not molest him (for, like many other wild animals, they persecute 12 one of their own species that is sick), and by constant care 13, and with a variety of herbs, restored him to perfect health 14. No creature could be more grateful than (S. 104, N. 19) my patient after his recovery, a sentiment which he most significantly expressed by licking 15 my hand, first the back of it 16, then the palm, then every finger separately 17, then 18 between all the fingers, as if (S. 27, N. 7) anxious to leave no part of it unsaluted; a ceremony 19 which he never performed but once again 20 upon a similar occasion.

Finding him extremely tractable, I made it my¹ custom to carry him always after breakfast into the garden, where he hid himself generally under the leaves of a vine, sleeping² or chewing the cud till evening; in the leaves also of that vine he found a favourite repast³. I had not long habituated him to this taste of liberty, before⁴ he began to be impatient for the return of the time⁵ when he might enjoy it⁶. He would invite me to the garden¹ by drumming (S. III, N. 6) upon my knee, and by (S. 185, N. 26) a look of such expression³ as it was not possible to misinterpret. If the⁵ rhetoric did not immediately succeed, he would take the skirt of my coat (S. 36, N. 7, A) between his teeth, and pull it with all his force¹⁰. Thus Puss might be said to be perfectly tamed¹¹; the shyness of his nature was done away¹², and, on the whole¹³, it was visible by many symptoms, which I have not room to enumerate¹⁴, that he was happier in human society than when (S. 27, N. 7) shut up with¹⁵ his natural companions.

Not so Tiny; upon him the kindest ¹⁶ treatment had not the least effect. He too was sick, and in his sickness had an equal share of my attention ¹⁷; but when, after his recovery, I took the liberty to stroke him, he would grunt, strike with his fore feet, spring forward, and bite ¹⁸. He was, however ¹⁹, entertaining in his way; even his surliness was matter of mirth ²⁰, and in his play he preserved such an air of gravity ²¹, and performed his feats with such solemnity of manner ²², that in (an) him too I had an agreeable companion.

Bess, who died soon after he was full grown 1, and whose death was occasioned by his being turned (S. 161, N. 21, and S. 87, N. 6) into his box, which had been washed, while it was yet damp², was a hare of great humour and drollery³. Puss was tamed by gentle usage; Tiny was not to be tamed at all; and Bess had a ⁴ courage and confidence that made him tame from the beginning ⁵. I always admitted them into the parlour after supper, when (S. 131, N. 4), the ⁶ carpet affording their feet a firm hold, they would frisk, and bound, and play a thousand gambols, in ⁷ which Bess, being remarkably strong and fearless, was always superior to the rest. One evening, the cat being in the room, it had the hardiness to pat Bess upon the cheek, an indignity which ⁸ he resented by drumming upon her (S. 43, N. 9, B) back with such violence that the cat was happy to escape from under his paws, and ⁹ hide herself.

I describe the animals as having had each a character of his own 10. Such they were in fact 11, and their countenances were so expressive of that character, that, when I looked only on the face of either, I immediately knew which it was 12.—William Cowper, "The Gentleman's

PRINCE BISMARCK'S HOME'.

After crossing the threshold I found myself in a small, plain apartment—the reception-room—in the centre of which stands a simple little polished table with four legs. This is a relic of historical significance. A brass plate let into the square top 2 bears the following inscription: "At this table the preliminaries of peace between Germany and France were signed, February 26th, 1871, at Versailles, No. 14 Rue de Provence." In the centre of the table is a round piece of green cloth, and on it are visible a number of spots 4 caused by (S. 185, N. 26) the drippings 5 from the candles used on the momentous occasion of the negotiations between the Chancellor and Jules Favre 6. The table was the property of the lady in whose house the Chancellor was quartered 7, and of whom he bought it. In the same room stands a gigantic wardrobe richly sculptured 8, and a second wardrobe (S. 5, N. 2), according to Castellan (S. 10, N. 2) Hackmack's explanation, was made from 9 the wood of a linden tree, in the shade of which Prince Bismarck, when a 10 merry student at Göttingen, had frequently reposed. The adjoining room is the Prince's study. A bookcase contains a small library 11 for immediate use and for reference, among its books being a French account of 12 the peace negotiations of 1871. The writing-desk occupies the centre of the room. A polished fire-screen, highly ¹³ ornamented and of Asiatic origin, is a present from the Chinese Embassy in Berlin. On the mantel-piece stands a bronze statuette, about three feet high, representing the Grand Elector—a present from the Emperor. A slip of paper attached to the Marshal's baton in the Elector's outstretched hand, bears the Imperial autograph ¹⁴: "To ¹⁵ Prince Bismarck—Christmas, 1880,—W." On the wall, behind the statuette, hangs, in a richly gilt frame, a painting by ¹⁶ Hünten, representing the attack of dragoons of the guard on French infantry at Mars-la-Tour; the Chancellor's two sons, Herbert and William, being ¹⁷ in the midst of the fight.—The Correspondent of the London "Daily News."

ROYAL BENEVOLENCE.

Frederick the Great, King of Prussia¹, once rang the bell² of his cabinet; but as nobody answered³, he opened the door of the antechamber, and there found his page fast asleep⁴ upon a chair⁵. He went up to awake him, but, coming nearer, he observed a paper in his pocket, upon which something was written⁶. This excited his curiosity. He pulled it out, and found that it was a letter from the page's mother, the contents of which were nearly as follows⁷: "She returned her son many thanks⁸ for the money he had saved out of his salary and sent to her, which had proved a very timely assistance⁹. God would certainly reward him for it, and if he continued to serve God and his king faithfully and conscientiously, he could not fail of success¹⁰ and prosperity in this world¹¹." Upon reading (S. 55, N. 1) this, the king stepped softly into his closet, fetched a rouleau ¹² of ducats, and put it with the letter into the page's pocket (S. 43, N. 9, B). He then rang again till the page awoke and came into his closet. "You have ¹³ been asleep, I suppose?" said the king. The page could not deny it, stammered out an excuse ¹⁴, put, in his embarrassment, his hand into his pocket, and felt the rouleau of ducats. He immediately pulled it out, turned ¹⁵ pale, and looked at the king with tears in his eyes. "What is the matter with you?" said the king. "Oh!" replied the page, "somebody has contrived ¹⁶ my ruin: I know nothing of this money." "What God bestows ¹⁷," resumed the king, "He bestows in sleep. Send the money to your mother (App. § 5), give my respects to her ¹⁸, and inform her that I will take care ¹⁹ of both her and you."—W. Buck.

TELEGRAPHY (S. 3, N. 2) AMONG BIRDS.

I watch ¹ a flock ² of crows who, by some own correspondent of theirs, have learned that Farmer Blyth will hold a ploughing match on his grounds ³, and have in consequence summoned their brethren ⁴ to a diet of worms. How unconcerned they look, as if worms were nothing to them ⁶ ¹ How grave, as if it were an Ecclesiastical Convocation ⁶, and they had no thought of earthly things ⁷! Yet point 8 a gun, or anything like it towards them, and in a moment (App. § 14) the young birds even whose backs seemed turned to you 9 will give a flutter ¹⁰ of their wings, which appears an involuntary struggle ¹¹, but in reality is as significant a danger-signal as a red flag on a railway ¹², and is sufficient to clear the field. Nor [=And yet....not] are those crows exceptionally wise. All their feathered brethren ¹³ have made a sacred compact ¹⁴ that never with their consent shall salt be put upon their tails. The sparrows are not so idle that ¹⁵ they do not pass the word to each other when crumbs are falling thick ¹⁶ from some rich man's table. The doves, though they look so innocent (S. 27, N. 8) do not spend ¹⁷ all their time in cooing lovesongs and cradle-lullabies ¹⁸, or in pruning their rainbow-feathers. They have a Telegraphy of their own ¹⁹, and ²⁰ by a mere peck, or a [baŝ] ruffle of their feathers, can direct each other to the fields where the autumn wheat ²¹ is germinating best, or ²² the garden where the green peas are fullest and brightest ²³.—Professor C. THE HANSE '.

About the end of the twelfth century commerce began to extend towards the north of Europe. Along the German shores of the Baltic (S. 36, N. 7, A) sprang up² thriving towns, which sent out ships to (S. 72, N. 4) Russia, Norway, England, and other parts, and exchanged the raw materials which they thus acquired (S. 48, N. 6) for the merchandise of Southern Europe and the Levant, which reached them both by land and sea³. Before⁴ the middle of the thirteenth century, this trade had become so valuable as to excite ⁵ the rapacity, not only of numerous pirates who infested ⁶ the seas, but ⁷ of princes (S. 3, N. 2) and nobles, who exacted arbitrary and excessive tolls.

To defend their interests against these assailants, the chief * ports entered into a league, binding themselves * to [311] afford mutual aid and protection. Lübeck and Hamburg stood at the head of this association; Bremen ranked next¹⁰; and one after another the principal towns gave in their adhesion, the movement spreading from east to west¹¹. The numbers of the league ¹² fluctuated, but at one time it is known (S. 4, N. 4, man) to have comprised more than ninety different towns. In the fourteenth century its authority ¹³ extended greatly, for ¹⁴ it rallied around it the chief commercial towns of the interior, such as Cologne, Dortmund, Münster, Brunswick, Magdeburg, etc. The Hanse had for its object the protection and development of commerce, the maintenance of existing and the acquisition of new privileges ¹⁵ The association was governed by a Diet ¹⁶, to which each town sent representatives, and which met once in three years ¹⁷ in Lübeck. As the confederation expanded, it became necessary to divide it into several provinces ¹⁸, of which the capitals were Lübeck, Cologne, Brunswick, and Dantzic.

THE HANSE.

In Russia the Hanse found a valuable and most virgin field 1 for its commercial enterprises. Thence it drew 2 large supplies of timber, flax, hemp, ropes, skins, furs, wax, and tallow; bestowing in return 3 (for the trade was only one of barter), salt, herrings, and coarse cloth, for the mass of the peasants; and brocades, jewels, wines, and other articles of luxury, for the wealthy boyards and princes. A factory at Novgorod conducted these transactions. Another factory at Bergen placed the Hanse in direct contact 5 with Norway and Sweden. This was an establishment of considerable magnitude, comprising twenty-two courts, and serving not only as a lodging for the staff of agents and clerks 6, but as a warehouse for the goods. The chief exports from this quarter were * timber, resin, sperm oil, and, above all 9, salted fish—a (S. 53, N. 9) commodity 10 in great demand at a time when Europe was still Catholic and fasted faithfully on the appointed days. The Hanse had 11 two other large factories, one in Bruges, employing three hundred agents, and another in London.

Year by year ¹² the Hanse grew more rich and powerful. New branches of business were opened up, new factories were founded. Kings and princes were glad ¹³ to be on good terms with so influential a body. Ambassadors from the Kings of England, France, Sweden, and Denmark, and even from the Emperor himself, waited on ¹⁴ the Diet, to ask ¹⁵ favours, and to offer trading privileges in return. The original object of the league—mutual protection—was reasonable and legitimate, but was gradually expanded into ¹⁶ a policy of forcible aggression and imperious monopoly. Not only were foreigners, in ¹⁷ their voyages to (S. 72, N. 4) the Hanse towns, compelled to employ Hanseatic ships, but ¹⁸ the commerce of the north-east and west of Europe was almost exclusively in the hands of the league.

THE HANSE.

III.

There were no bounds to its greed and selfishness ¹. It did its utmost to crush all growing trade ², navigation, and even manufactures, which in the least interfered with its gains ³. It warned away ⁴ all strangers ⁵ from the Baltic; and when it found them there, it seized and destroyed their vessels ⁶. In order to maintain this monopoly, it ⁷ was ready to make ⁸ the greatest sacrifices, to equip fleets, and sustain long and costly campaigns. With Denmark it waged a desperate war; and it also came into collision ⁹ with Sweden and Norway. From ¹⁰ these contests it came off victorious, and the whole of Scandinavia was compelled to acknowledge its commercial supremacy ¹¹. It ¹² had a rupture also with the Netherlands, whose flag it banished from the Baltic ¹³.

These unbounded pretensions naturally excited a great deal of ill feeling ¹⁴ against the Hanse, and, in the end, proved fatal ¹⁵ to it. One after another ¹⁶, the markets which it had been accustomed to regard as its own private estates, threw off their allegiance, and admitted ¹⁷ the traders of other nations. Then ¹⁸ it was that the league began to suffer in another way from its narrow-minded selfishness. As long as it had exclusive command of ¹⁹ foreign sources of supply, it did not trouble itself to develop the resources of Germany—indeed it rather endeavoured ²⁰ to repress them, when it thought that others were likely to profit by them; but when one by one its monopolies exploded ²¹, it found reason to repent that it had neglected to cultivate 22 the productive powers of its own country.

These causes, combined ²³ with the change ²⁴ of route to India, led to the gradual decline of this famous confederation ²⁵; and at the last general assembly, held at Lübeck in 1630, the deputies from the several cities appeared merely to declare their secession ²⁶. In a modified form ²⁷, however, the Hanse lingered on ²⁸ till the beginning of the present century—the ²⁹ shadow of a great name. The Free Cities of Lübeck, Hamburg, Bremen, and Frankfort-on-the-Maine, are now only nominally the representatives of the Hanse.—J. H. Fyfe.

COMING TO TERMS 1.

One of the most distinguished artists in Paris ² painted for a lady occupying a brilliant position in society her portrait ³, with ⁴ the intention of placing it in an exhibition afterwards. The lady, although a long time celebrated for her beauty ⁵, had arrived at that age ⁶ which is seldom admitted (fifty years), but ⁷ endeavoured to conceal it through cosmetics, and showed herself as beautiful and captivating as in her younger days [=years]. Paris is full of resources, and ointments are to be obtained there ⁸ to heal the wounds of time.

Our heroine had her portrait taken in the most graceful attitude; splendidly dressed, and leaning on an arm-chair, she looked smiling into the glass, which should return her the most amiable compliments.

The painter made ¹¹ a most striking likeness, but this was a great mistake—a flattering one was expected ¹², and the lady subsequently ¹³ declared that she did not recognise herself (App. § 28) in this painting, and the portrait was left on the painter's hands ¹⁴. The artist, feeling himself hurt in his pride, was too good a philosopher to keep a portrait worth three thousand francs quietly on his hands ¹⁵, and an idea of vengeance presented itself to his mind ¹⁶, which he put into execution at once.

A short time before the day fixed for ¹⁷ the opening of the art-exhibition at the Louvre ¹⁸, the lady was secretly informed that her portrait was ornamented with certain accessories rather compromising her ¹⁹. She went immediately to the artist. There was the portrait! It was the same striking likeness certainly; but the painter had thinned the hair, and the lady so faithfully painted ²⁰ held in her hand two large tresses of false hair. On the toilet table were several small bottles, labelled thus ²¹: "White-Wash," "Vegetable Red," "Cosmetic ²², to efface wrinkles," "Lotion, to dye the hair in a minute ²³."

"It is abominable," said the lady, greatly excited.

"Of what do you complain?" coolly replied the artist. "Did you not declare (S. 48, N. 2, and App. § 28) that it was not your portrait? You are right, it is a mere fancy sketch 24, and as such I shall send it to the exhibition."

"What, Sir, do you intend to exhibit this painting?"

"Certainly 25, Madam; but as a cabinet picture 26, since the catalogue will indicate it under the title of 'The Coquette of Fifty Years.'"

At this the lady fainted, but soon recovered, and then paid at once for the portrait ²⁷. The accessories were effaced ²⁸ in her presence, the portrait was restored to its original state, and the three thousand francs were transferred ²⁹ to the purse of the painter.—The Young Ladies' Journal.

FALSE PRIDE.

Have pity on ¹ the youth who is ashamed to be seen carrying ² a parcel. Such a youth will never climb the hill ³; he will never be honoured and respected by sensible, respectable ⁴ men. And yet how many there are (S. 82, N. 7) who have the failing ⁶. Do you know the story of the young man who came down from a country town of New Hampshire, and entered the great wholesale establishment of the Lawrences—Abbot and Amos—in Boston ⁶? He was a young merchant who had just commenced business ⁷. He had money enough with which to purchase a certain quantity of goods, and wished to get as many more on credit ⁸, if they (S. 134, N. 4) would trust ⁹ him.

Mr. Lawrence shook his head. The young man could offer no security, and the old 10 merchants did not consider it good policy to give credit to an unknown and untried young man. The youthful customer did not blame them. He said he should probably do the same himself by one whom he did not know 11. "However," he added, "I hope I may grow into your confidence one of these days 12."

Then he paid for the goods he had purchased; and when they had been done up ¹³, he was asked where he would have them sent ¹⁴. "I will take ¹⁵ them myself," was the answer. "But the parcel is heavy," said the clerk. "And I am young and strong," answered the customer. "No, I will take the parcel on my shoulder. I cannot earn half a dollar more easily or more honestly." And he had taken the parcel on his shoulder, and had approached the door, when Mr. Lawrence came out of his office, where ¹⁶ he had been a spectator of the scene, and called the youth back. "You can have all the goods you want, young man¹⁷," he said. "Make your own selection, and set your own time for payment ¹⁸. He who is willing to help himself, will not betray ¹⁹ those who are willing to help him."

And the old merchant was not mistaken. That young man became one of his most valuable customers, and one of his valued 20 friends.

"Why should I do that?" asked the prince. "Why 25," said his companion with a little touch of embarrassment, "you know it doesn't look well to carry one's own bundle like a common labourer."

"Bah 26," cried Jerome, laughing, "I trust I shall never be ashamed to be seen bearing 27 anything (S. 3, N. 7) that belongs to a Bonaparte!"—

ABRAHAM LINCOLN 2.

The night previous to the meeting of the Convocation³ of Chicago, Mr. Lincoln did not get home until eleven o'clock at night. In the morning 5 Mrs. Lincoln, who possessed a most amiable disposition, remonstrated with her good husband at breakfast. She kindly, but firmly, informed him 6 that politics 7 were leading him into bad habits, especially (S. 87, N. 6) to keeping late hours 8 and drinking at the rum shops. She did not like it; she had to sit up 9, and also the children were kept awake 10. "And now, Abraham," she continued, "let me tell you 11 that to-night I will go to bed at ten o'clock. If you come before that hour, well and good 12; if not 13, I will not get up and let you in 14." Ten o'clock came that night, and true to her word, Mrs. Lincoln went to bed with her children 15. About an hour later Mr. Lincoln knocked at 16 the door. He knocked once, twice, and even three times before 17 an upper window was raised and the nightcap of a female looked out. "Who is there?" "I." "You know what I told you, Abraham?" "Yes, but, wife, I have got something very particular to tell you. Let me in!" "I don't want to hear. It is political stuff 18." "Wife, it is very important. There is 19 a telegraphic despatch, and I have been nominated for the Presidency 20." "Oh, Abraham, this is awful! Now I know you have been drinking. I only suspected it before, and you may just go and sleep where you got your liquor 211" And down went the window with a slam 22. The next day confirmed the truth of the news that the humble husband had been nominated to rule 23 over millions.—The New York HERALD.

PRINCE BISMARCK (S. 138, N. 12) AND LORD BEACONSFIELD 24.

Amongst a number of amusing anecdotes of Lord Beaconsfield is one of 25 the State banquet given at Berlin at the time of the Congress, when 26 he sat next to Prince Bismarck and opposite to the Crown Princess of Germany. Near to him was a trophy of "bonbons," on the papers of which were 27 miniature photographs of the German Emperor and other members of the Prussian royal family. After the feast was over 28, the lord was busily engaged (S. 87, N. 6) in securing 29 some of these sweets to take home as a [auut] remembrance of the occasion 10, when Prince Bismarck suddenly caught him by the arm and so startled him that he dropped his spoil and exclaimed: "I see, not only does Prince Bismarck give nothing away, but (S. 6, N. 10) he does not allow anybody to help himself." The German Chancellor, on discovering (S. 55, N. 1) that he had interrupted Lord Beaconsfield in a feat of annexation 81, burst into a hearty laugh, and retorted: "It is true that 82 I give nothing away; but, as you see, I am always ready for an honest alliance." So saying, he turned to the table and executed an energetic raid upon 33 the "bonbons," part of which he handed over to his British colleague.—The Correspondent of "The London Daily Telegraph."

THE POWER OF MUSIC.

On one occasion when young Chopin 1 had been travelling for several days in the slow fashion of German diligences, he was delighted and surprised, on stopping at a small post-house, to discover a grand pianoforte in one of the rooms², and still more surprised to find it in tune³ thanks, probably, to the musical taste of the postmaster's family. He sat down instantly and began to improvise in 4 his peculiarly happy manner. One by one the travellers were attracted by the unwonted sweet sounds. One of them even allowed 5 his beloved pipe to go out in his ecstasy, and the postmaster, his wife, and his two daughters joined the group of listeners. Unmindful of his audience, of the journey, the lapse of time 6, and everything but the music, Chopin continued to play, and his companions 7 to listen in rapt attention, when they were suddenly roused by a stentorian 8 voice, which made the windows rattle, calling out 9: "The horses are ready, gentlemen !" The postmaster roared out an anathema10 against the disturber-the postillion-and the passengers cast angry glances at him. Chopin started from his seat, but was instantly surrounded by his audience, who entreated him to continue. "But we have been here for some time," said Chopin, consulting his watch, "and are due in Posen already "." "Stay and play, noble young artist," cried the postmaster, "I will find you courier's horses if you will only remain a little longer." "Do be persuaded 12," added the postmaster's wife, almost threatening the artist with an embrace 13. What could he do but resume his place at the instrument? When at last he paused, the servant appeared with wine; the host's daughter served the artist first, and then the travellers, upon which the postmaster proposed a cheer for 14 the musician, in which all joined 15. The ladies in their gratitude filled the carriage pockets with the best eatables and wine the house contained; and when at last the artist rose to go 16, his gigantic host seized him in his arms and triumphantly bore him to 17 the carriage! Long 18 years afterwards Chopin would recall (S. 101, N. 22) this little incident with pleasure, and declare that the plaudits of the press had never given him more delight than the homage 19 of these simple music-loving Germans.— MANCHESTER TIT-BITS.

I.

"Well, Robert, where have you been walking 2 this afternoon?" said a tutor to one of his pupils, at the close 3 of a holiday.

ROBERT.—I have been to Millthorp-Heath, and so round by 4 the wind-mill upon Camp-Mount, and home through the meadows by the river side.

TUTOR.—Well, that is a pleasant round 5.

ROBERT.—I thought it very dull, sir; I scarcely met with a single person. I would much rather have gone along the turnpike-road.

TUTOR.—To be sure, if seeing men and horses is your object⁸, you are, indeed, better entertained on the high-road. But did you not see William (S. 48, N. 2)?

ROBERT.—We set out together⁹; but he lagged behind in the lane, and so ¹⁰ I walked on and left him.

Tutor.—That was a pity. He would have been company for you.

ROBERT.—Oh, he is so tedious, always stopping to look at this thing or that! I would rather walk alone 11. I dare say he is not come yet.

TUTOR.—Here he comes. Well, William, where have you been?

WILLIAM.—Oh, the pleasantest walk ¹²! I went all over Millthorp-Heath, and so up to the mill at the top of the hill, and then down among the green meadows by the side of the river home again.

TUTOR.—Why, that is just the round Robert has been taking, and he complains of its dulness and prefers the high-road.

WILLIAM.—I wonder at that. I am sure I hardly took a step that did not delight me; and I have brought home my handkerchief full of curiosities ¹³.

TUTOR.—Suppose ¹⁴, then, you give us an account of what amused you so much. I fancy it will ¹⁵ be as new to Robert as to me.

WILLIAM.—I will do it readily. The lane leading to the heath, you know, is close 16 and sandy, so I did not mind it much, but made the best of my way 17. However, I spied a curious thing enough 18 in the hedge. It was an old crab-tree, out of which grew a bunch of something green 19, quite different from the tree itself. Here is a branch of it.

TUTOR.—Ah! this is mistletoe, a plant of great fame 20 for the use made of it by the Druids of old 21, in their religious rites and incantations. It bears 22 a very slimy, white berry, of which bird-lime may be made, whence 28 its Latin name "viscum." It is one of those plants which do not grow in the ground by a root of their own 24, but fix themselves upon other plants; whence 25 they have been humourously 26 styled "parasitical," as being hangers on, or dependents. It was the mistletoe of the oak that the Druids particularly honoured.

WILLIAM.—A little further on I saw a green woodpecker 1 fly to a tree, and run up the trunk like a cat.

TUTOR.—That was 2 to seek for insects which live in the bark of trees. For that purpose the woodpeckers bore holes into the bark with their strong bills, whereby they do 3 a great deal of damage to the trees.

WILLIAM.—What beautiful birds they are 4!

Tutor.—Yes; the woodpecker has, from its colour and size, been called the English parrot (S. 4, N. 4, man).

WILLIAM.—When I got upon the heath, how charming it was ⁵! The air was so fresh, and the prospect on every side ⁶ so free and unbounded! The heath was all covered with gay flowers, many of which I had never observed before. There were ⁷ at least three different kinds (S. 36, N. 7 A) of heath (I have them in my handkerchief here) and gorse, and broom, and bell-flowers; and many others of all colours, of which I will beg you presently to tell me the names ⁸.

TUTOR.—That I will do readily.

WILLIAM.—I saw, too, several birds that were new to me. There was a pretty grayish one, of the size of a lark, that was hopping about some great stones; and when he flew he showed a great deal of white above his tail 9.

Tutor.—That was a wheat-ear 10. They are reckoned very delicious birds to eat 11, and frequent the open downs in 12 Sussex, and some other counties, in great number.

WILLIAM.—There was a flock of lapwings upon a marshy part of the heath ¹³ that amused me much, As I came near them, some of them kept flying round and round ¹⁴, just over my head, and crying, "Pewit," "Pewit," so distinctly, one might almost fancy they spoke ¹⁵. I thought I should have caught ¹⁶ one of them, for he flew as if one of his wings was broken (App. § 33), and often tumbled close to the ground; but as I came near, he always contrived ¹⁷ to get away.

Tutor.—Ha, ha! you were finely taken in, then 18! This was all an artifice of the bird's, to entice you away from its nest, for the lapwings build upon the bare ground, and their nests would easily be observed, did they not draw off 18 the attention of intruders, by their loud cries and counterfeit lameness.

WILLIAM.—I wish I had known that ²⁰, for the bird led me a long chase ²¹, often over shoes in water. However, this was the cause [bauon, S. 161, N. 21] of my falling in with ²² an old man and a boy, who were cutting ²³ and piling up turf for fuel. I had a great deal of talk with them about the manner of preparing the turf, and the price it sells at ²⁴. They gave me, too, a creature I never saw before—a young viper, which they had just killed. I have seen several common snakes, but this is thicker in proportion, and of a darker colour than they are.

III.

TUTOR.—True. Vipers frequent ¹ those turfy, boggy grounds ² pretty much, and I have known several turf-cutters bitten by them.

WILLIAM.—They are very venomous, are they not?

Tutor.—Enough so³ to make their wounds painful and dangerous, though they seldom prove fatal.

WILLIAM.—Well, I then took my course 4 up to the windmill on the mount. I climbed up the steps of the mill, in order to get a better view of the country round 6. What an extensive prospect! I counted fifteen church steeples; I saw several gentlemen's houses 6 peeping out from the midst of green woods and plantations 7; and I could trace the windings 8 of the river all along the low grounds, till it was lost behind a ridge of hills 9. But I will tell you what I mean to do 10, if you will give me leave.

TUTOR.—What is that 11?

WILLIAM.—I will go again and take with me Carey's county map 12, by which I shall probably be able to make out most of the places.

TUTOR.—You shall have it; and I will go with you, and take my pocket spying-glass.

WILLIAM.—I shall be very glad of that. Well, a thought struck me, that, as the hill is called Camp-Mount, there might probably be some remains of ditches and mounds ¹³ with which I have read that camps were surrounded. And I really believe I discovered something of that sort ¹⁴ running one side of the mount.

Tutor.—Very likely you might 15. I know antiquaries have described such remains as existing there, which some suppose to be Roman, others Danish 16. We will examine them when we go.

WILLIAM.—From the hill I went straight down to the meadows below, and walked on the side of a brook that runs ¹⁷ into the river. It ¹⁸ was all bordered with reeds and tall flowering-plants (S. 16, N. 10), quite different from those I had seen on the heath. As I was getting down ¹⁹ the bank to reach one of them, I heard something plunge into the water near me. It was a large water-rat, and I saw it swim over to the other side, and go ²⁰ into its hole. There were ²¹ a great many large dragonflies all about the stream. I caught one of the finest, and have him here in a leaf. But how I longed to catch a bird that I saw hovering ²² over the water, and every now and then darting into it! It was all over a mixture of the most beautiful green and blue, with some orange colour ²³. It was somewhat less than a thrush, and had a large head and bill, and a short tail.

Section 204.

THE TWO SCHOOLBOYS, OR EYES AND NO EYES. IV.

TUTOR.—I can tell you what that bird was—a kingfisher, the celebrated halcyon of the ancients, about which so many tales are told. It lives on 1 fish, which it catches in the manner you saw. It builds in holes on the banks, and is a shy, retired 2 bird, never to be seen far from the stream it inhabits.

WILLIAM.—I must try to get another sight of him, for I never saw (S. 48, N. 2) a bird that pleased me so much. Well, I followed this little brook till it entered the river, and then took the path that runs along the bank. On the opposite side, I observed several little birds running along the bank, and making a piping noise the bank, and making a piping noise the bank, and about as big as a snipe.

TUTOR.—I suppose they [es] were sand-pipers 7; one of the numerous family of birds (S. 36, N. 7, A) that get their living 8 by wading among the shallows and picking up worms and insects.

WILLIAM.—There were a great many swallows, too, sporting 9 above the surface of the water, that entertained me with their motions. Sometimes 10 they dashed down into the stream 11; sometimes they pursued one another so quickly, that the eye could scarcely follow them. In one place, where a steep sand-bank rose high above the river, I observed many of them go in and out of holes with which the bank was bored full 12.

Tutor.—Those [Das] were sand-martins 13, the smallest of our species of swallows. They are of a mouse-colour above, and white beneath. They 14 make their nests, and bring up their young, in these holes, which run a great depth, and by their situation are secure from all plunderers.

WILLIAM.—A little further I saw a man in a boat, who was catching eels in an odd way ¹⁶. He had a long pole with broad iron prongs ¹⁶ at the end; just like Neptune's trident ¹⁷, only there were five prongs instead of three. This he pushed straight down into the mud, in the deepest parts of the river, and fetched up the eels sticking between the prongs.

TUTOR.—I know the method. It is called the spearing of eels 18.

William.—While I was looking at him, a heron came flying over my head, with his large flagging wings. He alighted ¹⁹ at the next turn of the river, and I crept softly behind the bank to watch his motions. He had waded into the water as far as his long legs would allow him ²⁰ and was standing there motionless with his neck drawn in, looking ²¹ intently on the stream. Presently he darted his long bill as quick as lightning into the water, and drew out a fish, which he swallowed. I saw him catch another in the same manner. He then took alarm ²² at some noise I made, and flew away slowly to a wood at some distance, where he settled.

V.

TUTOR.—Probably his nest was there, for herons build upon the loftiest tree they can find, and sometimes in society together, like rooks. Formerly, when these birds were valued for the amusement of hawking ¹, many gentlemen had their heronries ², and a few are still remaining.

WILLIAM.—I think (S. 64, N. 11) they are the largest wild birds we have.

TUTOR.—They are of great length and spread of wing³, but their bodies are comparatively small.

WILLIAM.—I then turned homeward, across the meadows, where I stopped awhile, to look at a large flock of starlings, which kept flying about at no great distance. I could not tell at first what to make of them 5, for they rose altogether from the ground as thick as a swarm of bees, and formed themselves into a kind 6 of black cloud, hovering over the field. After taking a short round 7, they settled again, but presently rose in the same manner. I dare say 8 there were hundreds of them.

TUTOR.—Perhaps so⁹; for in the fenny counties their flocks are so numerous ¹⁰ as to break down whole acres of reeds, by settling on them ¹¹.

This disposition ¹² of starlings to fly in close swarms was remarked even by Homer, who compares the foe (S. 48, N. 6) flying from one of his heroes to a cloud of starlings retiring dismayed at the approach of the hawk.

WILLIAM.—After I had left the meadows, I crossed ¹³ the corn-fields in the way to our house, and passed close by a deep marl-pit. Looking into it, I saw, on one of the sides, a cluster of what ¹⁴ I took to be shells; and upon going down, I picked up a clod of marl ¹⁵, which was quite full of them; but how sea-shells can get there, I cannot imagine.

Tutor.—I do not wonder at your surprise, since many philosophers have been much perplexed to account for the same appearance ¹⁶. It is not uncommon to find ¹⁷ great quantities of shells and relics of marine animals, even in the bowels of high mountains, very remote from the sea.

WILLIAM.—I got ¹⁸ to the high field next to our house just as the sun was setting, and I stood looking at it till it was quite lost ¹⁹. What a glorious sight! The clouds were tinged with purple, crimson, and yellow of all shades and hues, and the clear sky varied from blue to a fine green at the horizon. But how large the sun appears just as it sets! I think it seems twice as big as when it is over-head.

Tutor.—It does so¹; and you may probably have observed the same apparent enlargement of the moon at its rising ².

WILLIAM.—I have 8; but pray what is the reason of this?

Tutor.—It is an optical deception, depending upon principles which I cannot well explain to you, till you know more of that branch of science. But what a number of new ideas this afternoon's walk has afforded you. I do not wonder that you found it amusing 4, and it has been very instructive too. Did you see (S. 48, N. 2) nothing of all these sights, Robert?

ROBERT.—I saw some of them, but I did not take particular notice of them.

TUTOR.—Why not?

ROBERT.—I do not know. I did not care about them; and I made the best of my way home 5.

TUTOR.—That would have been (App. § 33) right, if you had been sent on a message 6; but as you only walked for amusement 7, it would have been wiser to have sought out as many sources of it as possible 8. But as it is 9: one man walks through the world with the eyes open, and another with them shut, and 10 upon this difference depends all the 11 superiority the one acquires above the other. I have known sailors 12 who have been in all the quarters of the world, and could tell you nothing but 13 the signs of the tippling houses they frequented 14 in different ports, and the price and quality of the liquor. On the other hand 15, a Franklin could not even cross the Channel without making some observation useful to mankind 16. While many a vacant, thoughtless youth is whirled throughout Europe 17, without gaining 18 a single idea worth crossing a street for 19, the observing eye and inquiring mind find matter of improvement and delight 20 in every ramble in town or country Do you then, William, continue to make use of your eyes; and you, Robert, learn that eyes were given you to use.—Dr. Aikin.

THE KING AND THE MILLER.

I.

In the reign ¹ of Frederick the Great (see S. 192, N. 1), king of Prussia, there was ² a mill near Potsdam which obstructed the view from the windows of the palace of Sans Souci. Annoyed by this drawback to his favourite residence ³, the king sent ⁴ to the owner of the mill inquiring the price for which he would sell it. "For no price," was the reply of the sturdy Prussian; and in a moment of anger the monarch gave orders ⁵ that the mill should be pulled down. "The king may do this," said the miller, quietly folding his arms; "but there are (S. 82, N. 7) laws in Prussia, and he will find them out 6". Forthwith he commenced a lawsuit against the monarch, the issue of which was 7, that the court gave a decision against His Majesty, compelling him 8 to rebuild the mill, and in addition 9 to pay a large sum of money as a compensation for the injury he had done 10. The king felt mortified (S. 87, N. 6) at having been worsted by one of his subjects, but had the magnanimity to say, addressing 11 his courtiers: "I am glad to find that there are just laws and upright judges in my kingdom who are bold enough to decide against me when they think I am in the wrong." Many years afterwards (App. § 14), a descendant of the honest miller, who had in due course of time succeeded to the hereditary possession of the property 12, found himself involved in pecuniary difficulties that had become insurmountable.

THE KING AND THE MILLER.

In his distress he wrote to Frederick William IV, who was at that time king of Prussia, reminding him of the refusal experienced by Frederick the Great at the hands ¹ of his ancestor the miller, and stating ² that ³ if His Majesty now wished to obtain possession of the property, he would, in his present embarrassed circumstances, most willingly dispose of the mill. The king immediately wrote, with his own hand ⁴, the following reply:

"My Dear Neighbour,

I cannot allow you to sell the mill. It must remain in the possession of your family as long as one of your descendants survives ⁵, for the building belongs ⁶ to the history of Prussia, and is a standing ⁷ memorial of the integrity of our judges and the impartiality of our laws. I am sorry, however, to hear that you are in straitened circumstances, and therefore send you six thousand dollars ⁸ to pay off your debts, and hope the sum will be sufficient for the purpose. Consider me ⁹ always

Your affectionate 10 neighbour, Frederick William."

The mill still stands, and is occupied by the ¹¹ descendants of the resolute miller who had the fortitude to thwart the despotic monarch in his desire ¹² to improve the prospect from the windows of his palace.— Chambers's "Short Stories."

A FRIEND IN NEED (S. 3, N. 2).

I.

One wet wintry night, when a gentleman was hurrying along one of the crowded thoroughfares of London, his attention was arrested by a lean, hungry-looking dog which rushed past him. He observed that it had a collar 2 round its neck, to which a basket was attached. If it was (App. § 36) a dog that ran on errands, he thought that surely its owner would feed it better, and its ribs would not look so spare. Thinking that there was some mystery connected with the animal 4, he resolved to follow it 5. After a 6 time it turned up a narrow lane into a stable-yard, where some coachmen and hostlers were loitering about. It then got up on its hindlegs, and began walking about in circles. The bystanders, surprised at this strange proceeding, formed round in a ring and looked on. It walked five times round, standing 8 erect, and looking fixedly before it like a soldier on duty 9, evidently doing its utmost 10 to make the company laugh. After taking a short rest, it began its performance 11 again, but this time on its fore-feet, pretending to stand 12 on its (S. 43, N. 9) head. Tiring of this 13, it lay down in the middle of the ring, feigning to be dead 14, and going through all the convulsions of a dying dog, breathing heavily, panting, suffering the lower jaw to fall 15, and then turning over motionless. It did this so well, that a woman in the crowd exclaimed: "Poor beast!" and drew her hand across her eyes 16. Having lain still a minute, with its eyes closed, it got up and shook itself, to show that the performance 17 was over. It then went round begging on its hindlegs, standing 18 a little while before each of the spectators, and earnestly watching 19 to see whether they put their hands into their pockets or not. The basket round its neck had a slit in the lid, into which the coppers might be dropped.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

II.

The gentleman put in a shilling, and stooped down to read a crumpled piece of paper which hung loosely from the collar. It bore these words, written in a shaky hand: "This is the dog of a poor man who is bedridden. It earns bread for its master. Good people, do not prevent it from returning to its home." On receiving (S. 55, N. 1) any money, the poor creature returned thanks by a wag of its tail. Almost every one of the spectators gave the dog something, and when it had finished collecting the money, it barked once or twice, as if to say good-bye, and then scampered off. On entering the principal street, it quickened its pace 2, and the gentleman finding it impossible to keep up with it 3, hailed 4 a cab, and, much to the driver's amazement 5, cried: "Follow that dog." After a time the dog bolted up a narrow alley6, through which the cab could not pass 7. The gentleman alighted, and followed the dog through a dark close up8 to the garret of a rickety dwelling. Pulling the string attached to the latch, the dog opened the door, and the stranger followed. Its master lay dying 9 on a wretched bed, supported 10 by the earnings of the faithful creature, who practised 11 the same tricks alone as it used to do under its master's superintendence. Death soon ended12 the poor man's sufferings, and the dog followed the coffin to the grave. The gentleman took home the dog, but next morning the poor beast howled impatiently for 13 the basket to go its rounds as usual. It went with the pennies to the cemetery and laid them on a grave, whining 14 mournfully, and trying to scratch up the earth. Twice more it went out all day, and brought back the money for its master; but, on finding the money untouched, it lay down at full length upon the grave. The next morning it did not go its rounds, for it was dead.—Chambers's "Short Stories."

MY FIRST GUINEA.

I well remember¹, when I was very young, possessing for the first time a guinea. I remember too that this circumstance cost me no little perplexity and anxiety. As I passed along the streets, the fear of losing my guinea induced me oftentimes to take it out of my pocket to look at it. First I put² it in one pocket, then I took it out and put it in another;

after a while I took it out of the second pocket and placed 2 it in another, really perplexed³ what to do with it (S. 27, N. 7).

At last my attention was arrested by a book-auction. I stepped in and looked about me. First one lot 4 was put up, and then another, and sold to the highest bidder 5. At last I ventured to the table, just as the auctioneer was putting up "The History of the World," in two large folio volumes. I instantly thrust 2 my hand into my (S. 43, N. 9) pocket, and began turning over 6 my guinea, considering whether I should have money enough to buy this lot. The bidding proceeded 7, and at last I ventured to bid too. "Halloo! my little man!" said the auctioneer, "what! (S. 27, N. 7) not content with less than the world?" This remark greatly confused me, and drew the attention of the whole company 8 toward me, who 9, seeing (S. 30, N. 4) me anxious 10 to possess the books, refrained from bidding against me; and so, "The World" was knocked down 11 to me at a very moderate price.

How to get ¹² these huge books home was the next consideration ¹³. The auctioneer offered to send them, but I, not knowing what sort of creatures auctioneers were ¹⁴, determined to take them myself; so, after ¹⁵ the assistant had tied them up, I marched out of the room with these huge books upon my shoulder, like Samson with the gates of Gaza, amid the smiles of all present,

When I reached my home, after the servant had opened the door, the first person I met was my sainted mother.

"My dear boy," she said, "what have you got there? I thought you would not keep your guinea long."

"Do not be angry, mother," said I, throwing the books down upon the table. "I have bought 'The World' for nine shillings."

This was on a Saturday, and I well remember sitting up ¹⁶ till it was well-nigh midnight, turning over ¹⁷ this "History of the World." The books became my delight, and were carefully read through and through.

When I grew older, I became at length a Christian, and my love of books ¹⁸, among other things, led me to desire to be a Christian minister ¹⁹. To the possession of these books I attribute, in a great measure, any honours that have been added to my name in connection with literature. I have not mentioned this anecdote to gratify any foolish feeling ²⁰, but to encourage in all whom I see before me that ²¹ love of literature which has afforded me such unspeakable pleasure—pleasure ²² which I would not have been without for all the riches of the Indies ²³.—The Rev. Dr. Vaughan.

THE GREEN VAULTS IN DRESDEN.

Dresden, May 11, 1845.

We were fortunate in seeing the Green Vaults or "Das grüne Gewölbe," a collection of jewels and costly articles¹, unsurpassed in Europe (S. 7, N. 3, A). Admittance is only granted to six persons at a time, who pay a fee 2 of two thalers. The customary way is to employ a "valet de place 3," who goes round from one hotel to another, until he has collected the required number, when 4 he brings them together and conducts them to the keeper who has charge of the treasures. The first hall into which we were ushered contained works in bronze 5. They were all small, and chosen with regard to their artistical value. The next room contained statues, and vases ornamented with reliefs, in ivory. The most remarkable work was the fall of Lucifer and his angels, containing ninety-two figures in all 6, carved out of a single piece of ivory sixteen inches high! It was the work of an Italian monk, and cost him many years of hard labour 7.

However costly the contents of these halls (S. 27, N. 7), they were only an introduction to those which followed. Each one exceeded the other in splendour and costliness. The walls were covered to the ceiling with rows of goblets, vases, etc., of polished jasper, agate, and lapis lazuli. We saw two goblets, each prized at six thousand thalers, made of gold and precious stones; also the great pearl called the Spanish Dwarf, nearly as large as a pullet's egg; globes and vases cut entirely out of the mountain crystal; magnificent Nuremberg watches and clocks, and a great number of figures made ingeniously of rough 8 pearls and diamonds. The seventh hall contains the coronation robes of Augustus II, king of Poland, and many costly specimens of carving in wood⁹. A cherry-stone is shown in a glass case, which has one hundred and twentyfive faces, all perfectly finished, carved upon it 10. The next room we entered sent back a glare of splendour 11 that perfectly dazzled us. It was all gold, diamond, ruby, and sapphire. Every case sent out a glow and a glitter that it seemed like a cage of imprisoned lightnings 12. Wherever the eye turned it was met by a blaze of broken rainbows. They were there by hundreds 13, and every gem was a fortune. We here saw the largest known onyx, nearly seven inches long, and four inches broad! One of the most remarkable works is the throne and court of Aurungzebe, the Indian king, by Dinglinger, a celebrated goldsmith of the last century. It contains one hundred and thirty-two figures, all of enamelled gold, and each one most perfectly and elaborately finished. It was purchased by Prince Augustus for fifty-eight thousand thalers, which was not an exorbitant sum, considering that the making of it occupied Dinglinger and thirteen workmen for seven years!

It is almost impossible to estimate the value of the treasures these halls contain. That of gold and jewels alone must be many millions of dollars, and the amount of labour expended on these toys of royalty is incredible.—BAYARD TAYLOR, "VIEWS AFOOT."

THE DEATH OF LITTLE NELL.

She was dead. No sleep (S. 27, N. 7) so beautiful and calm, so free from trace ¹ of pain, so fair to look upon. She seemed ² a creature fresh from the hand of God, and waiting for the breath of life; not one who had lived and suffered death. Her couch was dressed with here and there some winterberries and green leaves, gathered in a spot she had been used to favour. "When I die, put near me something ³ that has loved the light, and had the sky above it always." These were her words.

She was dead. Dear (S. 10, N. 2), gentle, patient, noble Nell was dead. Her little bird—a poor, slight thing 4, the pressure of the finger would have crushed—was stirring nimbly in its cage; and the strong heart of its child-mistress 5 was mute and motionless for ever! Where were the traces of her early cares, her sufferings and fatigues? All gone 6. Sorrow was dead, indeed in her 7; but peace and perfect happiness were born 8—imaged in her tranquil beauty and (S. 10, N. 9) profound repose.

And still her former self lay there, unaltered in this change 8. Yes, the old fireside 9 had smiled upon that same sweet face; it had passed like a dream through haunts of misery and care—at the door of the poor schoolmaster on the summer evening, before the furnace-fire upon the cold wet night, at the still bedside of the dying boy 10, there had been the same mild and loving look. So shall we know the angels in their majesty after death.—Charles Dickens, "The Old Curiosity Shop."

THE CHILDHOOD OF ROBERT CLIVE 1.

Some lineaments of the character of the man were early discerned in the child. There remain 2 letters written by his relations when he was in his seventh year; and from 3 these letters it appears that, even at that early age, his strong will and his fiery passions, sustained by a constitutional intrepidity 4, had begun to cause great uneasiness to his family. "Fighting," says one of his uncles, "to which he is out of measure addicted, gives his temper such a fierceness and imperiousness, that he flies out on every occasion 5." The old people of the neighbourhood still remember to have heard from their parents how Bob Clive climbed to the top of the lofty steeple of Market Drayton, and with what terror the inhabitants saw (S. 78, N. 14, B) him seated on a stone spout near the summit. They also relate how he formed all the idle lads of the town into a kind of predatory army 6, and compelled the shop-keepers to submit to a tribute of apples and halfpence, in consideration of which 7 he guaranteed the security of their windows. He was sent from school to school, making very little progress in his learning 8, and gaining for himself everywhere the character of an exceedingly naughty boy. One of his masters, it is said, was sagacious enough to prophesy that the idle lad would make a great figure in the world9.—Lord Macaulay, "Lord CLIVE."

AN ADVENTURE WITH A LION.

Į.

It is well 1 known that if one of a troop of lions is killed, the others take the hint 2, and leave that part of the country. So 3 the next time the herds were attacked, I went with the people, in order to encourage them to rid themselves of the annoyance by destroying 4 one of the marauders. We found the lions on a small hill about a quarter of a mile in length 5, which was covered with trees. A circle of men was formed round it, and they gradually closed up 6, ascending pretty near to each other. Being down below on the plain with a native schoolmaster, named Mebalwe, a most excellent man (S. 53, N. 9), I saw one of the lions sitting (S. 78, N. 14, B) on a piece of rock within the now-closed circle of men. Mebalwe fired at him before I could 7, and the ball struck the rock on which the animal was sitting. He bit at the spot struck, as a dog does at a stick or stone thrown at him; then leaping away 8, broke through the opening circle, and escaped unhurt. The men were afraid to attack him on account of their belief in [an] witchcraft. When the circle was re-formed, we saw two other lions in it; but were afraid to fire lest we should strike the men, and they allowed the beasts to burst through also. If (App. § 36) the Bakatta had acted according to the custom of the country, they would have speared the lions in their attempt to get out. Seeing we could not get 10 them to kill one of the lions, we bent our footsteps 11 towards the village; in going round the end of the hill, however, I saw one of the beasts sitting on a piece of rock as before, but this time he had a little bush in front. Being about thirty yards 12 off, I took a good aim at his body through the bush, and fired both barrels into it. The men then called out: "He is shot! he is shot!" Others cried: "He has been shot by another man, too; let us go to him!" I did not see any one else shoot at him, but I saw the lion's tail 13 erected in anger behind the bush, and turning to the people, said: "Stop a little till I load 14 again."

AN ADVENTURE WITH A LION.

II.

When (S. 27, N. 7) in the act¹ of ramming down the bullets, I heard a shout. Starting, and looking half round, I saw the lion just in the act of springing ² upon me. I was upon a little height; he caught my shoulder as he sprang³, and we both came to the ground below together. Growling (S. 55, N. 1, mäfrent) horribly close to my ear, he shook me as a terrier dog does a rat. The shock produced a stupor similar to that which seems to be felt by a mouse after the first shake of the cat. It caused a sort of dreaminess, in which there was⁴ no sense of pain nor feeling of terror, though I was quite conscious of all that was happening. It was like what⁵ patients, particularly under the influence of chloroform, describe, who see all the operation, but do not feel the knife. This singular condition was not the result of any mental process. The shake annihilated fear, and allowed no sense of horror ⁶ in looking round at the beast. This peculiar state is probably produced in all animals killed by the carnivora 7; and, if so 8, is a merciful provision by our benevolent creator for lessening the pain of death (S. 76, N. 22, B, 1). Turning round to relieve myself of the weight, as he had one paw on the back of my head 9, I saw his eyes directed to Mebalwe, who was trying to shoot him at a distance of ten or fifteen yards. His gun, a flint one 10, missed fire in both barrels; the lion immediately left me, and attacking Mebalwe, bit 11 his thigh. Another man, whose life I had saved before, after he had been tossed 12 by a buffalo, attempted to spear the lion while he was biting Mebalwe. He left Mebalwe, and caught this man by the shoulder; but, at that moment, the bullets he had received took effect 13, and he fell down dead. The whole was the work of a few moments, and must have been his paroxysm of dying rage. In order to take out the charm from him, the Bakatta on the following day made a huge bonfire over his carcass, which was declared to be that of the largest lion they had ever seen. Besides crunching the bone into splinters, he left 14 eleven teeth wounds on the upper part of my arm.—Dr. Livingstone.

THE BURNING OF MOSCOW. (Comp. S. 156, N. 1.)

I.

On the 14th of September, 1812, while the rear-guard of the Russians were in the act (S. 216, N. 1) of evacuating Moscow, Napoleon reached the hill called the Mount of Salvation 1, because it is there where the natives kneel and cross themselves at first sight of the Holy City.

Moscow seemed as lordly and striking ² as ever, with the steeples of its thirty churches, and its copper domes glittering in the sun; its palaces of Eastern architecture mingled with trees, and surrounded with gardens³; and its Kremlin⁴, a huge triangular mass of towers, ⁶ something between a palace and a castle, which rose like a citadel out of the general ⁶ mass of groves and buildings. But not a chimney sent up smoke ⁷, not a man appeared on the battlements, or at the gates. Napoleon gazed ⁸ every moment expecting to see a train of bearded boyards arriving to (S. 19, N. 7) fling themselves at his feet, and place their wealth at his disposal. His first exclamation was: "Behold at last that celebrated city!" His next: "It was full ⁹ time!" His army, less regardful of the past or the future ¹⁰, fixed their eyes on the goal of their wishes, and a shout of "Moscow! Moscow!" passed from rank to rank.

Bonaparte, as if unwilling to encounter the sight of the empty streets, stopped immediately on entering the first suburb. His troops were quartered in the desolate city. During the first few hours after their arrival ¹¹, an obscure rumour, which could not be traced ¹², but one of those which are sometimes found to get abroad before the approach of some awful certainty ¹³, announced that the city would be endangered by fire in the course of the night ¹⁴.

Section 218.

THE BURNING OF MOSCOW.

II.

The report seemed to arise from 1 those evident circumstances which rendered the event probable, but no one took any notice of it, until 2 at midnight, when the soldiers were startled from their quarters by the report that the town was in flames (App. § 28). The memorable conflagration began amongst 3 the coachmakers' warehouses and workshops in the Bazaar, which was the richest district of the city. It was imputed to accident, and the progress of the flames was subdued by the exertions of the French soldiers. Napoleon, who had been roused by the tumult, hurried to the spot 4; and when the alarm seemed at an end 5, he retired, not to his former quarters in the suburbs, but to the Kremlin, the hereditary palace of the only sovereign whom he had ever treated as an equal 6, and over whom his successful arms had now attained such an apparently immense superiority. Yet he did not suffer himself to be dazzled by the advantages he had attained, but availed himself of the light of the blazing Bazaar, to write to the Emperor proposals of peace with his own hand8. They were despatched by a Russian officer of rank, who had been disabled by indisposition from following the army. But no answer was ever returned 9.

Next day the flames had disappeared, and the French officers luxuriously ¹⁰ employed themselves (S. 87, N. 6) in selecting out of the deserted palaces of Moscow, that which best pleased the fancy of each for his residence. At night the flames again arose in the north and west quarters of the city. As the greater part of the houses were built of wood, the conflagration spread with the most dreadful rapidity.

THE BURNING OF MOSCOW.

III.

This was at first imputed to the blazing brands [= pieces of wood] and sparkles which were carried by the wind; but at length it was observed, that, as often as the wind changed ,-and it changed three times in that terrible night,—new flames broke always forth in that direction, where 2 the existing gale was calculated to direct them on 3 the Kremlin. These horrors were increased by the chance of explosion. There was, though as yet unknown to the French, a magazine of powder in the Kremlin; besides that, a park of artillery, with its ammunition, was drawn up 6 under the Emperor's window. Morning (S. 3, N. 2) came, and with it a dreadful scene. During the whole night, the metropolis had glared with a thick and suffocating atmosphere, of almost palpable smoke. The flames defied the efforts of the French soldiery, and it is said that the fountains of the city had been rendered inaccessible, the water-pipes cut, and the fire-engines destroyed or carried off.

Then came the reports of fire-balls having been found burning in deserted houses; of men and women, that, like demons, had been seen openly spreading the flames, and who were said to be 8 furnished with combustibles for rendering their dreadful work more secure. Several wretches against 9 whom such acts had been charged, were seized (S. 2, N. 1) upon, and, probably without much inquiry, zwere shot on the spot. While it was almost impossible to keep the roof of the Kremlin free of the burning brands which the wind showered down 10, Napoleon watched from the windows the course of the fire which devoured his fair conquest, and the exclamation burst from him 11: "These are indeed Scythians!"

power of contending². At the dead³ hour of midnight, the Kremlin itself was found to be on fire. A soldier of the Russian police, charged with being incendiary 4, was turned over 5 to the summary 6 vengeance of the Imperial Guard. Bonaparte was then, at length, persuaded, by the entreaties of all around him, to relinquish his quarters in the Kremlin, to which, as the visible mark of his conquest, he had seemed to cling with the tenacity of a lion holding a fragment of his prey. He encountered both difficulty and danger in retiring from the palace, and, before he could gain the city gate, he had to traverse with his suite streets arched with fire 7, and in which the very air they breathed was suffocating. At length he gained the open country, and took up his abode in a palace of the Czar's called Petrowsky, about a French league from the city. As he looked back on the fire, which, under the influence of the autumnal wind, swelled and surged round the Kremlin, like an infernal ocean around a sable Pandemonium⁸, he could not suppress the ominous expression: "This bodes us great misfortune!"

The fire continued to triumph unopposed, and consumed in a few days what it had cost centuries to raise. "Palaces and temples," says a Russian author, "monuments of art, and miracles of luxury, the remains of ages which had passed away, and those which had been the creation of yesterday; the tombs of ancestors, and the nursery-cradles 9 of the present generation, were indiscriminately destroyed. Nothing was left of Moscow save the remembrance of the city, and the deep resolution to avenge its fall."

The fire raged till the 19th of September with unabated violence, and then began to slacken for want of fuel. It is said four-fifths of this great city were laid in ruins.—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

CHRISTMAS IN GERMANY.

I.

Frankfort-on-the-Maine, Jan. 2, 1845.

We have lately witnessed the most beautiful and interesting of all German festivals—Christmas—which is celebrated in a style truly characteristic of the people. About the commencement of December, the Christmarkt, or fair, was opened in the Römerberg, and has continued to the present time. The booths, decorated with green boughs, were filled with toys of various kinds, among which, during the first days, the figure of St. Nicholas was conspicuous. There were bunches of wax candles to illuminate the Christmas tree, gingerbread with printed mottoes in poetry, beautiful little earthenware, basket-work, and a wilderness of playthings. The sixth of December, being Nicholas day 14, the booths were lighted up, and the square was filled with boys, running from one stand to another, all shouting and talking together in the most joyous confusion 8. Nurses were going around, carrying the smaller children in their arms, and parents bought presents decorated with sprigs of pine and carried them away.

Many of the tables had bundles of rods with gilded bands, which were to be used that evening by the persons who represented St. Nicholas. In the family with whom we reside, one of our German friends dressed himself 9 very grotesquely with a mask, fur robe, and long tapering cap. He came in with a bunch of rods, a sack, and a broom for 10 sceptre. After we all had received our share of the beating, he threw the contents of his bag on the table, and while we were scrambling for the nuts and apples, gave us many smart raps over the fingers. In many families the children are made to say 11: "I thank you 12, Herr Nicholas," and the rods are hung up in the room until Christmas, to keep them in good behaviour 13. This 14 was only a forerunner of the "Christkindchen's coming. The Nicholas is the punishing spirit, and the "Christkindchen" the rewarding one.

CHRISTMAS IN GERMANY,

II.

When this time was over, we all began preparing secretly our presents for Christmas. Every day there was a consultation about the things which should be obtained 2. It was so arranged that we should interchange presents, but nobody must 3 know beforehand what he would receive. What pleasure there was in all these secret purchases and preparations! Scarcely anything was thought or spoken of but Christmas, and every day the consultations became more numerous and secret. The trees were bought some time before-hand, but as we Americans were to witness the festival for the first time, we were not allowed to see them prepared, in order that the effect might be as great as possible. The market in the Römerberg Square grew constantly larger and more brilliant. Every night it was illuminated with lamps and thronged with people. Quite a forest sprang up in the street before our door. The old stone house opposite, with the traces of so many centuries on its dark face, seemed to stand in the midst of a garden. It was a pleasure to go out every evening and see the children rushing to and fro, shouting and selecting toys from the booths and talking all the time of the Christmas that was so near (S. 48, N. 6). The poor people went with their little presents hid under their cloaks, lest their children might see them; every heart was glad, and every countenance wore a smile of secret pleasure.

Finally, the day before Christmas arrived. The streets were so full, I ⁵ could scarcely make my way through ⁶, and the sale of trees went on ⁷ more rapidly than ever. These were ⁸ usually branches of pine or fir, set upright ⁹ in a little miniature garden of moss. When the lamps were lighted at night, our street had the appearance of an illuminated garden. We were prohibited from entering the rooms upstairs in which the grand ceremony was to take place, being obliged ¹⁰ to take our seats in those arranged for the guests, and to await with impatience the hour when the "Christkindchen" should call us.

CHRISTMAS IN GERMANY.

Several relatives of the family came (S. 104, N. 19), and, what was more agreeable, they brought with them five or six children. I was anxious to see how they would view the ceremony ¹. Finally, in the midst of an interesting conversation, we heard the bell ringing at the head of ² the stairs. We all started up, and made for ³ the door. I ran up the steps with the children at my heels, and at the top met ⁴ a blaze of dazzling light, coming from the open door. In each room stood a great table, on which presents were arranged, amid flowers and wreaths. From ⁵ the centre rose the beautiful Christmas tree, covered with wax tapers to the very top, which made the room nearly as light as day ⁶, while every bough was hung with sweetmeats and gilded nuts. The children ran shouting around the table, hunting ⁷ their presents, while the older persons had theirs pointed out to them. I had a little library of German authors as my share; and many of the others received quite valuable gifts.

But how beautiful was the heartfelt joy that shone on every countenance! As each one discovered his presents, he embraced the givers, and it was a scene of unmingled joy 8. It is a glorious feast, this Christmas time! What a chorus from happy hearts went up on that evening to Heaven! Full of poetry and feeling, and glad associations, it is here anticipated with delight, and leaves a pleasant memory behind it. We may laugh at such simple festivals at home, and prefer to shake ourselves loose from every shackle 9 that bears the rust of the past, but we should certainly be happier if some of these beautiful old customs were better honoured. They renew the bond of feeling 10 between families and friends, and strengthen their kindly sympathy; even life-long associates require occasions of this kind to freshen the tie that binds them together 11.—Bayard Taylor, "Views Afoot."

NEW-YEAR'S EVE (S. 152, N. 1) IN GERMANY.

New-Year's Eve is also favoured with a peculiar celebration in Germany. Everybody remains up and makes himself merry until midnight. The Christmas trees are again lighted, and while the tapers are burning out, the family play for 2 articles which they have purchased and hung on the boughs. It is so arranged that each one shall win as much as he gives, and the change 3 of articles creates much amusement. One of the ladies rejoiced in the possession of a red silk handkerchief and a cake of soap, while a cup and saucer and a pair of scissors fell to my lot. As midnight drew near, the noise became louder in the streets, and companies of people, some of them 4 singing in chorus, passed by on their way to the Zeil⁵. Finally, it struck a quarter to twelve, the windows were opened, and every one waited anxiously for the clock to strike twelve. At the first sound, such a cry arose as one may imagine when thirty or forty thousand persons all set their lungs going 6 at once. Everybody in the house, in the street, over the whole city, shouted: "Prost Neujahr 7!"

In families, all the members embrace each other, with wishes of happiness for the new year. Then the windows are thrown open, and they cry to their neighbours or those passing by.

After we had exchanged congratulations, three of us set out for the Zeil. The streets were full of people, shouting to one another and to those standing at the open windows. We failed not to cry: "Prost Neujahr!" wherever we saw a damsel at the window, and the words came back to us more musically than we sent them. Along the Zeil the spectacle was most singular. The great wide street was filled with companies of men, marching up and down, while from the mass rang up one deafening, unending shout, that seemed to pierce the black sky above. The whole scene looked stranger and wilder in the flickering light of the swinging lamps 8, and I could not help thinking it must resemble a night in Paris, during the French Revolution.—Bayard Taylor, "Views Afoot."

THE TWO ROBBERS.

T.

WE OFTEN CONDEMN IN OTHERS WHAT WE PRACTISE OURSELVES.

(Alexander the Great in his tent. A man with a fierce countenance, chained and fettered, brought before him.)

ALEXANDER.—What, art thou the Thracian robber, of whose exploits I have heard so much?

ROBBER.—I am a Thracian, and a soldier.

ALEXANDER.—A soldier?—a thief, a plunderer, an assassin! the pest of the country! I could honour thy courage, but I must detest and punish thy crimes.

Robber.—What have I done of which you can complain¹?

ALEXANDER.—Hast thou not set at defiance my authority, violated the public peace, and passed thy life 2 in injuring the persons 3 and properties of thy fellow-subjects 4?

Robber.—Alexander! I am your captive. I must hear what you please to say, and endure what you please to inflict. But my soul is unconquered; and if I reply at all 5 to your reproaches, I will reply like a free man.

ALEXANDER.—Speak freely. Far be it from me to take 6 the advantage of my power, to silence those with whom I deign to converse!

ROBBER.—I must then answer your question by another. How have you passed your life?

ALEXANDER.—Like a hero. Ask Fame⁷, and she will tell you. Among the brave, I have been the bravest; among sovereigns, the noblest; among conquerors, the mightiest.

1, sich über etwas beflagen. Use the 2nd person Plural when the robber addresses Alexander. 2, und dein Leben damit zugebracht. 3, = the personal safety. 4, deiner Rebennenschen. 5, überhaupt. 6, = to use. 7, 'Fame,' here Fama, die Göttin des Ruhmes. Fame, or Fama, was a poetical deity, represented as having wings and blowing a trumpet. A temple was dedicated to her by the Romans.

Section 226.

THE TWO ROBBERS.

II.

ROBBER.—And does not Fame speak of me too? Was there (S. 82, N. 7) ever a bolder captain of a more valiant band? Was there ever—but I scorn to boast. You yourself know that I have not been easily subdued.

ALEXANDER.—Still, what are you but a robber, a base, dishonest robber?

ROBBER.—And what is a conqueror? Have not you, too, gone about the earth 1 like an evil genius, blasting 2 the fair fruits of peace and industry, plundering, ravaging, killing ³ without law, without justice, merely to gratify an insatiable lust for dominion? All that I have done to a single district with a hundred followers, you have done to whole nations with a hundred thousand. If I have stripped individuals ⁴, you (S. 27, N. 8) have ruined kings and princes. If I have burned a few hamlets, you have desolated the most flourishing kingdoms and cities of the earth. What is then the difference ⁵, but that, as you were born a king, and I a private man ⁶, you have been able to become a mightier robber than I?

ALEXANDER.—But if I have taken like a king, I have given like a king. If I have subverted empires, I have founded greater. I have cherished ⁷ arts, commerce, and philosophy.

ROBBER.—I, too, have freely given to the poor, what I took from the rich. I have established order and discipline among the most ferocious of mankind⁸, and have stretched out my protecting arm over the oppressed. I know, indeed, little of the philosophy you talk of; but I believe neither you nor I will ever atone to the world for the mischiefs we have done.

ALEXANDER.—Leave me!—Take off his chains, and use him well. Are we, then, so much like?—Alexander and a Robber?—Let me re-

A TOUCHING SCENE AT SEA.

I.

Two weeks ago 1 on board an English steamer, a little ragged boy, aged nine years, was discovered on the fourth day of the voyage out from Liverpool to New York, and carried before the first mate, whose duty it was to deal with such cases. When questioned as to his object in being stowed away 2, and who brought him on board, the boy, who had a beautiful sunny face, and eyes that looked like the very mirrors of truth, replied that his stepfather did it, because he could not afford 3 to keep him, nor to pay his passage out to Halifax, where he had an aunt who 4 was well off, and to whose house he was going. The mate did not believe the story, in spite of the winning face and truthful 5 accents of the boy. He had seen too much of stow-aways 6 to be easily deceived by them, he said; and it was his firm conviction that the boy had been brought on board and provided with food by the sailors. The little fellow was very roughly handled in consequence. Day by day he was questioned and re-questioned, but always with the same result. He did not know a sailor on board, and his father alone had secreted him, and given him the food which he ate. At 7 last the mate, wearied by the boy's persistence in the same story, and perhaps a little anxious to inculpate the sailors, seized him one day by the collar, and dragging him to the fore *, told him that (S. 211, N. 9) unless he would tell the truth in ten minutes from that time, he would hang him from the yard-arm.

The author will, however, refrain from indicating the form to be used, the student being by this time expected to have attained sufficient skill and practice for dealing with such cases. 8, aufs Borberteil bes Schiffes.

A TOUCHING SCENE AT SEA.

II.

He then made him sit down under it on the deck. All around him were the passengers and sailors of the watch, and in front of him stood the inexorable mate, with his chronometer in his hand, and the other officers of the ship by his side. It was the finest sight, said our informant, that he ever beheld—to see the pale, proud, sorrowful face of that noble boy, his head erect, his beautiful eyes bright through the tears that suffused them. When eight minutes had fled², the mate told him he had but two minutes to live, and advised him to speak the truth and save his life; but he replied with the utmost simplicity and sincerity by asking (S. III, N. 6) the mate if he might pray. The mate said nothing, but nodded his head, turned as pale as a ghost 3, and shook with trembling like a reed with 4 the wind. And there, all eyes turned on him, the brave and noble little fellow, this poor waif, whom society owned not, and whose own stepfather could not care for him-there he knelt, with clasped hands, and eyes turned up to heaven, while he repeated 5 audibly the Lord's Prayer, and prayed the Lord Jesus to take him to heaven. There then occurred (S. 104, N. 19) a scene as at Pentecost. Sobs broke 6 from the strong hard hearts, as the mate sprang forward to the boy, and kissed and blessed him, and told him how sincerely he believed his story, and how glad he was that he had been willing enough to face death 7 and to sacrifice his life for the truth of his word.—REV. AN ORATION ON THE POWER OF HABIT.

ī

I will now speak of a habit which I believe 1 is, more than any other, debasing, degrading, and embruting to man², both³ physically, intellectually, and morally. I am not going to give you an address 4 full of my favourite theme [temperance], but I must speak of it 5. I must speak of it before this assembly, for I shall never see you again till we meet on that day when we shall see things as they are 6. Let me then speak of one habit which, in its power, and 7 influence, and 8 fascination, seems to rear its head like a Goliath or Saul above all its kindred agencies of demoralization; I allude to 9 the habit of using intoxicating liquors as a beverage, until that habit becomes a fascination 10. You will allow me to give 11 my opinions upon these points freely. I consider drunkenness not merely to be a moral evil, but also a physical evil, and 12 it depends a great deal more upon the temperament, and the constitution, and disposition of the young man, whether if he falls into the drinking usages of society, it becomes a habit or not, than it does upon his strength of mind or firmness of purpose 13.

Take a young man, and he shall be full of fire 14 and poetry. He shall be 15 of a nervous temperament and generous heart; fond of society, and open and manly in everything he does. Every one loves him.

That is the man most liable to become intemperate.

1, = as I believe. 2, is . . . to man, auf ben Menschen wirft. 3, 'both', 4, to give an address to a person, einem eine Rebe halten; of, hier und zwar. 5, ich muß basselbe aber wenigstens bernhren (allude to). Diese Bewohnheit einen gauberhaften Reig auf ben Menschen ausübt. 11, = express. 12, Say 'and when a young man once follows the general habit of taking intoxicating liquors, it depends, etc.' 13, his - purpose, feine Beiftedavber 14, = who is full of (voller) fire. 15, The student will do well to omit the words 'He shall be' and join this period to the preceding one.

Section 230.

AN ORATION ON THE POWER OF HABIT.

H.

He enters into the outer circle of the whirlpool, and throws care to the winds 2. There he thinks to stay, but he gets nearer and nearer to the fatal gulf, until he is swept into the vortex before he dreamed of danger. This thing, habit 3, comes gradually. Many a man who has acquired 4 a habit of drinking, but does not exactly proceed to excess 5, is rescued simply by possessing certain physical qualities which his poor unfortunate friend had not. You say: "I am not so foolish as to become a drunkard!" So He thought once. You say: "I can leave it off 6 when

I like," as if He at first had not had (App. § 33) the power to leave it off when he liked. You say: "I have too sound an intellect to become a drunkard," as if He were born without an intellect. You say: "I have too much pride in myself, too much self-respect," as if He were not once as proud as you." The way men acquire this habit, is by looking on those the work of the work of the work of the habit, but won't; he would with all his heart and soul, but cannot. I tell you, young men 10, that while the power of a bad habit is stripping you of nerve [pl.], and (S. 10, N. 9) energy, and freshness of feeling 11, it does not destroy your responsibility. If you say: "Should I find the practice by experience to be injurious, I will give it up," surely that is not common sense 1. You might as well say: "I will put my hand into the nest of the rattlesnake, and when I find out that he has stuck his fangs into me 2, I will draw it out and get cured."

I remember riding from³ Buffalo to the Niagara Falls, and said to a gentleman: "What river is that, Sir?" "That," he said, "is Niagara River 4." "Well, it is a beautiful stream," said I, "bright, and fair, and glossy; how far off are the rapids 5?" "Only a mile or two," was the reply. "Is it possible that (S. 66, N. 15) only a mile or two from us we shall find the water in the turbulence which it must show when near the falls?" "You will find it so, Sir." And so I did find it; and that first sight of the Niagara I shall never forget. Now, launch your boat on that Niagara river; it is bright, smooth, beautiful, and glossy. There is a ripple at the bow 6, and the silvery wake 7 you leave behind adds to your enjoyment. Down the stream you glide; oars, sails, and helm are in proper trim, and you set out 8 on your pleasure excursion 9. Suddenly some one cries out from the bank: "Young men, ahoy10!" "What is it "!"—"The rapids are below you "!"—"Ha, ha! we have heard of the rapids, but we are not so foolish as to get there 13. If we go [=If it goes] too fast, then up with the helm 14, then set the mast in the socket 16, hoist the sail, and speed to land 16. Then on 17, boys; don't be alarmed—there's no danger!"

A CURIOUS STORY 1.

We heard a curious story 1 at Tristan 2 about two Germans who had settled nearly two years before on Inaccessible Island 3. Once a year about the month of December, the Tristan men go ⁴ to the two outlying islands to pick up the few seals which are still to be found there. On two of these occasions they had seen the Germans, and within a few months smoke had risen from the island, which they attributed ⁵ to their having fired (S. 161, N. 21) some of the brushwood; but as they had seen or heard nothing of them since, they thought the probability was that they had perished. Captain Nares ⁶ wished to visit the other islands, and to ascertain the fate of the two men was an additional object in doing so ⁷.

Next morning we were close under Inaccessible Island, the second in size of the little group of three. The ship was surrounded by multitudes of penguins *, and as few of us had any previous personal acquaintance with this eccentric form of life *, we followed their movements with great interest. The penguin as a rule swims under water, rising now and then and resting on the surface, like one of the ordinary water-birds, but more frequently with its body entirely covered, and only lifting its head from time to time to breathe.

The structure of Inaccessible Island is very much the same as Tristan, only the pre-eminent feature ¹⁰ of the latter, the snowy cone, is wanting. A wall of volcanic rocks, about the same height as the cliff at Tristan, and which one is inclined to believe to have been at one time continuous with it, entirely surrounds Inaccessible Island, falling for the most part sheer ¹¹ into the sea, and it seems that it slopes sufficiently to allow a tolerably easy ascent to the plateau on the top at one point only.

1, This story is taken from Mr. W. J. J. Spry's most interesting account of 'The Cruise of the Challenger'. The Tristan d'Acunha group of islands (bie Erfrischungeinseln), so named from the Portuguese navigator who discovered it early in the 16th century, lies in mid-ocean, about 1300 miles south of St. Helena and 1500 miles west of the Cape of Good Hope, nearly on a line between the Cape of Good Hope and Cape Horn; it is thus probably the most isolated and remote of all the abodes of men. The group consists of the larger Island of Tristan and two smaller islands-Inaccessible Island, about 18 miles south-west from Tristan, and Nightingale Island, twenty miles south of the main island. Tristan only is permanently inhabited, the other two are visited from time to time by sealers. In the year 1829 Tristan was inhabited by 27 families; in 1836 it possessed a population of 42; in 1852 the population had risen to 85, and in 1867 this number was only exceeded by one. 2, Anf ber Infel Triftan, which place at the head of the period; about, über, with Acc. 3, The author finds that the best German maps use the English name of 'Inaccessible Island' unaltered. II.

There is a shallow bay in which the ship anchored in fifteen fathoms on the east side of the island; and there, as in Tristan, a narrow belt of low ground, extending for about a mile along the shore, is interposed between the cliff and the sea. A pretty waterfall tossed itself down, about the middle of the bay, over the cliff from the plateau above. A little way down it was nearly lost in spray, like the Staubbach of Schaffhausen, and collected itself again into a rivulet 1, where it regained the rock at the lower level. A hut built of stones and clay, and roofed with spars and thatch, lay in a little hollow 2 near the waterfall, and the two Germans, in excellent health and spirits, but enraptured at the sight of the ship and longing for a passage anywhere out of the island, were 3 down on the beach, waiting for the first boat. Their story is a curious one 4, and as Captain Nares agreed 5 to take them to the Cape, we had ample time to get an account of their adventures, and to supplement from their experience such crude notions of the nature of the place as we could gather during our short stay 6.

Frederick and Gustav Stoltenhoff are sons of a dyer in Aix-la-Chapelle (Maden). Frederick, the elder, was employed in a merchant's office in Aix-la-Chapelle at the time of the Franco-German war (1870). He was called on to serve in the German army, where he attained the rank of a lieutenant, and took part in the siege of Metz and Thionville. At the end of the campaign he was discharged, and returned home to find his old situation filled up.

In the meantime, his younger brother, Gustav, who was a sailor and had already made several trips, had joined ¹ on the 1st of August, 1870, at Greenock, as an ordinary seaman, the English ship "Beacon Light," bound for Rangoon. On the way out ², the cargo, which consisted of coal, caught fire ³ when they were from ⁴ six to seven hundred miles north-west of Tristan d'Acunha, and for (S. 166, N. 10) three days all hands ⁵ were doing their utmost to extinguish the fire. On the third day, the hatches, which had been battened down, to exclude the air, blew up ⁶, the main hatch carrying overboard ⁷ the second mate who had been standing on it at the time of the explosion. The boats had been provisioned beforehand, ready to leave the ship. Two of the crew were drowned through one of the boats being swamped 8, and the survivors, to the number of sixteen, were stowed in the long-boat. Up to this time the ship had been nearing Tristan with a fair wind at the rate of 8 six knots an hour 10, so that they had now only about three hundred miles to go. They abandoned the ship on Friday; on Saturday afternoon they sighted Tristan, and on the following day a boat came off to their assistance and towed them ashore.

The shipwrecked crew remained for eighteen days at Tristan d'Acunha, during which time they were treated with all kindness and hospitality. They were relieved by the ill-fated "Northfleet," bound for Aden with coal, and Gustav Stoltenhoff found his way back to Aix-la-Chapelle.

During his stay at Tristan he heard that a large number of seals were to be had among the islands ', and he seems to have been greatly pleased with the Tristaners and to have formed a project of returning there. When he got home, his brother had just got back from the war and was unemployed; he infected him with his notion ', and the two agreed to join in a venture to Tristan to see what they could (App. § 33) make ' by seal-hunting and barter.

They accordingly sailed for ⁵ St. Helena in August 1871, and on the 6th of November left St. Helena for Tristan in an American whaler bound on a cruise ⁶ in the South Atlantic. The captain of the whaler, who had been often at Tristan d'Acunha, had some doubt of the reception which the young men would get ⁷ if they went as permanent settlers ⁸ there, and he spoke so strongly of the advantages of Inaccessible Island, on account of the greater productiveness of the soil, and of its being the centre ⁹ of the seal-fishing, that they changed their plans and were landed on the west side of Inaccessible Island on the ²7th of November 1871,—early in summer. A quarter of an hour after, the whaler departed, leaving them the only inhabitants of one of the most remote spots on the face of the earth. They do not seem, however, to have been in the least depressed by their isolation.

The same day the younger brother clambered up to the plateau with the help of the tussock grass ¹⁰, in search of goats or pigs, and remained there all night, and on the following day the two set to work to build themselves a hut for shelter. They had reached the end of their voyage by no means unprovided, and the inventory of their belongings ¹¹ is curious.

They had an old whale-boat ¹ which they had bought at St. Helena, with mast, sails, and oars, three spars for a roof, a door, and a glazed window; a wheel-barrow, two spades and a shovel, two pickaxes, a saw, a hammer, two chisels, two or three gimlets, and some nails; a kettle, a frying-pan, two sauce-pans, knives and forks, and some crockery; two blankets each, and empty covers ² which they afterwards filled with seabirds' down. They had a lamp, a bottle of oil, and six dozen boxes of Bryant and May's matches.

For internal use sthey had two hundred pounds of flour, two hundred pounds of rice, one hundred pounds of biscuits, twenty pounds of coffee, ten pounds of tea, thirty pounds of sugar, three pounds of table-salt, a little pepper, eight pounds of tobacco, five bottles of gin, six bottles of Cape wine six bottles of vinegar, and some Epsom salts. A barrel of coarse salt was provided for curing seal-skins, and forty empty casks were intended for oil. Their arms and ammunition consisted of a short English rifle, an old German fowling-piece, two and a half pounds of powder, two hundred bullets, and four sheath-knives some the whaler gave them some seed potatoes, and they had a collection of the ordinary garden seeds.

When they had been four days on the island, they had a visit from a party of men from Tristan, who had come on their annual sealing excursion. They were ten days on Inaccessible, and were very friendly in their intercourse with the new comers.

They told them that the north side of the island was better suited for a settlement, and transported all their goods (S. 236, N. 11) thither in one of their boats. Being familiar with the place, they showed them generally their way about and the different passes by which the plateau might be reached, and they taught them how to build to withstand the violent winds, and how to thatch with tussock-grass. Immediately after they left, the brothers set about building a house and clearing some ground for potatoes and other vegetables. They killed nineteen seals, and prepared the skins, but they were unable to make any quantity of oil. Towards the end of the sealing season their boat got damaged in the surf, and they were obliged to cut it in two for patch up the best half of it, and use it as best they could in smooth weather, close to shore.

They went from time to time to the upper plateau and shot goats and pigs. When they first arrived, they counted a flock of twenty-three goats; three of these were killed during the summer of 1871–1872 by the Tristan people (S. 157, N. 4), and six by themselves; the remaining fourteen remained over the winter of 1872. The flesh of the goats they found extremely delicate. Pigs were much more numerous, but their flesh was not so palatable, from their feeding 6 principally on sea-birds; that of the boars was especially rank. They found the pigs very valuable, however, in yielding an abundant supply of lard 7, which they used for frying their potatoes.

A CURIOUS STORY.

VII.

In the month of April 1872, a singular misfortune befell them. While burning some of the brushwood below to make a clearing, the tussock-grass in the gully 1, by which they had been in the habit 2 of ascending the cliff, caught fire, and as it had been only by its assistance that they had been able to scramble up to the plateau, their only hunting-ground was now inaccessible from the strip of beach on which their hut and garden stood, which was closed in on either side by a headland jutting into the sea. While their half-boat remained seaworthy, they were able to paddle round in fine weather to the west side of the island, where there was an access to the top; but the "sea-cart," as they called it, was washed off the beach and broken up in June, and after that the only way they had of reaching the plateau was by swimming round the headland—a risky feat, even in the finest weather, in these wild regions.

In winter it was found to be impossible to reach the terrace, and as their supply of food was low, they experienced considerable privations during their first winter. Their daily allowance of food was reduced to a quantity just sufficient to maintain life, and in August they were little better than skeletons³.

Help was, however, near. Early in August a multitude of penguins landed 4 hard by their hut,—stupid 5 animals, which will scarcely get out of one's way, and are easily knocked down with a stick 6, and with fleshy breasts, wholesome enough, though with a rather fishy taste; and in the end of August the females began to lay large blue eggs, sufficiently delicate in flavour.

A French barque hove-to off the beach in the middle of September, and in her they shipped their seal-skins, and bartered penguins' eggs with her for biscuits and tobacco. Had the bark arrived a week earlier, the brothers would have left the island; but the eggs had set them up again and they determined to remain a little longer. In October, a schooner, which proved to be "The Themis," a whaler from the Cape of Good Hope, was seen standing towards the island. A gale of wind blew her off for a couple of days, but she returned and landed some men from Tristan, who had crossed to see what the hermits were about Their guests remained a day and a half, and then returned to Tristan.

Early in November, that is, early in the second summer, the brothers thus swam round the eastern headland:—Frederick with their blankets, the rifle, and a spare suit of clothes 7—Gustav with powder, matches, and the kettle in an oil-cask. They mounted by the help of the tussock-grass to the top of the cliff, went over to the west side of the plateau, and there built a small hut, where they remained a month, living on goats' flesh and fresh peak.

On the 10th of December they returned home, mended their thatch, dug 8 the early potatoes, and put the garden in order.

On the 19th of December the Tristan men made their second sealing expedition. They remained nine days on the island, and killed forty seals, one sea-elephant, and eight of the remaining 9 twelve goats. They left some flour in exchange for an oil-cask, and this was the last communication between the brothers and the outer world until the "Challenger" called eight months later.

In January Frederick swam round the point again, and mounted the cliff. He shot four pigs, ran the fat into buckets, and threw the hams down to his brother on the beach below. He saw the four last goats, but spared them to increase their number. In February a boat came to the west side from Tristan, and its crew killed the four goats, and departed without communicating with the Stoltenhoffs 4.

The relations between the Tristan people and the brothers does not appear to have been so cordial latterly as it was at first, and the Stoltenhoffs believe that 5 the intention of their neighbours in killing the goats, and in delaying from time to time to bring them some live stock, which they had promised them, was to force them to leave the island. It may have been so, for the Tristan men had been in the habit of making a yearly sealing expedition to Inaccessible Island, and no doubt the presence of the energetic strangers lessened their chance of success.

In March the brothers once more swam round the point, and ascended the cliff. After staying on the plateau together for a few days, it was settled that Frederick should remain above to procure (S. 58, N. 8) a stock of lard for the winter, Gustav returning to the hut and storing it 6. When a pig was killed, the hide, with the fat in it, was rolled up, secured with thongs of skin, and thrown over the cliff, where Gustav then ran the lard into a cask.

During the second winter, the privations of the brothers do not seem to have been great. They were getting accustomed to their mode of life, and had always sufficient food, such as it was ¹. They were remarkably well educated. Both could speak and read English fluently, and the elder had a good knowledge of French. Their library consisted of eight volumes: Schoedler's Natural History, a German Atlas, Charles O'Malley, Captain Morrell's Voyages, two old volumes of a monthly magazine ², Hamlet and Coriolanus with French notes, and Schiller's poems. These books they came to know almost by heart ³, but they had considerable resources in themselves, in the intelligent interest they took in the ever-changing appearances of nature.

When the "Challenger" arrived, they were preparing for another summer; but the peculiar food, and the want of variety in it, were beginning to tell upon them, for all their original stores were exhausted, with the exception of the Epsom salts, which were untouched, neither of them having had an hour's illness during their sojourn; and they were heartily glad of a passage to the Cape.

Frederick came to the ship before we left for the South in December. He was then comfortably settled in a situation in a merchant's office in Cape Town, and Gustav was on his way home to see his people before resuming the thread of his roving sailor's life.—W. J. J. Spry, "The

HOW THE BANK OF ENGLAND WAS HUMBLED.

I.

Once, many years ago, a bill of exchange for a large amount was drawn by Anselm Rothschild, of Frankfort, on Nathan Rothschild, of London. When the gentleman who held it arrived in London, Nathan was away, and he took the bit of paper to the Bank of England and asked them to discount it.

The managers were very stiff. With haughty assurance they informed the holder that they discounted only their own bills; they said they had nothing to do with the bills of private persons. They did not stop to reflect with whom they had to deal. Those shrewd old gentlemen in charge of the bank of the realm should have known and remembered that that bit of paper bore the signature of a man more powerful than they—more powerful, because independent of a thousand-and-one hampers that rested upon them. "Umph," exclaimed Nathan Rothschild, when the answer of the Bank was repeated to him. "Private persons! I will let these important gentlemen know with what sort of private persons they have to deal."

And then Nathan Rothschild went to work. He had an object in view 2—to humble the Bank of England—and he meant to do it 3. He sent agents to the Continent and through the United Kingdom, and three weeks were spent in gathering up notes of the smaller denominations of the Bank's own issue 4.

One morning, bright and early, Nathan Rothschild presented himself at the Bank, and drew forth from his pocket-book a five-pound note, which he desired to have cashed. Five sovereigns were counted out to him, the officers looking with astonishment upon seeing Baron Rothschild troubling himself personally about so trivial a matter. The baron examined the coins one by one, and, having satisfied himself of their good quality, slipped them into a canvas bag, and then drew out and presented another five-pound note. The same operation was repeated, save that the baron took the trouble to take a small pair of scales from his pocket to weigh one of the pieces, for the law gave him that right.

Section 244.

HOW THE BANK OF ENGLAND WAS HUMBLED.

H.

Two—three—ten—twenty—a hundred—five hundred five-pound notes were presented and cashed. When one pocket-book was emptied, another was brought forth; and when a canvas bag had been filled with gold, it was passed to a servant who was in waiting. And so he went on until the hour arrived for closing the Bank; at the same time he had nine of the employés of his house engaged in the same work. So it resulted that ten men of the house of Rothschild had kept every teller 1 of the Bank busy for seven hours, and exchanged somewhere about £22,000. Not another customer had been able to get his wants attended to. The English like oddity. Let a man do anything original, and they will generally applaud. So the people of the Bank contrived to smile 2 at the eccentricity of Baron Rothschild, and when the time came for closing the Bank, they were not a tenth part so much annoyed as were 3 the customers from abroad 4 whose business had not been attended to. The bank officials smiled that evening, but—

On the following morning, when the bank opened 5, Nathan Rothschild appeared again, accompanied by his nine faithful helpers, this time bringing with him, as far as the street entrance, four heavy two-horse drays, for the purpose of carting away the gold, for to-day the baron had bills of a larger amount. Ah! the officers of the Bank smiled no more, and a trembling seized them when the banker monarch said, with stern simplicity and directness:

"Ah! these gentlemen refuse to take my bills! Be it so. I am resolved that I will not keep one of theirs. It is the House of Rothschild against the Bank of England." The Bank of England opened its eyes very wide. Within a week, the House of Rothschild could be demanding gold which it did not possess. The gentlemen at the head of affairs saw very plainly that in a determined tilt the Bank must go to the wall. There was but one way out of the dilemma, and they took it. Notice was at once publicly given that thenceforth the Bank of England would cash the bills of Rothschild the same as its own.—Tit-Bits.

MORGAN PRUSSIA1.

I.

Morgan, the gay and handsome son of a low Irish farmer, tired of home, went to take the chances of the world, and seek his fortune. By what means he traversed England, or made his way to France, is not told. But he at length crossed France, and, probably without much knowledge or much care whether he was moving to the north or the south pole, found himself in the Prussian territory. This was in the day of Frederick William I. (1713-1740), famous for his tall regiment of guards. He had but one ambition, that of inspecting twice a day a regiment of a thousand grenadiers, not one of whom was less than six feet and a half high. Morgan was an Irish giant, and was instantly seized by the Prussian recruiting sergeants, who forced him to "volunteer" into the tall battalion. This turn of fate was totally out of the Irishman's calculation; and the prospect of carrying a musket till his dying day on the Potsdam parade², after having made up his mind to live by his wits and rove the world, more than once tempted him to think of leaving his musket and honour behind him, and fairly trying his chance for escape. But the attempt was always found impracticable; the frontier was too closely watched, and Morgan still marched up and down the Potsdam parade with a disconsolate heart, when one evening a Turkish recruit was brought in; for the king looked to nothing but the thews and sinews of a man, and the Turk was full seven feet high.

"How much did his majesty give for catching that heathen?" said Morgan to his corporal. "Four hundred dollars," was the answer. Morgan burst out into an exclamation of astonishment at this waste of royal treasure upon a Turk. "Why, they cannot be got for less," replied the corporal. "What a pity my five brothers cannot hear of it!" said Morgan, "I am a dwarf to any one of them, and the sound of half the money would bring them all over immediately." As the discovery of a tall recruit was the well-known road to favoritism, five were worth at least a pair of colours to the corporal 4. The conversation was immediately carried to the sergeant, and from him, through the gradation of officers, to the colonel, who took the first opportunity of mentioning it to the king. The colonel was instantly ordered to question Morgan; but he at once lost all recollection of the subject. "He had no brothers; he had made the regiment his father, and mother, and relations, and there he hoped to live and die." But he was urged still more strongly, and at length confessed that he had brothers, even above the regimental standard, but that nothing on earth could stir them from their spades.

II.

After some time the king inquired for the five recruits, and was indignant when he was told of the impossibility of enlisting them. "Send the fellow himself," he exclaimed, "and let him bring them back." The order was given; but Morgan was broken-hearted "at the idea of so long an absence from the regiment." He applied to the colonel to have the order revoked, or at least given to some one else. But this was out of the question, for the king's word was always irrevocable; and Morgan, with a disconsolate face, prepared to set out upon his mission. But a new difficulty struck him. "How was he to make his brothers come, unless he showed them the recruiting money?" This objection was at last obviated by the advance of a sum equal to about three hundred pounds sterling, as a first instalment for the purchase of his family. Like a loyal grenadier the Irishman was now ready to attempt anything for his colonel or his king, and Morgan began his journey. But, as he was stepping out of the gates of Potsdam, another difficulty occurred; and he returned to tell the colonel that of all people existing the Irish were the most apt to doubt a traveller's story, they being in the habit of a good deal of exercise in that style themselves 1; and that when he should go back to his own country, and tell them of the capital treatment and sure promotion that a soldier met with in the guards, the probability was, that they would laugh in his face. As to the money, "there were some who would not scruple to say that he stole it, or tricked some one out of it. But, undoubtedly, when they saw him walking back only as a common soldier, he was sure they would not believe a syllable, let him say what he would about rising in the service."

The objection was intelligible enough, and the colonel represented it to the king, who, doubly outrageous at the delay, swore a grenadier's oath, ordered Morgan to be made a sub-lieutenant, and, with sword and epaulets, sent him instantly across the Rhine to convince his five brothers of the rapidity of Prussian promotion. Morgan flew to his home in the county of Carlow, delighted the firesides for many a mile round with his having outwitted a king and a whole battalion of grenadiers, laid out his recruiting money on land, and became a man of estate at the expense of the Prussian treasury.

One ceremony remains to be recorded. Once a year, on the anniversary of the day on which he left Potsdam and its giants behind, he climbed a hill within a short distance of his house, turned himself in the direction of Prussia, and, with the most contemptuous gesture which he could contrive, bade good-bye to his majesty. The ruse was long a great source of amusement, and its hero, like other heroes, bore through life the name earned by his exploit—Morgan Prussia.—King George The Fourth.

THE TERRIBLE WINTER OF 1784.

About the middle of the month of April, in the year 1784, three hundred thousand miserable beings, dying from cold and hunger, groaned in Paris alone—in that Paris where, in spite of the boast that scarcely another city contained so many rich people, nothing had been prepared to prevent the poor from perishing of cold and wretchedness.

For the last four months, the same leaden sky had driven the poor from the villages into the town, as it sent the wolves from the woods into the villages.

No more bread. No more wood.

No more bread for those who felt this cold—and no more wood to bake it. All the provisions which had been collected, Paris had devoured in a month. The Provost, short-sighted and incapable, did not know how to procure for Paris, which was under his care, the wood which might have been collected in the neighbourhood. When it froze, he said the frost prevented the horses from bringing it; when it thawed, he pleaded want of horses and conveyances. Louis XVI., ever good and humane, always ready to attend to the physical wants of his people, although he overlooked their social ones, began by contributing a sum of 200,000 francs for horses and carts, and insisting on their immediate use. Still the demand continued greater than the supply.

At first no one was allowed to carry away from the public timber-yard more than a cart-load of wood; then that was limited to half the quantity. Soon long strings of people might be seen waiting outside the timber-yards, as they were afterwards seen at the bakers' shops. The king gave away the whole of his private income in charity. He procured 3,000,000 francs by a grant and applied it to the relief of the sufferers, declaring that every other need must give way before that of cold and famine. The queen, on her part, gave 500 louis from her purse. The convents, the hospitals, and the public buildings were thrown open as places of asylum for the poor, who came in crowds for the sake of the fires that were kept there.

They kept hoping for a thaw, but heaven seemed inflexible. Every evening the same copper-coloured sky disappointed their hopes; and the stars shone bright and clear as funeral torches through the long, cold nights, which hardened again and again the snow that fell during the day. All day long, thousands of workmen, with spades and shovels, cleared away the snow from before the houses, so that on each side of the streets, already too narrow for the traffic, rose a high, thick wall, blocking up the way. Soon these masses of snow and ice became so large that the shops were obscured by them, and they were obliged to allow it to remain where it fell.

Paris could do no more. She gave in, and allowed the winter to do its worst. December, January, February, and March passed thus, although now and then a few days' thaw changed the streets, whose sewers were blocked up, into running streams. Horses were drowned, and carriages destroyed, in the streets, some of which could only be traversed in boats. People went to the markets to see the fisherwomen serving their customers with immense leathern boots on, inside which their trousers were pushed, and with their petticoats tucked round their waists, all laughing, gesticulating, and splashing each other as they stood in the water.

These thaws, however, were but transitory; the frost returned, harder and more obstinate than ever, and recourse was had to sledges, pushed along by skaters, or drawn by roughshod horses along the causeways, which were like polished mirrors. The Seine, frozen many feet deep, had become the place of rendezvous for all idlers, who assembled there to skate or slide, until, warmed by exercise, they ran to the nearest fire, lest the perspiration should freeze upon them. All trembled for the time when, the water communications being stopped, and the roads impassable, provisions could no longer be sent in, and began to fear that Paris would perish from want.

The king, in this extremity, called a council. They decided to implore all bishops, abbés, and monks to leave Paris and retire to their dioceses or convents; and all those magistrates and officials who, preferring the opera to their duties, had crowded to Paris, to return to their homes; for all these people used large quantities of wood in their hotels, and consumed no small amount of food. There were still the country gentlemen, who were also to be entreated to leave. But M. Lenoir, lieutenant of police, observed to the king that, as none of these people were criminals, and could not therefore be compelled to leave Paris in a day, they would probably be so long thinking about it, that the thaw would come before their departure, which would then be more hurtful than useful.

All this care and pity of the king and queen, however, excited the ingenious gratitude of the people, who raised monuments to them, as ephemeral as the feelings which prompted them. Obelisks and pillars of snow and ice, engraved with their names, were to be seen all over Paris.

At the end of March the thaw began, but by fits and starts, constant returns of frost prolonging the miseries of the people. Indeed, in the beginning of April it appeared to set in harder than ever, and the half-thawed streets, frozen again, became so slippery and dangerous, that nothing was seen but broken limbs and accidents of all kinds. The snow prevented the carriages from being heard, and the police had enough to do, through the reckless driving of the aristocracy, to preserve from the wheels those who were spared by cold and hunger.—After Alexander Dumas, "The Queen's Necklace."

Τ.

Soon after the promulgation of Methodism¹ in England it spread with great rapidity over the counties of Devon and Cornwall, and especially among the miners and lower orders. For a long period after its introduction the clergy and higher classes of society in the west of England manifested a dislike to the new doctrines which can scarcely be imagined in these days of modern toleration. It was thought by many young gentlemen good sport to break the windows and nail up the doors of a Methodist chapel². The robbery of a Wesleyan preacher³, as a spree, by two young gentlemen, became the subject of an investigation, and the frolicsome young men had to pay very dearly for their practical joke.

Among the uninstructed local preachers was one known by the name of "The Old Gardener." This old man was no common character—indeed he was quite original, and by far the most popular preacher among the disciples of John Wesley in the vicinity.

He kept a small nursery garden about two miles from the town of St. A——, working hard at his occupation of gardener by day, and praying and preaching to his fellow-sinners, as he called them, in the evening. He lived in the poorest manner, giving away all the surplus of his earnings in charity, distributing Bibles, and promoting to the utmost of his ability the extension of Methodism. His complexion was a sort of dirty, dark, iron grey, and his whole appearance lean and grotesque. Although extremely ignorant, he possessed no small degree of cunning; of this the following incident affords ample evidence:—

"The Old Gardener" was once subjected to a burglary and attempt at robbery. He lived with his wife in a small and somewhat dilapidated cottage, not far from the high road. Three young "squires," who all despised and hated Methodism, having heard that the old man had been recently making a collection to build a Methodist chapel, thought it would be a good frolic to rob him temporarily of the proceeds of this collection. The result of the frolic is best related in the words of one of the actors :-

"We set out," said he, "upon our expedition with blackened faces, upon a dark night, a little before twelve o'clock. We had dined late, and all of us had Dutch as well as Cornish courage; yet I confess, when it came to the point ', I felt myself a coward. I began to reflect that it was but a dastardly frolic to frighten the poor old man and his wife in the dead of night."

"The clock struck twelve. 'Now comes the watching time of the night,' exclaimed Tom."

"'Don't let us frighten the poor couple out of their wits,' said I."

"'No,' said Ryder, 'we will be gentle robbers—gentle as Robin Hood and Little John.'"

"I said that I would rather return than proceed. 'Recollect,' said I,

'the old fellow is an old soldier, as well as a saint, and fears nothing human.'"

- "'Nonsense,' exclaimed Ryder, 'here goes 5.' He pressed the feeble door of the cottage in which the old man resided; it immediately gave way and flew open. We entered and found ourselves in a sort of kitchen. To our great surprise there was a light shining from an inner room. This made us all hesitate."

"'Who is out there at this time of the night?' exclaimed a hoarse voice from within. I knew it to be the unmistakable voice of 'The Old Gardener.'"

"'Give us your money, and no harm shall befal you,' said Tom, 'but we must have your money.""

"'The Lord will be my defence,' rejoined 'The Old Gardener.'
'You shall have no money from me; all in the house is the Lord's—take it if you dare.'"

""We must and will have it,' said we, as we entered the inner room, after taking the precaution of fastening the chamber-door as we entered."

"We soon wished we had suffered it to remain open, as you will see."

"Now, consider us face to face with 'The Old Gardener,' and a pretty sight was presented. Three ruffians (ourselves) with white waggoners' frocks and blackened faces; before us 'The Old Gardener,' sitting on the side of his bed. He wore a red worsted nightcap, a checked shirt, and a flannel jacket; his iron grey face, fringed with a grizzly beard, looking as cool and undismayed as if he had been in the pulpit preaching."

"A table was by the side of the bed, and immediately in front of him, on a large deal table, was an open Bible, close to which we observed, to our horror, a heap of gunpowder, large enough to blow up a castle. A candle was burning on the table, and the old fellow had a steel in one hand and a large flint in the other. We were all three paralysed. The wild, iron-faced, determined look of 'The Old Gardener,' the candle, flint and steel, and the great heap of powder, absolutely froze our blood, and made cowards of us all. The gardener saw the impression he had made."

"'What! do you want to rob and murder?' exclaimed he; 'I think you had better join with me in prayer, miserable sinners that you all are! Repent, and you may be saved. You will soon be in another world."

"Ryder first recovered his speech."

"'Please to hear me, Mr. Gardener. I feel that we have been wrong, and if we may depart we will make reparation, and give you all the money we have in our pockets."

"We laid our purses on the table before him."

"'The Lord has delivered you into my hands. It was so revealed to me in a dream. We shall all soon be in another world. Pray, let us pray.'"

"And down he fell upon his knees, close to the table, with the candle burning, and the ugly flint and steel in his hand. He prayed and prayed. At last he appeared exhausted. He stopped and eyed the purses, and then emptied one of them out on the table. He appeared surprised, and, I thought, gratified at the largeness of its contents."

"We now thought we should have leave to retire; but, to our dismay,

'The Old Gardener' said:

"'Now, we will praise God by singing the rooth Psalm."

"This was agony to us all. After the Psalm, the old man took up the second purse, and while he was examining its contents, Ryder, who was close behind Tom and myself, whispered softly:

"I have unfastened the door, and when you hear me move, make a rush."

"'The Old Gardener,' then, pouring out the contents of the second purse, exclaimed:

"'Why, there is almost enough to build our new house of God. Let me see what the third contains."

"He took up the third purse."

"'Now,' whispered Ryder, 'make a rush.'"

"We did so; and at the same moment heard the old fellow hammering away at his flint and steel. We expected to be instantly blown into fragments. The front door, however, flew open before us: and the next moment we found ourselves in the garden. The night was pitchy dark. We rushed blindly through brambles and prickly shrubs, ran our heads against trees, and then forced our way through a thick hedge. At last, with scratched faces, torn hands, and tattered clothes, we tumbled over a bank into the high road.

III.

"Our horses we soon found, and we galloped to Ryder's residence. Lights were produced, and we sat down. We were black, ragged, and dirty. We looked at each other, and, in spite of our miserable adventure, roared with laughter."

"'We may laugh,' exclaimed Tom, 'but if this adventure becomes known, and we are found out, Cornwall will be too hot for us the next seven years. We have made a pretty night of it. We have lost our money, been obliged to pretend to pray for two long hours, before a great heap of gunpowder, while that grim-faced, ugly, red-capped brute threatened us with an immediate passage into eternity. And our money forsooth must go to build a meeting-house! Bah! It is truly horrible. The old fellow has played the old soldier on us with a vengeance, and we shall be the laughing-stock of the whole country."

"The affair was not yet ended. Reports were spread that three men disguised as black demons, with horns and tails, had entered the cottage of 'The Old Gardener,' who had not only terrified them, but had frightened them out of a good sum of money, which he intended to devote to the building of a new Methodist meeting-house. It was given out that on the following Sunday 'The Old Gardener' intended to preach a sermon, and afterwards solicit subscriptions for the meeting-house, when he would relate the remarkable manner in which he had been providentially assisted with funds for the building. Our mortification was complete. Tom, whose hatred of Methodism was intense, declared he would blow up the meeting-house as soon as it was built. Our curiosity, however, was excited, and we all three determined to hear our adventure of the night related by 'The Old Gardener,' if we could contrive to be present without being suspected."

"Sunday evening arrived. The meeting-house was crammed to suffocation; and with the dull lights then burning in the chapel, we had no difficulty in concealing ourselves. The sermon was short, but the statement of our adventure was related most minutely and circumstantially in the old man's quaint, homely, and humorous phraseology. This evening he seemed to excel himself, and was exultingly humorous."

"'I never,' said he, 'saw black faces pray with greater devotion. I have some doubt, however,' he slily observed, 'if their prayers were quite heavenward. They sometimes turned their faces towards the door, but a lifting of the flint and steel kept them quiet."

"He then added, with a shake of the head and an exulting laugh: But they had not smelt powder like the old soldier they came to rob. No, no; it was a large heap—ay, large enough to frighten old General Clive himself. The candle was lighted, the flint and steel were ready. You may ask, my friends, if I myself was not afraid. No, no, my dear friends,' shouted he, 'this large stock of apparent gunpowder was—it was my whole year's stock of leek (onion) seed!'"

"The whole congregation somewhat irreverently laughed; even the saints almost shouted; many clapped their hands. I was for a moment stupefied by the announcement, but at last could hardly suppress my own laughter."

"We subscribed to the fund to avoid suspicion, and left the meeting. After the sermon we joined each other, but could not speak. We could hardly chuckle 'leek-seed,' and then roared with laughter."

"It was a good joke, though not exactly to our taste. It has, however, more than once served for subsequent amusement."

"The chapel was built with the money collected by the gardener. Time and circumstances now induce me to think that there has been no detriment to morality or religion by the erection of the meeting-house, which was afterwards known as 'The Leek-seed Chapel.'"—St. James's Magazine.

APPENDIX.

A. ESSENTIALS OF CONSTRUCTION.

I. PRINCIPAL AND CO-ORDINATE CLAUSES.

(See § 24.)

§ 1. Infinitives, Participles, and that form of the Infinitive preceded by zu which is called Supine, stand at the end of the clause; as—dressed.

to him.

morrow.

Er mar armlich, aber boch fauber ge=

Sein zurnender Dheim hatte ihn zu fich gernfen.

Seine Tante wird morgen zu und kommen.

Sie hat uns versprochen, morgen zu fommen.

§ 2. In a clause containing both an infinitive and a participle, the infinitive stands last; as—

Der Diener murbe es nicht get han haben, weim er ihn nicht freundlich barum gebeten hatte.

Der Brief muß gut gefchrieben wers ben, benn er enthalt wichtige Mitteilungen. The servant would not have done it, if he had not kindly asked him to do it.

He was poorly, but yet neatly

His angry uncle had bid him come

His aunt will come to us to-morrow. She has promised us to come to-

The letter must be well written, for it contains important communications.

§ 3. In a clause containing two infinitives, the one governing the other stands last; as—

Er mag mit einem solchen Menschen nichts zu thun haben. He does not like to have anything to do with such a man.

§ 4. Separable prefixes of compound verbs are placed at the end of the clause when the verb is used in a simple tense; as—

Der König ging jeben Morgen um elf Uhr aus und kam gegen zwölf Uhr zurück. The king went out every morning at eleven o'clock and returned towards twelve o'clock.

§ 5. In a clause containing two objects, both expressed by nouns, that of the person stands before that of the thing; as—

Um nächsten Abend gab er bem Manne bas Gelb zurnich.

The next evening he returned the money to the man.

§ 6. When both objects represent persons, the accusative generally stands first; as—

Man hat den Berbrecher dem Richter They have delivered the criminal to the judge.

§ 7. In clauses containing two objects, one being a personal pronoun and the other a noun, the pronoun stands first; as—

Der fremde herr gab mir einige Apfel The stranger gave me some apples und Birnen. and pears.

§ 8. When both objects are personal pronouns, the accusative generally stands first; as—

Sie hat es mir gesagt.

Man hat sie ihm genommen. They have taken her away from him.

§ 9. A. Adverbial expressions of time generally stand before the object (except it is a pronoun) and always before adverbial expressions of manner and place; as—

Wir haben gestern brei Briefe erhalten. Er ist hente plöglich nach London abgereist.

But we must say-

Wir haben Sie heute mit Ungeduld erwartet. (Sie pers. pron.)

Yesterday we received three letters. He has suddenly left for London today.

She has said it to me.

We have been expecting you to-day with impatience.

B. Adverbial expressions of manner and place generally stand before the Infinitive or Participle when the verb is in a compound tense, but take the last place in the clause when the verb is in a simple tense; as—

Die Schüler haben ihre Aufgaben fehr gut gemacht.

Sie machen ihre Aufgaben immer fehr

Sind Sie gestern im Theater gewesen? Ich* gebe nie ins Theater.

The pupils have done their lessons very well.

They do their lessons always very well.

Were you at the theatre yesterday? I* never go to the theatre.

§ 10. The negation with t stands after the accusative; as-

Er schreibt ben Brief nicht, fonbern fein Bruber.

He is not writing the letter, but his brother is.

Er hat ben Brief nicht gefchrieben.

He has not written the letter.

§ 11. In questions nicht sometimes stands before the accusative; as-Have you not received my letter? Have you not received my letter?

§ 12. In general the negation uidht stands before that part of the sentence which it affects; as—3ch bin nicht frank gewesen.

Wir sprechen nicht von ihm, fondern von seinem Vetter.

Die Natur hatte sie nicht mit Schonheit ausgestattet. I have not been ill.

We do not speak of him, but of his cousin.

Nature had not endowed her with beauty.

^{*} When the subject, which may be preceded by its attributes, occupies the first place in a principal clause, either the copula or the verb must follow immediately.

II. INVERTED CONSTRUCTION.

§ 13. The ordinary way of arranging the words is to place the subject and its adjuncts first, and the predicate with its adjuncts after; as-

Der gute Bater (subj.) ift heute Morgen mit feinen brei Tochtern nach London abgereist (predicate with adjuncts).

The good father has left this morning for London with his three daughters.

But this construction is sometimes inverted, so as to place the predicate, or a part of the predicate, before the subject. This is the case:

(a) In interrogative clauses; as—

Rommt ber Mann heute? Ift ber Bater nach London abgereift? Sat er fein Gelb bei fich?

Does the man come to-day? Has the father left for London? Has he no money about him?

(b) In imperative clauses; as— Senden Sie biefen Brief gur Boft!

Send this letter to the post-office!

(c) In exclamatory clauses; as-Satte er auf mich gehört!

Would he had listened to me!

(d) In subordinate clauses beginning with an adverbial conjunction. (See § 124 of Lange's German Grammar.)

§ 14. The ordinary way of arranging the words is often departed from for the sake of emphasizing a part of the predicate. In this case the part to be emphasized is placed at the beginning of the sentence, and the construction must be inverted, that is to say the subject must be placed after the verb; as-

Die letten Borte hatte ber junge Menich mit gehobener Stimme gefprochen.

Seute fann er nicht abreifen, fondern

Mit bem zwölf Uhr Buge fann er nicht mehr fahren, benn es ift zu frat.

morgen.

The last words the young man had spoken with an elevated tone of voice.

He cannot depart to-day, but tomorrow.

He cannot go by the twelve o'clock train, for it is too late.

These sentences would read in the ordinary construction: Der junge Mensch hatte die letten Borte mit gehobener Stimme gesprochen. Er fann nicht heute abreifen, foubern morgen. Er fann nicht mehr mit bem gwolf Uhr Buge fahren, benn es ift gu fpat. The words "Die letten Borte," "hente," "mit bem zwolf ilhr Inge," have been made emphatic by being placed at the beginning of the sentence, which required the verb and the subject to interchange places.

§ 15. Sometimes a subordinate clause (that is to say a clause dependent on another clause, without which it would not be understood) is made emphatic by being placed before the principal clause. Then also the subject of the principal clause must be placed after the verb; as-

Als er in die Stube fam, fand er mich am Schreibtische.

When he came into the room, he found me at the desk.

In this example the principal clause is ner fand mich am Schreibtische," and the subordinate clause is contained in the words "Als er in die Stube fam;" this latter clause has been emphasized by being placed before the principal clause, but it required the principal clause to be inverted, so as to place the subject (er) after the verb (fant).

Here are some more examples of the same class:

Weil er ein guter Junge ift, will ich ihm feine Bitte gewähren.

Nachbem er gegeffen und getrunten hatte, ging er nach Saufe.

Because he is a good fellow, I will grant his request.

After having eaten and drunk, he went home.

III. SUBORDINATE CLAUSES.

(See § 24.)

§ 16. In subordinate clauses beginning with a relative pronoun, a relative conjunction, or a subordinative conjunction, the verb stands at the end; as-They showed me a book which con-Man zeigte mir ein Buch, bas viele icone Bilber enthielt.

Wir waren im Zimmer, als er eintrat.

tained many beautiful pictures. We were in the room when he entered.

§ 17. When the verb is in a compound tense, the auxiliary verb stands last: as—

Nachdem fie ihn begrüßt hatte, fam fie fchuell auf mich zu.

After she had welcomed him, she approached me quickly.

§ 18. When there are two verbs, one of which is a verb of mood, the verb of mood stands last; as-

Er fagte, bag er nicht fommen fonne. He said that he could not come.

§ 19. When there are two verbs, the one being an infinitive, and the other an inflected verb, the inflected verb stands last; as-

Der Cohn ftarb gerade ju ber Stunde, in welcher fein Bater ihn wieber= zusehen hoffte.

The son died the very hour his father hoped to see him again.

§ 20. When there are two infinitives and an auxiliary verb, the auxiliary verb has the first place, whilst the governing infinitive stands last; as-

Er überlegte, wie er es werbe vermeiben fönnen is the governing verb.)

He considered how he might be able to avoid it.

Er fagte, bag er es nicht habe thun mögen. (mögen is the governing verb.)

He said that he did not like to do it.

§ 21. Sometimes the conjunction, which generally connects the subordinate clause with the principal clause, is omitted and understood. In this case the construction is like that of a principal clause; as-

(Er fürchtete, baß ich mich erfälten fönne.)

Er fürchtete, ich fonne mich erfalten. He was afraid I might catch cold.

§ 22. Sometimes the auxiliary verb is omitted and understood; as—

Dag er mir genommen (wurde), ift That he was taken from me is my mein größtes Leib. greatest sorrow.

§ 23. In subordinate clauses the prefixes of separable compound verbs are not separated from the verb; as-

Er war fo beschäftigt, daß er in vierzehn Tagen nicht ausging.

He was so busy that he did not go out for a fortnight.

§ 24. A. The co-ordinative conjunctions—aber, affein, bean, namlid, over, fendern, fewehl—als, and und—serve to connect two or more independent statements with each other, which have either one common subject or predicate, or have each a subject and predicate of their own (co-ordinate clauses). Co-ordinative conjunctions do not affect the regular order of construction explained in §§ 1-12, and generally stand at the beginning of the co-ordinate clauses which they introduce; but aber and namlid are often placed after the verb, and sometimes even stand in the middle of the clause; as—

Die Frau war bem Manue fruh gestorben; biefer ließ bem hinterlaffenen Kinte aber jebe mögliche Sorafalt angebeihen.

A subordinate clause, i.e. a clause dependent on another clause, without which it would not be understood, is joined to a principal clause by means of a relative pronoun, or a conjunction, which latter may be either a relative, a subordinative, or an adverbial conjunction. (See § 124 of Lange's German Grammar.) The effect produced upon the construction by relative pronouns, relative conjunctions, and subordinative conjunctions has been explained in §§ 16–23.

B. Adverbial conjunctions, like all other adverbial expressions commencing a clause, require the verb to stand before the subject, as has been pointed out in § 124 of Lange's German Grammar.

B. THE INDICATIVE MOOD.

§ 25. The Indicative Mood is the Mood of Actuality, whilst the Subjunctive Mood is the Mood of Possibility. The nature of the Indicative may be said to be objective, because it is used to express positive facts. The nature of the Subjunctive may be said to be subjective, because it represents the statement made as a mere subjective supposition, or as resting on the mere hearsay evidence of other persons.

The Indicative Mood denotes Positiveness and Certainty.

Conjunctions never determine the mood in which a verb is to be used. The mood is always determined by the nature of the statement we wish to make. So one and the same verb may be followed, in the dependent clause, either by the Indicative or the Subjunctive Mood.

EXAMPLES.

Der Gefangene ist tot; er ist heute Morgen gestorben. (Positive statement.)

Ich bin überzengt, daß er es gesagt hat. (Certainty.)

Der Mensch ift fterblich. (A fact.)

Ich habe gehört, daß er zum Minister

The prisoner is dead; he died this morning.

I am convinced that he has said it.

Man is mortal.

I have heard that he has been appointed a minister, (and I do not doubt it).

(Here the Indicative Mood is used, because I wish to imply that I have no doubt about the accuracy of the statement.)

Ich habe gehört, daß er zum Minister ernannt sei (see § 30).

I have heard that he has been appointed a minister, (but I rather doubt it).

(Here the Subjunctive Mood is used because I wish to express a doubt about the accuracy of the statement, which is expressed in English by the words 'but I rather doubt it.')

C. THE SUBJUNCTIVE (OR CONJUNCTIVE) MOOD.

(See § 25.)

 \S 26. Since, in the best modern works of English Literature, we frequently find the Indicative employed instead of the Subjunctive in clauses of uncertainty and supposition, and since, with the exception of the verb to be, it is evidently the tendency of the English language to reject the distinction of the Subjunctive Mood, the student will encounter no small difficulty in learning the right use of the German Subjunctive, which is most extensively used, and gives often great power, conciseness, and elegance to the mode of speaking.

The Subjunctive Mood is used both in principal and subordinate clauses, and denotes Uncertainty and Supposition.

EXAMPLES.

Man fagt er sei gestorben (see § 29). (Uncertainty.)

People say (i.e. it is rumoured) he is dead.

Plato glaubte, daß nur ein Gott sei. (Supposition.)

Plato thought that there was only one God, (but that it was a matter of doubt).

§ 27. The Subjunctive expresses Command, Wish, and Concession.

EXAMPLES.

Er nehme seine Beite, wie's Brauch ist! (Schiller.) (Command.) Gott sei mit dir! (Wish.) Er gehe, wohin er Lust hat. (Concession.)

Let him take his distance as it is customary!
God be with you!

He may go wherever he pleases.

§ 28. The Subjunctive is used in Indirect Speech (oratio obliqua), i.e. when words which have been actually spoken are quoted not as they were spoken, but in substance only; it stands especially after the verbs fagen, to say; erzählen, to relate; melben, to report; berichten, to relate, to report; hören, to hear; as—

Er sagte ihm, er sei ein Berschwender. Sie behauptete, fie habe ben Brief nicht erhalten.

He told him he was a spendthrift. She asserted that she had not got the letter.

Sein Freund meldete, daß er nicht fommen fönne, mich zu besuchen.

His friend reported that he could not come to see me.

§ 29. The Subjunctive is used when the statement made in the subordinate clause is intended to be represented not as a fact, but as a mere idea, as a mere conception of the person speaking. We find it, therefore, especially after verbs denoting a request, a wish, a hope, an apprehension, a permission, an advice, and a command; as—meinen, to mean.

glauben, to believe.
vermuten, to presume.
aweifeln, to doubt.
fcheinen, to seem.
hoffen, to hope.
fürchten, to fear.

wellen, to be willing. bitten, to ask. befehlen, to command. verlangen, to demand. ermahnen, to admonish. raten, to advise. bestehen, to insist upon,

And others of a like meaning.

EXAMPLES.

Laffen Sie uns hoffen, daß unfer Streben von Erfolg fein werde.

Ich bat ihn, daß er mir helfen moge.

Ich fürchtete, daß er ein Bein ges brochen habe.

Wir bitten, daß der Gefangene frei gelassen werde.

Er zweifelt daran, daß man ihn für unschuldig erklären werde.

Wir werden stets verlangen, daß man uns unsere Rechte gewähre.

3ch rate dir, daß du fleißiger wers de ft.

Ich bestehe daranf, daß sich der Lord entferne. (Schiller.)

Let us hope that our endeavours may be successful.

I asked him to help me.

I was afraid that he had broken a leg.

We request that the prisoner be released.

He doubts if he will be declared innocent.

We shall always demand that our rights be given to us.

I advise you to become more industrious.

I insist upon the Lord's retiring.

§ 30. With regard to the Tense in which the Subjunctive ought to stand in subordinate clauses of the character mentioned above, the general rule is, that—

We use the same tense of the Subjunctive Mood which, in direct speech, or in a principal clause, would be used in the Indicative Mood, except that the Perfect of the Subjunctive is used instead of the Imperfect of the Indicative, and that the Pluperfect of the Indicative is changed into the Perfect of the Subjunctive, with the help of one of the conjunctions chc, bever, and uachbem.

The following table will make this clear:-

Direct Speech.

Er sagte: "Ich lese." (Present.)

Er sagte: "Ich habe gelesen." (Perfect.)

Er fagte: "Ich werde lesen." (First Future.)

Er fagte: "Ich werde gelesen haben (Second Future), wenn mein Freund mich abholen wird." (First Future.)

But-

Er fagte: "Ich las, als sein Freund schrieb." (Imperfect.)

Er fagte: "Ich hatte gelesen (Plupersect), als mein Freund schrieb." (Impersect.)

Indirect Speech.

Er sagte, er lese. (Present Subj.)

Er sagte, er habe gelesen. (Perfect Subj.)

Er sagte, er werde lesen. (First Future Subjunctive.)

Er sagte, er werde gelesen haben (Second Future Subj.), wenn sein Freund ihn abholen werde (First Future Subjunctive).

Er fagte, er habe gelesen, als sein Freund geschrieben habe. (Pertect Subjunctive.)

Er sagte, er habe gelesen (Persect Subjunctive), che sein Fremo geschrieben habe. (Persect Subjunctive.)

It will be seen, therefore, that the verb in the subordinate clause stands either in the Present, in the Perfect, or in the Future.

EXAMPLES.

Der Diener antwortete, er sei nicht imstande die Arbeit zu thun, benn er sei zu schwach. (Present Subj.)

Er erzählte mir, er habe ein Unglück gehabt. (Perfect Subj.)

Sie behauptete, daß sie nie in ihrem Leben frank gewesen fei. (Perfect Subj.)

Er fagte, daß er fich um eine Stelle bes werben werbe. (First Future.)

The servant answered that he was unable to do the work, for he was too weak.

He told me he had met with a misfortune.

She affirmed that she had never been ill in all her life.

He said that he was going to apply for a situation.

§ 31. The Imperfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive, however, must be used instead of the Present and Perfect Subjunctive, and the Conditional instead of the Future Subjunctive, when any ambiguity might arise as to the mood employed, that is to say in cases where the form of the Present, of the Perfect, or of the Future is identical both in the Indicative and the Subjunctive Mood. For example, in the sentence—

"Sie fagte mir, ihre Töchter gingen niemals auf Balle;"

'She said to me that her daughters never went to balls;'

the verb gingen stands in the Imperfect Subjunctive and not in the Present, because the third person plural of the Present Indicative and the corresponding person of the Present Subjunctive are identical in the conjugation of this verb. Both are "fie gehen," the verb, therefore, must be put in the Imperfect Subjunctive to show clearly the mood employed.

§ 32. The Subjunctive is employed in adverbial clauses of purpose and of manner, when the subordinate clause generally begins with the conjunctions ba β , auf ba β , bamit, and alf ob; as—

Du follst beinen Bater und beine Mutter ehren, auf bag bir's wohlgehe und bu lange lebest auf Erbeu.

Ift es nicht, als ob dies Bolf mich zum Gott mache? (Schiller.)

Thou shalt honour thy father and thy mother, that thou mayest prosper and thy days be long on earth.

Does it not seem as if the people meant to make a God of me?

§ 33. The Imperfect Subjunctive and the Pluperfect Subjunctive are used to express something possible, or something capable of being done, also to denote a mere supposition on the part of the speaker, or for the purpose of stating an opinion with caution or modesty; as—

Es könnte sein, daß er nicht zu Hause ware.

Ich hätte wohl Lust, ihm einen Besuch zu machen.

3ch wüßte wohl, was zu thun ware. Es ware vielleicht beffer, bas Unternehmen aufzugeben. Literally: It might be possible that he were not at home, i.e. He may possibly not be at home.

I should like indeed to pay him a visit.

I fancy I know what ought to be done. Perhaps it would be better to give up the undertaking.

§ 34. To express a wish we use the Present Subjunctive, when we believe in the fulfilment of the wish, but the Imperfect Subjunctive, when we want to indicate that the fulfilment of the wish is unlikely, and even impossible; as—

Gott fei mit bir! Doge er balb gesund werben! Lang lebe ber König! Gott helfe mir! (Luther.) God be with you!
May he soon recover his health!
Long live the king!
May God help me!

But with the Imperfect Subjunctive:

Möchte er bald gefund werden! Wenn er doch noch lebte! Wöchte er bald kommen! Would he might soon recover his health! I would he were still alive! Would he might soon come!

§ 35. It must always be remembered that both moods (the Indicative and the Subjunctive) may stand in Principal Clauses as well as in Subordinate Clauses, since their use depends alone on the nature of the statement are axish to make (see § 25). Nor has the notion connected with the verb standing in the principal clause an absolute influence on the mood to be used in the subordinate clause. The Indicative stands in subordinate clauses not merely after verbs expressing Certainty, but also after such as denote Belief, Supposition, and Doubt, when the statement contained in the subordinate clause is represented objectively, i.e. as being based upon a fact, or as being, in the speaker's opinion, not open to any doubt. So we say—

Ich glaube, daß er in der Schlacht geblieben ist (not sei).

Ich weiß nicht, ob er lebt, oder ob er tot ift.

Ich zweiste, daß der Kranke genesen wird. Ich hosse, daß er sich wohl befindet. I believe that he was killed in battle.

I do not know whether he is alive, or whether he is dead.

I doubt if the patient will recover.

I hope that he is well.

But when the statement contained in the subordinate clause is represented subjectively, i.e. as being based upon a mere idea or belief, the correctness of which is still open to doubt, the Subjunctive must be used; as—

Man glaubt, man fagt, etc., er fei in ber Schlacht geblieben.

Er fürchtet, daß man ihn verraten habe.

People believe, people say, etc., that he was killed in battle, (but it is still doubtful).

He is afraid that they have betrayed him, (yet he does not know).

D. THE CONDITIONAL MOOD.

§ 36. The Conditional is the mood for representing a state or an event as dependent on another, which other, however, is not based upon a real fact, but is a mere hypothesis or supposition. As such we use not only the First and Second Conditional (id) wurve, etc.), as given in the tables of verbs, but also the Imperfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive. The latter two, in fact, may be called the simple forms of the Conditional Mood, and the former (id) wurve, etc.) the compound forms. Every true conditional statement consists of two clauses: (a) the hypothetical clause, which contains the supposition, (b) the conditioning clause, which contains the inference drawn from that supposition; as—

If I had money (hypothetical clause), I should like to travel (conditioning clause).

The Imperfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive may be used in both clauses, but the First and Second Conditional (ich wurde, etc.—see the tables of verbs) can only be used in conditioning clauses.

The conditioning clause is often introduced by "fo."

EXAMPLES.

Benn ich Gelb hatte, ginge ich gern auf Reisen (or wurde ich gern auf Neisen gehen).

If I had money, I should like to travel.

Wenn es hente schönes Wetter gewefen ware, fo wurden wir ausges gangen fein.

Diefer Mann konnte gludlicher fein, wenn er bas Spiel nicht zu fehr liebte.

Er wurde gefund fein (or er mare gefund), wenn er mäßiger lebte.

If the weather had been fine to-day, we should have gone out.

This man might be happier, if he were not too fond of gambling.

He would be healthy, if he were more temperate.

§ 37. The Conditional is sometimes used elliptically; as-

Ja, ich wurde gefommen fein!

Unter ben Umftanben hatte ich es gewiß gethan.

Bare ich reich, wurde ich Sie fofort bezahlen.

Yes, I should have come! (i.e. if I had been able to do so, understood).

I am sure, under the circumstances I should have done it (i.e. if I had been placed in the same situation).

Were I rich, I should pay you directly.

216 SYNOPSIS OF THE CHANGES IN THE GERMAN SPELLING.

Write:

- (instead of i) in the verbal termination ic'ren, as in: studic'ren (to study); spagie'ren (to go for a walk); marschie'ren (to march); probie'ren (to try, to test); hantie'ren (to handle, to manage), etc.—and in their derivatives, as in: die Hantie'ren (management, business, profession), etc.; also in: gieb (give), and derivatives.
- on (pronounced as in French, instead of u) in words coming from the French, as bie Fourage (forage); ter Fourier (quarter master); ber Fouruier (veneer), etc.

Only one Vowel (instead of two)- in: bar (bare, destitute of; [of money]: in cash); die Barschaft (ready money, cash in band); das Maß (measure); das Schaf (sheep); die Schar (troop, berd); der Star (starling; [in medicine]: cataract); die Bage (scales); die Bare (goods); der Her (bearth); die Herd, flock); das Kannel (camel); das Los (lot, fate); lesen (to cast lots); die Losinug (the casting or drawing of lots); der Schoß (lap, middle; [of dress]: skirt, or tail); etc.

B. Konfonanten. (Consonants.)

- b (instead of bt) in: ber Tob (death); toblique (sick unto death); tobuive (tired to death); bie Tobijude (deadly or mortal sin); toblique (deadly, mortal, fatal), etc.—Comp. letter t (instead of bt).
- f (instead of ph) in: Abolf (Adolphus); der Glefaut (elephant); der Fasan (pheasant); Mubolf (Ralph); Westfalen (Westphalia), etc.—But: der Epheu (ivy) from the old German word Ebheu.
- h l. h remains as a sign of lengthening a syllable:-
 - (a) In syllables beginning with a t-sound and containing a long vowel, but not a diphthong or a double vowel, as in: bie That (deed); bie Thain (tear); ber Thron (throne); ber Thor (fool); bas Thor (gate); thun (to do); that (did); gethan (done), etc. [Comp. h, 2 (a).]
 - (b) before 1, m, n, and r, as in: assimished (gradually); befehlen (to command); nehmen (to take); wohnen (to live, to reside); sehren (to teach), etc. Exceptions: die Feme (an old secret criminal court in Westphalia) and derivatives, as: der Femrichter (a judge of that court), and derivatives.
 - (e) in: die Fehde (feud, quarrel); die Mahd (mouving), from mähen (to mouv); der Draht (wire) from drehen (to turn); die Naht (seam), from nähen (to seav), and other words derived from verbs containing an aspirated h.
 - (d) in a few proper names, as in: Bertha, Guuther, Martha, Mathilbe, Theobald, Theobar, etc.
 - (e) in many nouns originally Greek, as: die Kathedra's (cathedral); das Thema (theme); die Theologie'; die Theorie'; das Thermome'ter; der Va'uther, etc.
 - 2. h is not retained after t:-
 - (a) in syllables beginning with a t-sound and containing a diphthong or a double vowel, as in: ber Tan (dew); bas Tan (rope); ber

Write:

- Teer (tar); teeren (to tar); ber or das Teil (part, or share); teuer (dear); das Tier (animal); verteidigen (to defend), etc., and derivatives.—

 Exception: ber Thee (tea), and derivatives.
- (b) in the suffixes tum and tum (formerly thum and thum), as in: das Eigentum (property); das Königtum (kingdom); das Ungetum (monster), etc.
- (c) at the end of syllables, and at the beginning of syllables before a short vowel, as in:—bie Armut (poverty); ber Atem (breath); atmen (to breathe); bie Blüte (blossom); bie Flut (flood); bas Geråt (tools); bie Glut (glow); ber Kot (dirt); bas Lot (a weight of half an ounce, now obsolete); ber Met (mead); bie Miete (rent; a corn or hay-stack; mite); ber Mut (courage); bie Not (need); nötigen (to urge; to invite; to compel); ber or bie Pate (god-father or god-mother); ber Mut (advice); raten (to advise; to guess); bas Måtsel (riddle); rot (red); bie Nöte (redness); bie Mute (rod); ber Turun (tower); ber Wert (value); wert (worth, dear); ber Wirt (host, landlord); bie Wut (rage), and derivatives, as: ratios (without advice or means: helpless); wertvoll (valuable, precious); bas Wirtshans (inn), etc.

Mark well: hurra! (burra!).

- 1. (instead of c) in many words originally Greek, as in: bie Afabemie', (academy); pra'ftisch (practical); die Arithmeti'f (arithmetic); die Physi'f (natural philosophy), etc.—But: der Chara'fter; die Melancholie'.
- 2. (instead of c and qu) in many words originally Latin or French, but which have become quite germanised, and are now looked upon as altogether German words, as: ber Abvofa't (lawyer); bas Bosfe'tt (thicket) from the French: le bosquet; bas Lofa'l (locality); bas Bu'blifum (public); vafa'nt (vacant); ber Bulfa'u (volcano), etc.—More especially in words terminating in . . . Fel, as in: ber Arti'fel; bie Parti'fel; bie Flo'éfel (flourish), pl. die Flo'éfelu (fine words, frequently made use of with a deceptive purpose).
- 3. (instead of c) in words with the prefixes $\Re o =$, $\Re o I =$, $\Re o m =$, $\Re o m =$, $\Re o r =$, and also in syllables containing a f-sound followed by f (... f t), as in: die Ropie' (copy); die Rolonie' (colony); der Rommanda'ut (commander); der Ro'nftabler (constable); das Rouze'rt (concert); die Roprespondence), etc.; die Didasti'f (didactics); das Edi'st (edict), etc.—But: das Di'ctum, because not germanised, etc.—

Mark well: ber Ruffee' (coffee), but: bus Cufé (a fine restaurant where mostly coffee is served).

NOTE. In foreign words which have preserved a foreign pronunciation, or certain foreign forms of spelling or inflection, do not use f, but c, as in: die Campague (campaign); der Commi's (clerk); das Flaco'n (smelling-bottle); der Redacten'r (editor); die Abjectiva (adjectives), etc.

Doubtful Orthography. We find: Ronze'rt and Conce'rt, n.; Ku'rzer (prison in schools and universities) and Ca'reer, m.; Komitee' and Comite', n.; Kompanie' and Compagnie', f.; conze'ntrifch (concentric) and conce'utrifch; Kouzessio'in and Concession, f.; Konzi'l (council) and Conci'l, n.; flassisty and classify and classificie'ren; Ku'rsus (course of study) and Cu'rsus, m.; forre'tt and corre'ct; Konjunstio'u and Conjunctio'n, etc., etc.

Write:

From these examples it will be seen that the mode of spelling is fluctuating between f and f, and f and f, in many words which originally contained the letter f. The first way is to be preferred, and strongly recommended, in all the words given above, and many others in common use that contain a f or a f-sound and are quite germanised in spelling and inflection. (Comp. C. 3.)

Use also f instead of c in words of Greek origin which have preserved the f-sound, as:—Auefbo'te, fatho'(ist), Romô'die, Diale'ft, etc.—[Comp. B, letter f, 1.]—And write c and cq, as before, in: U'cce'nt, U'ccusati'v, U'cquissitio'n, etc.—

- :nis (instead of niß) as a suffix of nouns, as in: das Errignis (event); das Begrābnis (burial); das Berhāltnis (relation); das Bermā'chtnis (bequest), etc.—
 - The prefix miß . . ., however, remains unchanged, as in: bas Mi'gverständnis (misunderstanding), pl. die Mi'gverständuisse.
 - (instead of §) in beshalb (therefore); beswegen (therefore, for this reason); indes (meanwhile, whilst; however); unterdes (meanwhile, whilst); weshalb (why); weswegen (why), etc.—
 - ef (instead of ff) in: dasfelbe (the same); desfelben (of the same); diesfeits (on this side), etc.
- instead of ft) in: Dienstag (Tuesday); Geburtstag (birtbday); Frühlingstag (spring-day), and other compound nouns in which s occurs as a sign of the Genitive and is followed by a t.
- between two vowels, the first one of which is short, as in [affer (to let, to leave); bie Taffe (cup); trotz beserved in spite of that); wesser (whose), etc.—
- 1. between two vowels, the first one of which is long, as in: bū'fen (to atone for); schiefen (to shoot), etc.
 - 2. before t, and at the end of words, as in: er läßt (be leaves); ihr laßt (you leave); gehüßt (atoned for); laß (let); ber Kuß (kiss), etc.—
- t (instead of bt) in: ber Tote (a dead man or person); tot (dead); toten (to kill); ber Totschlag (manslaughter); ber Totengraber (gravedigger), etc.—Comp. letter b (instead of bt.)
- t (instead of b) in: bas Brot (bread).
- t (and never 3) in the accented and original Latin combinations:—tia', tie', tio', as in martia'list, Batie'nt, m., Natio'n, f., Traditio'n, f., Motio'n, etc.

But write: Grazie, Ingredie'nzien, etc., e being unaccented.

- 3. (instead of t3) after a long vowel, as in: bie Bre'sel (biscuit in the shape of a twisted ring, eracknel); bu'sen (to call a person thou), etc.
 - 2. (instead of & and Sc) in: ber Bar (czar); bas Bepter (sceptre), etc.
 - 3. (instead of ce) regularly at the end of foreign words with German pronunciation and terminating in French in ce, and in Latin in tia, tius, tium, cius, cium, as in: bas Benefi's, die Justi's, das Hospi's, die Mili's, die Noti's; die Differe'nz, die Sente'nz, die Basa'nz; die Fina'nzen, die Novi'ze, die Allia'nz, bie Dista'nz, etc.—(But with foreign pronunciation: Alliance, Distance, etc.)

4. also in words quite germanised, as: ber Bezi'rs (district, circuit); bie La'nze (lance); bie Polizei' (police); ber Polizi's (policeman); bas Terzero' (pocket-pistol); bas Terze'tt (trio), etc.—But write: Ca'sar, bie Casur' (cesure, cesura); bie Ce'ber, bie Celebrita't, bie Censur' (censorship), censie'ren (to censure, to review), ber Ce'ntime'ter, bie Cereals), bas Cosiba't, ber Ci'rsumse'r, bas Lyce'um, etc.

5. (instead of c) in verbs terminating in ... ie'ren, as: fabrizie'ren (to manufacture); mufizie'ren (to make music); publizie'ren (to publish), etc.

Note. In many words which originally contained the letter c, the mode of spelling is unsettled and fluctuating between c and z, as in: Medizi'n and Medici'n, f.; das Mezent and Mecent, n. (prescription, recipe); Prinzi'n and Princi'n, n. (principle); Proze'nt and Proce'nt, n. (per cent.); Proze's and Proce's, m., etc.—[Read carefully B, Note to letter f, also letter t of B, and General Observations on the Spelling of Foreign Words, where additional examples are given.]

C. Allgemeine Bemerkungen über die Schreibung der Fremdwörter.

(General Observations on the Spelling of Foreign Words.)

1. With foreign words containing sounds and combinations of sounds not originally German, THE GENERAL PRINCIPLE regarding their orthography is that, their foreign pronunciation being preserved, also the foreign garb of their orthography is retained.

So, for example, we use:-

- oi (sounded as in French) in: die Memoi'ren (memoirs); die Zoile'tte (toilet).
- g and j (sounded as in French) in: die Baga'ge (luggage); das Logi's (lodgings); der Genda'rm (a police-officer on horseback); das Genie' (genius; a man of great talent); der Ingenieu'r (engineer); das Journa'l (journal, magazine); raugie'ren (to arrange), etc.—But with German pronunciation: der Genera'l (general); genia'l (highly gifted); die Genialitä't (geniality, originality), etc.—
- gu (sounded as in French) in: ber Champa'guer (champaign); die Lorque'tte (lorgnette, eye-glass), etc.
- II (sounded like English I followed by y) in: bas Bataillo'n (battalion); bas Bi'llarb (billiards); bas Bille't (ticket; note); ber Postillo'n (postillion), etc.
- n (sounded as in French, but not quite so nasal) in: die Mud'nce (gradation of colours); das Bussi'n (reservoir); der Reseail (refrain); der Russ'n (ray of light; [of a fortification]: radius); das Biolonce'll (violoncello), etc.
- 2. Many foreign words, on the other hand, composed of German sounds, which might be indicated by German letters, have as yet preserved their original orthography. So we find:—

- ai (for the sound of a) in: die Chai'se (chaise), from the French;
- an and can (for the sound of o) in: die Sau'ce (sauce); das Bureau (office), from the French;
- ch (for the sound of fd) in: die Chausse' (turnpike-road), from the French;
- ch) (for the Greek f-sound) in: ber or bas Chor (choir or chorus), from the Greek:
- ph (for the sound of f) in: ber Philosopher), from the Greek;
- th (for the sound of t) in: ber Throu (throne), from the Greek; and
- v (for the German w-sound) in: vivle'tt (violet-blue, adj.), from the French.
- 3. Again we find foreign words which, being in common use and composed of German sounds, have become entirely germanised, and wear a German garb; as: bie Tru'ppe (troop, company), French: la troupe; bie Gru'ppe (group), French: la groupe; ber Diéfu'ré (discourse), French: le discours; ber Sefretá'r (secretary), French: le secrétaire.

It follows from the three preceding paragraphs:—that it is impossible to reduce the spelling of foreign words to any fixed principles, and that there exists at present much uncertainty and inconsistency respecting the spelling of such words. [Comp. B, Consonants, Note to letter £, also B, letter ½, where additional examples are given.]

D. Rleinschreibung und Zusammenziehung.

(Small Initials [instead of Capitals] and Contractions.)

USE SMALL INITIALS:-

- 1. With Nouns used as Prepositions, Conjunctions, Indefinite Numerals, and Adverbs, as in: angesichts (in the face of); insolge (in consequence of); behuss (on behalf of);—falls (in case of);—ein bischen (a bit, a little); ein paar (a few, some, some few);—ansangs (in the beginning); teils (partly); einesteils (on the one part or hand); anternteils (on the other part or hand); meinerseits (on my part); morgens (in the morning); abends (in the evening); vormittags (in the fore-noon) [but: bes Morgens, bes Abends, hente Machmittag, etc., Sountags, Montags, etc.]; überhaupt (in general, altogether, moreover); unterwegs (on the avay); hentzutage (nouv-a-days); beizeiten (in time, betimes); bisweilen (at times); einmal (once); zweinal (twice); bergans (uphill); topsüber (bead over beels), etc.
- 2. With Nouns used in Verbal-Combinations, in which, by the by, they are strongly accented, and treated as separable particles, i.e. are separated from the verb and placed at the end of the clause when used in a principal sentence and in a simple tense. Such Verbal-Combinations are:—re'th haven

(to be right); u'nrecht haben (to be avrong); lei'd thun (to be sorry); we'h thun (to burt) :- jou'ld haben or fein (to be in fault) ;- fei'nd fein (to be bostile); mir ift a'uast, wo'hl (I am afraid, well); mir ist no't (it is necessary to me, I require); mir ift we'he (I am grieved); das ift scha'de (that is a pity); ich bin wi'llens (I have a mind, I intend) ;-fa'ttfinden, fa'tthaben (to take place); wa'hrnehmen (to perceive); tei'(nehmen (to take part in, to sympathise with); ii'berhandnehmen (to increase); han'shalten (to keep house, to manage); a'chtgeben (to pay attention); prei'sgeben (to abandon, to expose); bra'ch(iegen (to lie fallow); zusta'tten fommen (to be of use, to come in usefully); insta'nd setzen (to repair, to restore); zusta'nde fommen (to accomplish); imsti'd lassen (to leave in the lurch), etc .- Er halt hans; es ift mir guftatten gekommen; es hat überhandgenommen; es ift mir guteil geworben. But: Er bat feinen Teil an mir, etc.

3. With Pronouns and Numerals, as:-jemand, niemand, jeber, feiner, einer, ber eine, ber andere, man ;-etliche (some), einige, einzelne, manche, viele, alle, alles, etwas, nichts, beibe ;- bie (alle) andern, bas (alles) andre, bie (alle) übrigen, bas (alles) übrige, bas meifte, ber (bas) nämliche, ber erfte, ber letzte, ber zweite, ber nachfte, ber erfte beste, ein jeglicher, etc.

But: - Use Capital Initials (as before): -

- (a) with Ordinal Numerals and Adjectives preceded by the definite article and used in apposition to a proper noun, as: Friedrich ber 3meite : Rarl ber Große, etc.
- (b) With Pronouns and Adjectives in titles, as :- Se. Majestat ber Ronig; das Raiserliche Bollamt (the Imperial Custom-House); ber Wirkliche Geheimrat von Sumboldt (the Privy Councillor von Humboldt).
- (c) With Pronouns used in addressing persons, more especially in letters, as :- Sie genießen mein volles Bertrauen; wir glauben Ihnen alles; bas hans Ihrer Eltern war mir ftets geöffnet; ich will Dir bald mehr bavon ergablen; stets bleibe ich Dein Dich liebender Cohn Beinrich, etc.
- 4. In Adjectival and Adverbial Clauses, as :- groß und flein (grown up people and children); arm und reich (poor and rich people); alt und jung, burch bist und bunn ;—am besten, fürs erste, bei weitem (by far); aufs bentlichste, im allgemeinen, im gangen, im folgenden, im wesentlichen (essentially, in all essential points); von nenem, por furgem, im vorans (beforekand); von vorne, ohne weiteres, um ein beträchtliches, etc .- and also in idiomatic phrases, such as :- Er zieht ben fürzern dabei (he is the loser by it); ich will Ihnen Ihre Unarten zugnte halten (I will bear with your rudeness; I will excuse your incivilities); ber Innge hat Gie gum besten (the boy amuses himself at your expense); ich will es Ihnen guliebe thun (I will do it to please you), etc.

E. Zerlegung der Mörter in Gilben.

(Division of Words into Syllables.)

1. When part of a German word has to be separated from the rest in order to be carried on to the next line, the division into Syllables is made as we would naturally deliver them whilst pronouncing the word very slowly and distinctly. The compound letters: ch, cf, dt, pf, ph, sch, sp, st, sp, th, and tz, should, as a rule, not be separated. [For exceptions see § 2 of this chapter.] Examples:—ruchen, diecser, Sonone, Mutster, Mitstag, denonch, Flüsser, Wetsterzglaß, fünsete, Anster, Wechssel, hosffonung, hosffonungen, Finsger, Langssamsteit,—Brüsche, hascken, Stäsdte, klospsen, Orsthosgrasphie, lösschen, aussspreschen, lässtig, schiersen, Losthar, krastzen, herre.

2. The syllables forming the constituent parts of Compound Words should not be broken up, and the principal rule, as expressed above, cannot always be applied to them. Examples: hinsein, hiersauf, hersein, darsum, warsum, vorsaus, vollsensden, Justersefsfe, Mistrosffop, Atsmossphäste, Schiffssahrt*, Schwimmsmeisster*, gesmutslich, Disspens, disspustieren, Disspossistion, besobsachsten, außersskehen, Ge-burte-tag, Früh-linge-tag.

* But write 'Schiffahrt' and 'Schwimmeister' when no separation takes place.

F. Der Apostroph. (The Apostrophe.)

- 1. The Apostrophe is more especially used for indicating the suppression of certain letters in poetry and in the language of every-day life, as in English. Examples: Ich lieb' dich; Steh' auf! Wie geht's? So ist 's recht; Geld hab' ich nicht.
- 2. Contractions of prepositions and articles are used without the Apostrophe, as: am, beim, unterm, ans, ins, jum.
- 3. The Apostrophe is abolished before the inflections indicating the Genitive relation of proper names, as: Ciceros Briefe; Schillers Gedichte; Homers Ilias; Fritzens Geburtstag; Hamburgs Handel; Sophiens Mutter; die Einwohner Breslaus.
- 4. Family names, however, terminating in $ or 3, the genitive of which cannot be formed by adding $, require an Apostrophe to be placed after them for indicating the Genitive relation, as: Demosssheres' Reben; Bob' Luise.

LANGE'S GERMAN COURSE

CONSISTS OF THE FOLLOWING WORKS :--

THIRD EDITION, with the German spelling revised to meet the requirements of the German Government Regulations of 1880.

THE GERMANS AT HOME; A Practical Introduction to German Conversation, with an Appendix, containing the Essentials of German Grammar, and a Synopsis of the changes the German spelling has undergone through the Government Regulations of 1880.

Price 2s. 6d.

SECOND EDITION, carefully revised.

THE GERMAN MANUAL; A German Grammar, A Reading-book, and A Handbook of Conversation in German. Price 7s. 6d.

'The German Manual' is intended to follow 'The Germans At Home,' It contains, besides a complete Grammar, a series of interesting anecdotes, stories, fables, letters, and conversations arranged in progressive order, and finishes with a German Play, and Franz Hoffman's well written and highly interesting story of 'BEETHOVEN,' especially adapted for this work. It offers great advantages for self-instruction, and will be very useful to persons who, having a certain knowledge of German, desire to obtain fluency in speaking and writing the language.

- A GRAMMAR OF THE GERMAN LANGUAGE, in two Parts. Part I, Accidence; Part II, Syntax. With an Appendix, comprehending:-

I. The Declension of German Nouns. | IV. The Use and Signification of the Auxiliary Verbs of Mood.

II. Essentials of Construction. III. Essentials of Word-building.

V. On Punctuation. [Price 3s. 6d.

The 'Grammar' forms the first part of the 'German Manual' and, in this separate form, is intended for the use of students who wish to make themselves acquainted with German Grammar chiefly for the purpose of being able to read German books. It is divided into paragraphs, and will commend itself as a text-book to the notice of teachers who, in pursuing the study of German Literature with their pupils, require a Grammar in a concise form for reference and study.

THIRD EDITION, with the German spelling revised to meet the requirements of the German Government Regulations of 1880.

GERMAN COMPOSITION; A Theoretical and Practical Guide to the art of Translating English Prose into German; with an Appendix containing, among other matters, a Synopsis of the changes the German spelling has undergone through the Government Regulations of 1880. Price 4s. 6d.

[A Key to the above, price 5s.]

The book has been arranged so that it may be used with advantage by students who do not possess the author's other works.

SYNOPSIS OF THE CHANGES THE GERMAN SPELLING HAS UNDER-GONE THROUGH THE GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS OF 1880; a concise and easy Guide for English students of German desirous of adopting the new official German spelling. Reprinted from 'German Composition.'

[Price 6d.

[Any one of the preceding books, being complete in itself, may be used independently of any other book in the Series, according to the requirements of the student.]

EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS ON H. LANGE'S GERMAN COURSE.

'The works bear evidence of remarkable painstaking, great teaching power, and a thorough understanding of the art of teaching.—Dr. Karl Dammann, Lecturer on the German Language and Literature at the Mason Science College, Queen's College, and the Midland Institute, Birmingham.

'The Germans at Home.'

'The author is a practical teacher, and we are glad to recommend his work as likely to reduce, as far as possible, the inevitable difficulties to be encountered in the first study of a foreign language. Happy boys and girls of the present day, if they only knew their own blessings!'

Journal of Education.

"The Germans at Home" consists of forty conversations, intended to illustrate one day out of the life of a German family at home, as its name implies. The result is a decided improvement upon the run of books of this class. The interest of the student is sustained throughout, and everything is done in fact, which can be done to create a royal road to a knowledge of German."

Manchester Courier.

"The Germans at Home" is an excellent book, and is likely to be extensively used."

Schoolmaster.

"The traits called "new" in this Course are thus defined by the author. "First the Facts, and then the Theory, the Laws and the Inferences." "The Germans at Home" (printed in Roman characters) contains forty conversations, all connected, so as "to illustrate one day out of the life of a German family at home." The themes are German, the idioms are modern, and the "variations" that follow the conversations seem likely to be useful.'

Athenxum.

'A Grammar of the German Language.'

'The author has obviously studied to make as clear as possible the arrangement of his materials, and the printer has aided that endeavour.'

Athenaum.

^{&#}x27;The Grammar is a good one,'

'The Germans at Home' and 'The German Manual.'

Instead of wearying the unhappy student with learning a lot of dry and elaborate technicalities of accidence and syntax at the outset, Mr. Lange starts him with conversations—forty in number, each illustrative of one day out of the life of a German family at home—and very soon lands him "in medias res" by the aid of interlinear translation, by the means of which he can gain a knowledge of the idioms and peculiarities of structure of the language, while he is at the same time acquiring a knowledge of the theory of the language, i.e. of its accidence and syntax. Thus we get in Mr. Lange's system the facts first, and then proceed to the theory, laws, and inferences—first the life and spirit, then the form and body in which they are clothed. Only those who have themselves learnt and taught (or tried to learn and teach) German, can thoroughly appreciate the advantages of this plan, which avails itself of the two leading principles which underlie all learning, and ought to form the basis of all teaching, viz. the principles of imitation and of variation. When we remember the long and weary hours spent by ourselves in learning German, we envy Mr. Lange's pupils, and those who have the chance of using his books.' Manchester Critic.

'Mr. Lange's "German Course" is thoroughly trustworthy and useful."

Glasgow News.

'Herr Lange has worked out his principle most successfully.'

Edinburgh Daily Review.

'The German Manual.'

This is a very elaborate work. It contains an amount of matter unusually great, and of unquestionable excellence. If not multum in parvo, it is at least multum in uno. The bigness of the book is largely due to the fact that the author has amalgamated with this volume the entire grammar, which is also published in a separate form. The grammar is a good one; but the special feature of the "German Manual" consists in its comprehensiveness, which will be apparent from the following summary of its contents:-Part I. Accidence. Part II. Syntax. Part III. Interlinear Translation. Part IV. German for Translation into English. Part V. Notes and Helpful Hints. Part VI. English Version of Part IV. for Re-translation. By an ingenious system of adaptation, the six parts are to be proceeded with simultaneously. Thus every part throwing light upon the rest, and the student having to deal with the same passages over and over again, the process of mental assimilation is likely to be rendered more real and rapid. When we add that the book contains a humorous comedy and an excellent life of Beethoven, our readers will acknowledge that Herr Lange has provided that variety which is proverbially charming. From the conspicuous absence of the namby-pamby element—unfortunately too common in translation exercises—as well as from the general excellence of the work, it may be confidently recommended, especially for the use of adult students.'

Schoolmaster.

'Herr Lange's method is excellent for simplicity and clearness.'

Saturday Review.

'German Composition.'

'Having used H. Lange's Composition for about a couple of years with my advanced pupils, I am in a position to state that it has more than answered the very favourable expectations I had formed on a first perusal of the work. To my mind its chief recommendations are:—

1st. It may safely be put into the hands of learners at an earlier stage than most works of this class.

2nd. The judicious manner in which the exercises have been graduated, and the careful elucidation of all grammatical difficulties.

3rd. The admirable rendering of English idioms into their German equivalents.'—JOHN J. T. JACKSON, Lecturer on Modern Languages and Philology at the Lancashire Independent College, and the Wesleyan College, Didsbury.

'After a very careful perusal of "Hermann Lange's German Composition," I have no hesitation to say that it seems to me to be the best book of that kind,—not only with regard to the choice of good extracts from modern English authors, but also in respect to the thoroughness and correctness of the Notes. I shall find it exceedingly useful with my pupils for the Army and Civil Service Examinations.'—Theodore H. Dittel, London, Tutor to Students preparing for the Army and Civil Service Examinations.

'I prefer the book to all others on German Composition.'—ERNEST R. MORGAN, London.

'We begin with simple stories of two or three sentences each, and so fully annotated that they may be read off into German by a pupil who knows his first accidence, and ascend by easy gradients to Sir Walter Scott and Macaulay.

It is throughout a careful, accurate, and scholarly piece of work.'
